CAPTURE BANDIT AFTER SIEGE

SENATOR DEFIES DRYS; GIVES HIS BOOZE PARTY

Invites 'Em to Drink; Refuses Samples.

BY ORVILLE DWYER.

Milwaukee, Wis., April 18.—[Special.]—State Senator Bernard Gettelman's private little hard cider rebellion, staged at his modest home on 26th street here tonight, was a pronounced success.

SENATOR GETTELMAN.

The senator put on the party he has threatened to stage. He invited a dozen of his friends and their wives, and despite a driving rainstorm all came. He served sacramental wine with a 22 per cent kick and hard cider with a wallop of some 5 or 6 acute per cent lent wassail to the occasion.

Dry raiders under the personal leadership of John B. Madden, chief federal enforcement officer of Wisconsin, paid a visit to the senator's bungalow hours before the party started at 8 in the evening. They did not get inside because they wanted to carry away the drinks to test instead of drinking them on the spot, as the senator invited them to do.

Pastor Doesn't Appear.

And the Rev. G. Kenneth MacInnes, pastor of the Trinity Methodist church of Milwaukee, an ardent dry and an equally ardent adversary of Senator Gettelman, failed to appear for the party, as he had threatened to do when the solon, who says he is taking his course of action "for the sake of the workingman," invited him.

"I may go there," Dr. MacInnes told newspaper men here earlier in the day. "If I do," he added, with a significant [illegible] in his eye—"if I do, it will be to [illegible] the evidence and bring it away [illegible]."

[illegible] Senator Gettelman did not agree [illegible] this program of Dr. MacInnes at [illegible].

"[illegible] he had come, he would have had [illegible] or two as sure as you're born," [illegible] Gettelman said while the party [illegible] in full swing last night. And the [illegible] was plain that among those [illegible] were several who would have [illegible] glad to extend such a hospitality [illegible] the minister.

Asks for Sample.

[illegible] Madden, the enforcement chief, [illegible] his men—three of them—appeared [illegible] the senator's home late in the afternoon. Mr. Madden rang the bell. Mrs. Gettelman came to the door. The officer explained who he was. He told Mrs. Gettelman he was after a sample of the wine and cider the senator was [illegible] to have.

"My husband forbids me to let you [illegible]," Mrs. Gettelman, a pleasant faced [illegible] woman, said. "I can call him [illegible] phone and get him here shortly if [illegible] wish."

The dry agents wished. Mrs. Gettelman went to the phone and soon the [illegible] appeared.

The Rivals Meet.

"How do you do?" he said to the [illegible] of the government; "I'm Gettelman."

"[illegible] Madden," said the officer.

[illegible] senator looked surprised.

"Well," he finally said, "you're a [illegible]."

"[illegible] say the same for you," said [illegible].

[illegible] was palaver. Madden wanted [illegible] away a sample.

"[illegible] on your life," said Gettelman. "[illegible] that I'm afraid of it—my con[illegible] is that I'm within the law, ac[illegible] to the amendment known as [illegible] of the Volstead act. But [illegible] a man is my guest he drinks it [illegible] premises. Would you like to [illegible] and have a drink?"

"[illegible] have you got?" inquired the [illegible] with a smile.

"[illegible] with a good kick and some [illegible] high powered sacramental [illegible]," the senator replied. "Come in."

"[illegible]," said Madden, "I'd have to [illegible] away with me."

No Search Warrant.

"[illegible] right," said Senator Gettelman, "[illegible] you haven't got a search warrant."

The dry raider replied that he had [illegible] the senator then said:

"[illegible] I'm sorry, but I haven't got [illegible] for you and I'll have to ask [illegible] out."

[illegible] Madden said in the evening he [illegible] made the visit to the Gettel[illegible] because dry agents said [illegible]

MIDGET BANDIT, SLAYER, BANK ROBBER, CAUGHT

Trapped in Library; Hunted 4 Years.

A slender, quiet youth, scarcely more than five feet tall, browsing over a book in the John Crerar library at Randolph street and Michigan boulevard yesterday afternoon, was surrounded by five detectives and arrested.

Ten minutes later, the news was ringing through police circles that the four years' search for Henry J. Fernekes, 29 years old, probably the most daring and sensational bank bandit in the history of Chicago, was ended.

Fernekes, whose crime career began when he was 18 years old, as he declared he hated to face his 16 year old wife with a $10 weekly pay check, was identified last night as the leader of a gang which has held up nearly a score of Chicago banks and siezed a half million dollars.

Wanted as Killer, Too.

In addition Fernekes is wanted in Pennsylvania for the murder of two state policemen in 1921, and, for the killing in the same year, of two bank cashiers in Pearl River, N. Y.

Fernekes' startling depredations rivaled in daring those of Gerald Chapman, robber king convicted and sentenced to the gallows a few days ago for the killing of a policeman in Bridgeport, Conn.

The tale of the boy bandit's life, of the four year search for him, of the dozens of times he slipped through their fingers in an uncanny manner, of the astounding and daring manner in which he carried off his exploits, of his final capture, is rife with dramatic incidents that would put the most imaginative movie writers to shame.

And Fernekes last night, showing the coolness born of eleven years' experience in crime, presented a calm front to the men who had trailed him. His only words were, "Get Clarence Darrow. He'll get me out of here by Monday."

Banks He Has Robbed.

Following is a list of the banks robbed by Fernekes. He has been positively identified as the leader of the robbers in each instance. All the holdups occurred within the last eighteen months.

The Prairie State bank.

The West Madison and 60th Street bank.

The Milwaukee and Irving Park Boulevard bank.

The Inland State bank.

The Parkway State bank, 2230 North Clark street.

The West City State bank.

The Fullerton Avenue and North Cicero Avenue bank.

The Roseland State bank, 47th and South Robey streets (now merged with the Universal State bank).

The Berwyn State bank, Berwyn, Ill.

The Brookfield State bank.

The Bank of Niles, Niles, Ill.

The West Irving State bank, 4039 Irving Park boulevard.

The Papineck & Cuvad State bank, 836 Milwaukee avenue.

The Bryn Mawr State bank, 2110 East 71st street.

Arrested for First Holdup.

Fernekes first came to the attention of the police in 1914. Then a boy of 18, he entered an office in a loop skyscraper, waved two huge revolvers, and held up the place. He got $45, but was arrested. He said he had chosen banditry as a profession.

"I've just got married," he said. "And I can't support my wife on $10 a week. There was only one thing to do."

His wife was Lulu Woodward, 16, who divorced him a year later. Fernekes went to Pontiac to serve two years.

That first robbery seems to have charted the course of his life. His tactics in future robberies, which were to startle the country, were always the same as in that boyish escapade. He was a two gun man; he robbed in broad daylight; and he never wore a mask.

Freed from Prison in 1918.

Fernekes was released from Pontiac in 1918. Soon afterward police became aware that a youth had become one of the country's most daring criminals.

When he shot and killed four men in the east in 1921, Chicago police determined to get him. Since then a special squad has been constantly on Fernekes' trail. They followed scores of tips. Many times they arrived at designated places to find their quarry gone but a few minutes before.

The "Fernekes detail" began to be something to be avoided. There was no chance to get the elusive midget, the boy bandit, who weighed 130

3 Policemen Shot In Three Hour Battle

A notorious gunman, supplied with plenty of ammunition, barricaded himself in a flat on the fourth floor of a pretentious apartment building at 2124 North Kedzie avenue last night and for three hours withstood the furious attack of an army of 200 policemen, who stormed the apartment with rifles, revolvers, and tear bombs. At 1 o'clock the gunman, Peter Podolski, alias Peter Molyn, surrendered.

Three policemen were seriously wounded by bullets from the besieged man's revolver. He himself, despite the rain of fire directed upon him, was only slightly wounded in the left arm. The injured are:

Sergt. Peter B. Kennelly, 3700 North Keeler avenue; shot in the neck.

Patrolman David J. Fitzpatrick, 3739 Iowa avenue; shot in the leg.

Sergt. James Cunningham, 6503 Cottage Grove avenue, chauffeur for Capt. John Stege of the detective bureau; shot in the abdomen and leg.

Crowds Watch Battle.

The neighborhood in which the battle was waged is composed of high class apartment buildings. Podolski took up his station in an empty apartment on the fourth floor of the building, which contains fifty suites.

While police reserves were rushed to the surrounded flat, news of the siege spread like wildfire throughout the district. Residents of nearby apartment buildings hurried to the scene of the attack. People who had retired got up, dressed, and ran to the besieged building.

Within half an hour after the battle to capture Podolski had begun, a thousand persons were lining the avenue, and the crowd continued to increase as the hours wore on. Whole families came out to see the attack. Women and children were as numerous as men.

Throng in Peril of Bullets.

So great was the multitude of onlookers that police found it impossible to keep even a semblance of a "danger zone." Crowding, surging toward the besieged flat, the spectators fought their way to what they considered points of vantage.

All through the crowd surged policemen carrying rifles, riot guns, and regulation shotguns. There was enough artillery on display to equip a company of United States regulars.

The attackers, under the leadership of Chief of Police Morgan Collins, Capt. Stege, and Acting Captain James L. Doherty of the Shakespeare station, fired from behind automobiles, from neighboring flats, from doorways. Tear bombs were tossed into the apartment.

Had Been Watching Bandit.

Kennelly, who is head of the Shakespeare station's plain clothes detail, had been watching for Podolski for some time. It was Podolski, the police believed, who shot Policeman Michael Hickey of the North avenue station on March 21 after a battle similar to last night's. At that time the man was in a house at 1644 North Keenan avenue. He escaped by leaping from a window.

For the last several days Sergt. Kennelly had had the apartment building on Kedzie avenue under watch. He saw the man believed to be Podolski go out, then return somewhat mysteriously shortly after 9 o'clock.

With a half dozen policemen to watch the exits, Sergt. Kennelly and Policeman Fitzgerald mounted to the front door of the flat. A pair of shots through the door answered their summons to come out, and the policemen fell. Then the reserves were called and the battle began.

Pours Bullets Into Police.

When fumes from the bombs filled the apartment Podolski opened the windows. He appeared in the doorway and poured a hail of fire from his Luger automatic on to the policeman below.

Sergt. Cunningham, with two others, attempted an attack from the rear. They crept into the hallway and climbed the stairs. Podolski heard

PAUL REVERE'S LAMPS GLEAM AGAIN AS OF OLD

Dawes Takes Part in Thrilling Scene.

BY JAMES O'DONNELL BENNETT.

Boston, Mass. April 18.—[Special.]—Out, far out and bravely, shone the lantern lights tonight from the spire of Old North church.

CHARLES G. DAWES.

But the people in the streets below saw them dimly for the happy tears that filled their eyes.

Within the building sat notables of the land—the Vice President of the United States, the governors of all the New England states, two bishops of the old church, which was the church by law established in the days of our forefathers and to whom the lantern lights carried a message of warning and a call to duty.

Century and a Half Ago.

One hundred and fifty years ago tonight young Robert Newman, sexton of this Christ Church which now is known to every American school boy as "the old North church," hung out the lanterns as a signal to Paul Revere, the silversmith who was waiting on the Charlestown shore, that the British troops were starting by water to destroy the precious munitions of war which the patriot colonists had assembled at Concord.

You remember how Revere's instruction to the sexton runs in the ballad:

> If the British march from the town tonight,
> Hang a lantern aloft in the belfry arch
> Of the North Church tower as a signal light;
> One if by land and two if by sea,
> And I on the opposite shore will be,
> Ready to ride and spread the alarm
> Through every Middlesex village and farm.

Living Links to the Past.

And so it was.

And that is the event they commemorated with song and prayer and with speeches by Mrs. Nathaniel Thayer of Boston, great-granddaughter of Paul Revere, and by Vice President Dawes, great-great-grandson of William Dawes, who rode on the night of April 18, 1775, by another route in case Revere were captured or killed by the British soldiers on his route.

And after the songs and the prayers came the most touching and thrilling moment of all, and that was when young Paul Revere of Boston, great-great-grandson of Paul the silversmith, reverently lifted the lighted lanterns —fabricated in the old manner and copies as near as may be of the original lanterns—from a standard on which they hung before the altar and bore them aloft to the belfry arch.

Scene Thrills Every Spectator.

A moment so touching and so thrilling, it seemed to me, that I think no American can quite come into a full consciousness of what the republic means until he has sat through this sacrament of the lanterns, which they annually observe at Christ Church on the night of April 18.

Trumpet music rang out from the choir loft of the church as young Paul Revere bore the lanterns from their place in front of the altar, and the organ thundered, and all the people in the quaint high backed pews rose and sang with one voice "America," a song which, the rector had gently pointed out to them, was written by the good Dr. Smith, who once lived hard by the church.

When, half a century ago they observed the 100th anniversary of the Revere-Dawes rides at Christ church, Dr. Smith was present and read an anniversary poem.

Dawes' Plea to Nation.

While the lanterns glimmered before the altar tonight, Gen. Dawes mounted the pulpit stairs and took his place beneath the wide sounding board and made an impassioned plea for development of the national character—the safeguarding of what was good and right in it, the stripping away of what was false and shallow.

With his characteristic vehemence he hit the pulpit rail a resounding whack and bit off these words:

"The greatest question before the American people today is 'What of our character?' For it is this, and this alone that counts in the long run."

He pled for sharper self-denial in the nations life, for cleanliness of mind, for subordination of the individual will to the general good.

"Those lanterns," the Vice President said, "which they hung out 150 years ago were beacon lights to a people. To us they still are beacon lights, and

PORTUGAL TORN BY ARMY REVOLT

Many Reported Dead in Street Battles.

LISBON, April 18.—[By the Associated Press.]—A revolutionary outbreak with the object of overthrowing the government began this morning, and hand to hand fighting ensued at various points in Lisbon. Grenades were thrown and many persons are believed to have been killed or wounded.

The president of the republic, Teixeira Gomes, and the members of the cabinet sought refuge in one of the city barracks.

The movement was led by Maj. Filomeno Camara, and the military of all arms participated in the revolt. Eventually loyal troops rallied to the aid of the president and government and surrounded the Paco da Rotondo where the mutineers had gathered.

At this place there was considerable fighting, but eventually the loyal troops got the upper hand.

GRAVE CRISIS SHOWN

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1925: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, April 18. — Messages reaching London from Lisbon tonight indicate the gravest political crisis in Portugal with a good deal of violence apparently developing. An ironbound censorship prevents the real story of the hectic Portuguese domestic troubles from getting their proper corroboration.

THE TRIBUNE'S Lisbon correspondent wired a message in which were a number of significant statements, tending to corroborate the news of a budding Portuguese revolution. In view of the fact that the Portuguese government has laid down one of the most strict censorships ever imposed, the following cable from Lisbon seems to carry confirmation of earlier reports:

"LISBON, April 18.—The commanders of the national republican guard were summoned to appear before the president of the nation this morning to prepare plans for safeguarding public life and property and to avoid clashes between factions."

Red Revolt, Spain Says.

According to a dispatch from Madrid, a communist revolution, led and plotted by Moscow agents, has broken out in several towns in Portugal. Fighting is said to have occurred in various places, including the streets of Lisbon, where groups known as "the red legion" attacked a prominent club, shooting the doorman and forcing an entrance. However, they met with armed resistance, the porter of the club shooting the leader.

Real estate news will be found on pages 17 and 18, part 2.

GIRL LEARNS OF FIANCE'S DEATH AT NUPTIAL HOUR

Miss Mamie Broaker of Franklin Park was to have been married at noon yesterday to Walter Piske, 25 years old, of the same suburb. While the wedding party waited for the bridegroom word came that he had been found dead, his body hanging to a tree in the forest preserve near Schiller Park. Miss Broaker collapsed.

Piske had been dead for thirty hours. It was at first believed that he might have been murdered, but Lieut. Lester Laird of the highway police later was inclined to believe that Piske had committed suicide. A coroner's physician will make a post mortem examination today to determine the exact cause of death.

Piske was last seen alive Thursday night when he left his home. Arrangements for the wedding were then being made. It was said the girl's parents did not approve of the marriage.

Their red rockets attracted the attention of the Jackson park coast guard. A crew towed the yacht to the Jackson park lagoon.

TERRIFIC STORM SWEEPS PEORIA

Two Men Killed; Property Loss Heavy.

Peoria, Ill., April 19.—[Special.]—One of the worst storms Peoria has ever experienced struck the city shortly after 4 o'clock this morning. One costly building was destroyed, hundreds of homes were unroofed and otherwise damaged, and wire communication was practically paralyzed. Two men are known to be dead, and several others are reported injured.

The terrific wind was accompanied by an electrical, rain and hail storm. The Isaac Walker Hardware company's structure on Washington street is a total loss. Almost as soon as the storm broke its walls caved in and part of it tumbled over on a garage adjoining. The wreckage was struck by lightning and the ensuing fire destroyed the entire structure.

Explosion Spreads Flame.

Explosives kept in the building were ignited and spread the flames so rapidly that the fire department was powerless. The loss on this structure alone is $500,000.

George Wonder, a watchman in the Walker building, was killed when it collapsed. Another watchman known only as "Frank" was asleep in the garage and he was killed by the falling walls.

Carnival Is Wrecked.

The storm swept along the river front, wrecking dozens of buildings. The Brundage Carnival shows, which opened here last night, were totally wrecked, many of the tents and exhibits being blown far from the site of the shows.

Throughout the business section plate glass windows were blown out and roofs torn off. The total loss is estimated at $1,500,000. Storms are also reported at Kewanee and Pekin, Ill.

STORM DUE ON LAKE TODAY; RAIN FORECAST

Warnings of a thirty mile gale accompanied by rain and thunderstorm were ordered hoisted last night on Lake Michigan by the local weather bureau. The storm, officials said, had reached southeastern Iowa and was scheduled to arrive in the vicinity of Chicago before midnight tonight.

In the southern part of the Lake Michigan area the warnings forecast a southeast wind. North of Kenosha and Grand Haven the signals were for a northeaster.

The storm warnings were supplementary to the regular forecast for Chicago and vicinity, which predicted showers and thunderstorms and warmer weather for today, with cooler and fairer weather tomorrow.

with them shines the beacon light of the old New England character. We can profitably take example from it, the more so as we are still a young people and our character as a people still is forming."

He emphasized the significance of the presence in the church of the widely beloved and noble Mrs. Thayer, saying: "That she is with us tonight, this great granddaughter of noble Revere, is one more proof that with the family as with the nation, continued prestige, continued usefulness, are due to adherence to high ideals."

"Guard the Constitution."

He pled for ordered freedom, declaring that what has destroyed freedom and democracy in the past has been the surrender to a temporary phase of public opinion as distinguished from solid, sober thought of the people.

"Our constitution," he cried, and again the pulpit rail caught it hot and heavy—"our constitution has established the rule of the pople as distinguished from the rule of the mob. Guard the constitution. Guard the courts. They are our beacon lights today."

Then came the clashing and clanging of the chimes far above our heads, and the trumpet music and the bearing aloft of the lanterns and the shining out to town and harbor of their light—and I tell you that then the hundreds of Italian boys and girls swarming in the church yard and the streets—for this is now a foreign quarter—went nearly crazy with excitement.

For they knew what it was all about—none better.

As Mrs. Thayer, who has worked and taught among them, said, "They don't want you to tell them about Paul Revere; they want to tell you."

Opens Attack on Senators.

Earlier in the day at a banquet given by the Boston chamber of commerce, Gen. Dawes launched a heavy attack on the rules of the United States senate.

Then he reached over from his place at the high banquet table in the new palace of the Boston chamber of commerce on historic Milk street, and he hauled a United States senator to his feet—ponderous William Morgan Butler, Henry Cabot Lodge's successor in the senate—and he made him pledge himself up to the hilt to some of the most important men in Massachusetts that he would work for a reform of the senate's rules.

The gist of Gen. Dawes' speech was that all he said about the senate on the day he was inaugurated Vice President now goes double, and that he is going to keep on saying it.

He delivered the whole speech in his usual strident shout but, even so, his delivery and his gestures were less excessive than on the March day he sent the cold chills up the senatorial spine.

In fact, he began today with what—for him—was an apology for his almost frantic vehemence on March 4.

"I want to add," said he to the solid men, "to what I said at Washington, that it was the way I said it, not what I said, that made all the trouble. But my grief at that is somewhat assuaged by the thought expressed by George Bernard Shaw that 'no offensive truth is properly presented unless it causes irritation.'"

Big Men Cheer General.

Cheers and laughter for that and from that instant he had the solid men—the governor of Massachusetts, the mayor of Boston and the hundreds of merchants and bankers and manufacturers and ship owners—in the hollow of his hand.

Rising, he said: "I don't claim anything as an orator or a singer, but I insist on my ability as a smoker—a smoker out."

That brought the first yell.

"Reform of senate rules involves some of the principles for which our ancestors fought. Did they have in their minds any idea that any one of ninety-six senators could exercise a veto power greater than that of the President of the United States?

"Did they have any idea, that when laws might have the concurrent action of two houses, and, again, the confirmation of the Supreme court—did they have any idea that in the hands of one senator there would ever be power to block that action and opportunity to use that power as barter in the matter of legislation in which a senator might be personally interested?

"That power has been built up on irresponsibility.

"That power has been built up not by law, not by the constitution, but by senate rules.

"Now, I want Senator Butler to know how you feel about it. As many of you as think it ought to be changed, get up!"

"Get up" came like a pistol shot.

They're All for Reform.

Every man in the big room leaped to his feet, shouting and waving napkins.

Senator Butler, the cotton spinning magnate, was among those standing.

Well, Dawes sat, resumed his pipe, and Butler, with some of the plaintiveness of a penitent coming to the mourner's bench, said:

"I do believe in the reform of the senate rules."

Now you cannot, reader, possibly measure what a triumph Butler's words were for Dawes unless you know what acute and shooting pains Dawes' nomination to the vice presidency in Cleveland last June gave William Morgan Butler. But so it was.

COUNCIL SPLIT OVER TERMINABLE CAR PLAN LOOMS

Ald. Crowe Approves Barr Measure.

TRACTION IMPASSE

1 In Miami, Fla., Ald. Dorsey Crowe, seeking chairmanship of committee on local transportation, espouses "terminable permits."

2 In Chicago council members declare Barr bill "wonderful for companies" and "a crime against Chicago."

BY WILLIAM LAWSON.

Miami, Fla., April 18.—[Special.]—Rivalry between Ald. Joseph B. McDonough [13th] and Ald. Dorsey Crowe [42d] for chairmanship of the local transportation committee of the Chicago city council took on a serious aspect today when both declared they will bolt the new council committee on committees if defeated for the post. The committee to form the standing committees began its sessions here yesterday.

ALD. DORSEY CROWE.
[Koehne Photo.]

Both professed to have learned a lesson from the defeat of the Dever traction ordinance, and the committee's first formal meeting this afternoon resulted in the outspoken declaration of Crowe that if chosen to head the transportation committee he will lead a demand upon the state legislature for enabling acts permitting indeterminate or terminable utility franchises.

Crowe's Plan Outlined.

Crowe's traction plan, which he declares must be accepted by the committee on committees if it names him as chairman of the transportation committee and which he also promises will be carried to the council for ultimate decision if he is ignored by the committee, provides for:

1. Immediate consolidation of existing transit facilities under private ownership.

2. Immediate construction of subways, to be leased to the existing lines for operation until a new plan of municipal purchase and operation acceptable to the voters can be developed.

Crowe released two more bombshells in the committee meeting this afternoon—demands that the north side districts be given representation on all council committees equal to that accorded the south or west sides, and that Ald. Arthur Albert [43d] and Ald. Oscar F. Nelson [46th], bitter opponents of the Dever traction ordinance, be given places on the transportation committee.

Claims North Side Slighted.

For years, Crowe insisted, the north side has been slighted, with only two or at the most three members on each of the major council committees, as compared to the six, seven, or eight memberships allotted to the south and west sides in each group.

Albert and Nelson, as spokesmen of the overwhelming majority against the Dever ordinance expressed in April 7th referendum, are entitled to an opportunity to aid in the framing of any traction problem solution which may be offered to the voters by the new city council, Crowe asserted.

With Ald. R. A. Woodhull [7th] supporting Crowe for the transportation committee chairmanship and Ald. D. A. Horan [21st] leaning toward McDonough, the organization committee is deadlocked, Ald. E. J. Kaindl [34th] holding, for the time being at least, the deciding vote. Crowe, however, it is expected, will be traded out of his stand for more north side committee members before the slate makers complete their work.

"The April 7th election revealed that the people do not want any traction scheme based on the Schwartz certificate plan," declared Crowe. "Or perhaps it was the valuation of the properties that frightened them. At any rate the majority against the ordinance forces us to look elsewhere for a solution."

"CRIME AGAINST CHICAGO"

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

A wonderful bill for the companies and a crime against Chicago were the favorite aldermanic expressions yesterday against the Barr bill, which would inaugurate the "terminable permit" for public utilities in Illinois. The aldermen became vigorous in their prostestations, but apparently have not decided upon a definite line of action, except to protest against the bill's passage.

That alone will probably shove the city officials and followers into an awkward position before the general assembly because legislators are almost certain to ask what will be done to get better and more transportation in Chicago if the Barr bill is killed. The companies on the other hand are playing a much more clever game.

Franchises Too Short.

The companies have contended that the chief obstacle to better facilities is the impracticability of borrowing money on a franchise limited to twenty years. The bankers have made the same claim. No responsible person has disputed it. The city itself officially accepted that opinion when it proposed a plan to finance in the defeated Dever ordinance on the basis of forty years.

The city has not asked this legislature for authority to grant a franchise for more than 20 years. It has not asked for any broader powers to obtain municipal ownership and it has announced no program which it will attempt to put into effect in order to obtain adequate transportation.

One of the bankers has said that he would advise against acceptance of a twenty year franchise, if it is tendered to the surface lines. The public shelved the trustee plan of 1918 and snowed under the Dever M. O. plan of 1925 on referendums.

Protest Not Enough.

Undoubtedly legislative proponents of the Barr plan will shoot this sort of information at any opponents who appear. A mere protest against the bill may not be effective with the state legislators, who want to vote for the Barr bill.

It would not be surprising if a spokesman for Gov. Small should announce that the executive has given Illinois the best concrete highway system of any state in the nation, now proposes to give it the best highway police system; and that if the Barr bill is passed, will give Chicago the best local transportation system.

The first two claims have already been made publicly, and have been satisfying to sundry downstate legislators. Therefore it seems highly advisable that Mayor Dever, former Mayor Dunne and other objectors to the Barr bill be equipped with more than a mere protest when they go to Springfield.

At any rate that is the view of one alderman who has a reputation for sanity. He said yesterday he will oppose the mere adoption of a resolution by the city council when it convenes in special session next Tuesday morning.

Alderman Opposes Resolutions.

"I assume we will have several resolutions offered," he went on. "I am opposed to adopting any of them on the spot. We should appoint a committee to consider all ideas thoroughly and meet again at 5 o'clock in the afternoon to take action. It is not at all certain that the companies will insist upon the Barr bill. They may be urging that bill to make the city ask the legislature for the power to grant a franchise of more than twenty years, which I think we should do, although I lack the courage to initiate that propasal.

"I would be lambasted as a traction servant for years, although one prominent opponent of the Dever ordinance said publicly that a fifty year franchise would be preferrable, despite the fact that the companies have never asked more than forty years.

"I sincerely believe that better and more transportation can be obtained by council control than by any other method. I desire that much more than the publicity which would follow a vigorous protest and nothing more to the legislature."

Ald. Fick's Opinion.

Among the aldermen who consented to be quoted was Henry Fick. He said: "The Barr bill is a wonderful bill for the companies, but the most outrageous thing that could happen to Chicago. The passage of the Barr bill will wipe out all hope of regaining home rule in Chicago. Then to think of former Gov. Dunne lining up with Mayor Dever to protest against this bill. He was the fellow elected to get home rule for Chicago, then switched to the other side."

"I am absolutely against the bill, against the man who signed it originally," said Ald. Bowler. "Dunne promised us home rule and then went back on his promise and signed the utilities bill which took home rule away from us. If the Barr bill passes the aldermen will have nothing to do except get muslin signs and barber poles for constituents and there will be some days when they will ask neither, so we won't be very busy."

Asked his opinion, Ald. O'Toole, who knows something about the saloon business in the old days, replied: "Bar bills are hard to collect."

Statements by Others.

"I'm against anything that takes home rule from Chicago," said Ald. Touhy.

"The Barr bill is vicious," added Ald. Arvey.

"No legislator should vote for the Barr bill, unless he is ready to retire," commented Ald. Mills.

"The Barr bill is an insult to the people of Chicago," said Ald. Al Horan.

"I'm against perpetual franchises," was the expression of Ald. Cronson.

"I strongly favor home rule," said Ald. Hoellen. Still others gave like expressions.

Woman Fears Asylum, So She Kills Herself

Fear of being sent to a sanitarium caused Miss Catherine Albert, 40, to shoot and kill herself in the basement of her home at 2303 Warren avenue yesterday. According to her father, M. M. Albert, she overheard a physician advise that she be sent to an asylum for the insane. She seized a revolver, went to the basement, and, before her family could reach her, had shot herself in the head, dying instantly.

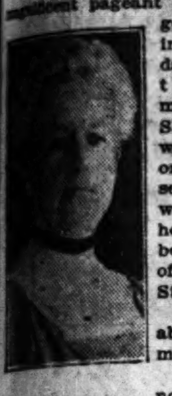
WORK OF WORLD'S WOMEN SHOWN AT CHICAGO FAIR

Display Wide Range of Their Activity.

BY GENEVIEVE FORBES HERRICK.



MRS. JOSEPH T. BOWEN.

When the Woman's World's fair, a magnificent pageant in the feminine gender, swung into action yesterday noon over at the Furniture mart, 666 Lake Shore drive, there was really only one man represented in the whole show, and he happened to be the President of the United States.

Besides, he was about a thousand miles away.

Shortly before noon, as they were seated in the White House study, Mrs. Calvin Coolidge pressed a button which flashed by telegraph the signal here in Chicago for the opening of the seven day fair. Then the President stepped to the microphone and in praiseful phrase commended the women of Illinois for being modern and progressive, and, with equal emphasis, for being the traditional economists in a world that needs economy.

Lauds Budget Plan.

"It appears that when this fair was first thought of," said Mr. Coolidge, "the capital behind consisted entirely of an idea. But having a sound conception of procedure, the ladies started by establishing a budget. As a strictly business proposition it was sold so effectively and wisely that when the doors are opened every dollar of expense will have been met and there will be a comfortable balance in the bank to guarantee a greater and more impressive fair next year.

"This financial accomplishment presents a striking contrast to the average project of like character, supported in easy fashion out of public funds.

"If the people in the daily management of their modest domestic affairs note that the great interests of their governments and of their semi-public institutions are dealt with in a spirit of laxity and a mood of carelessness they find little inspiration to apply better methods in the management of their own concerns.

Seeks Economy in Government.

"The great business operations which are constantly under the public eye ought to be handled so as to make them an example in sound business procedure. It is particularly true that government business should be placed on a basis of rigid economy."

Then, more personally, over the radio, came a tribute to the women who are responsible for two acres of booths, over at the fair, representing more than 100 professions and occupations which Eve has learned to do since that afternoon she ate the apple. The panorama of woman's work will, the President feels, broaden the outlook of women, intensify men's appreciation for the achievements of women, and help both men and women to understand, and, resultantly, to iron out some of the social problems of communities and worlds.

"And so," in conclusion, "I heartily approve the efforts of the women of the middle west who have undertaken a program of getting all kinds of people better acquainted. They have brought together under the wide roof of the American exhibition palace, a representation of all manner of activities and interests, with special reference to the part that women play."

And having made his speech, the pivot point of the entire fair, the one man directly connected with it withdrew, and the hundreds of women jumped into the picture, with hundreds of men, thronging the aisles as spectators.

And there was plenty to see.

There was Betty Turner Matthews, dressed as "Paulette" Revere, who dismounted in front of the building from the horse she had ridden through the loop, and rushed up to the platform to present to Mrs. Joseph T. Bowen, president of the board of directors, a message telling how far women had ridden since the good old days.

By her side, as she received the scroll, were the members of the board of directors of the fair: Miss Helen Bennett, the managing director and originator of the idea of the fair; Mrs. Howard Linn, Mrs. Frederick Rawson, Mrs. T. W. Robinson, Mrs. Edith Rockefeller McCormick, Mrs. Silas Strawn, and Mrs. George Dean.

At the Display Booths.

There was Miss Helen Paschal, the world's only woman prospector with her kit and her clays. There was a lady plumber and a lady cosmetician. There was Clara Laughlin, the lady who sells foreign travel; Ora Snyder, the lady who sells home-made candy. There was Mrs. Minna Schmidt, the costumer, rehearsing members of the Alliance of Business and Professional Women for their pageant of progress Thursday night, when they are cast for the rôles of history's famous women.

Mrs. Martin Stevers, THE TRIBUNE'S Sally Joy Brown, is hostess at THE TRIBUNE booth, where pictures of sixteen of their women department heads and writers are displayed, together with booklets telling of their work. Jane Eddington is scheuled to give a lecture on cookery. Antoinette Donnelly is coming from New York to talk about beauty. Maude Martin Ellis, the artist, will be the guest of honor one day. So will Miss Mary King, the Sunday editor.

Monday has been set aside as stage womans' special day, Tuesday is cooks' day, Wednesday woman's clubs' day, Friday girls' day, and Saturday, the closing session, is Vice President's day.

CAPTURING GUNMAN WHO SHOT THREE POLICEMEN

Four story apartment building at 2124 North Kedzie avenue, where Peter Podolski barricaded himself on the top floor and shot it out with police squads, wounding Sergts. James Cunningham and Peter B. Kennelly and Patrolman David J. Fitzgerald. Podolski was captured at 1 o'clock this morning after a three hour battle in which hundreds of rifle and revolver shots were poured into the place. The police also used tear bombs.

Photo was taken as they emerged from the front door of the flat building in which Podolski barricaded himself.

their footsteps. He stepped into the hall and fired in the darkness. Two bullets entered Cunningham's body. His companions retreated, carrying his body.

More and more reserves were called until more than 200 policemen were in the attacking force. Then, suddenly, at 1 o'clock, Podolski's voice was heard from the apartment.

Offers to Surrender.

"I'll give up if you won't kill me," he shouted.

Capt. Stege, Lieut. Joseph McGuire and three sergeants slipped up to the apartment.

"Drop your gun and stand with your hands above your head," they ordered Podolski through the door. Then they rushed in.

Podolski was in his stocking feet when the police entered the apartment. He had thrown his gun out a side window, it was discovered. It was found later.

"See, I haven't a gun; I didn't shoot any one," he told the detectives.

The detectives seized the man, and signaled to the attacking forces below that they had captured the gunman. Then a great shout went up from the crowd. The cheers were mingled with cries of "lynch him, lynch him."

A few minutes later, when his captors pushed Podolski through the front doorway, cheering broke out anew.

Then came a new battle by the police to push back the crowd. They wanted to clear a lane to take the captured gunman to their cars. Patrolmen waved their clubs and shouted at the top of their voices, urging the onlookers to back away. Detective sergeants locked arms, formed human wedges, and pushed forward. It required several minutes to break an opening through the crowd wide enough to take Podolski to the cars.

The apartment in which Podolski made his stand was completely wrecked. More than 1,000 shots had been fired inat the windows. The walls were riddled with bulllets. Police could not understand how Podolski, who exposed himself recklessly, had not been more seriously wounded.

How the Battle Started.

Podolski has been known in police circles as a "bad man" who was ready with his revolver. He was wanted on several charges of robbery. When Kennelly reported that Podolski and a companion were in an apartment in the building a squad of patrolmen was sent over.

The police knocked at the flat of the janitor, John Sozinic, where the suspects were thought to be hiding. They were refused admittance at first, but when they began to force the door, Mary Sozinic, the janitor's wife, finally opened it for them and appeared with a butcher knife.

She was quickly disarmed, but before the policemen were able to push past her and enter the flat, Podolski rushed out and ran up the stairs in the hallway, pursued by Connelly and Fitzgerald. It was then they were shot.

Podolski's companion, Nicholas Slocum, surrendered without resistance. Sozinic was also taken into custody.

Camp Fire Girls, who are helping to make the week notable in girls' activities, opened their national conference yesterday afternoon at the Congress hotel with an exhibit of their crafts. Modeling and carving, printing, bead work, batik, sewing and painting are the arts represented.

GIRL AND CHUM VANISH AFTER FATHER KICKS

After a Rogers Park grocer had objected to his daughter's associating with a girl friend and had asked the friend not to call at his home again the two girls disappeared Friday night, according to a report to the police.

After Edward Slack, 1671 Farwell avenue, had reported to Capt. Michael Gallery of the Rogers Park station the disappearance of his daughter, Marie Louise, 19 years old, the police learned that her friend, Miss Jean Jacobs, 21 years old, 1841 West Jackson boulevard, had packed her clothing and vanished at the same time.

Mr. Slack told the police he believed Miss Jacobs had planned a trip of adventure and had induced his daughter to accompany her.

ROGER BACON
of the 13th Century

The early development of spectacles in Europe seems to have been in the hands of the monks, the students and scientists of their times.

In a treatise written at Oxford, England, at about the time the worthy monk, Allessandro della Spina, was making and distributing spectacles in Pisa, Roger Bacon, an English Franciscan Friar, had something to say about them.

Some think he actually invented spectacles. The telescope and gunpowder are also ascribed to him. He was a student of science, and experimented with lenses. He also analyzed the eye, its construction and functions, with an understanding and accuracy quite striking for the times.

Roger Bacon's progressiveness was not appreciated at first, but later his learning found favor in the eyes of high authorities.

Nowadays, advances such as are constantly being made in Almer Coe Eyeglass Service, meet a quicker reception. An appreciative public makes possible four stores located for their accommodation at convenient points.

NO POISON FOUND IN OLSON'S BODY, CHEMIST REPORTS

Resume McClintock Inquest Tuesday.

CHIEF JUSTICE OLSON.

No poison was found in the body of Dr. Oscar Olson, which was exhumed as part of the investigation into the McClintock deaths, Coroner Oscar Wolff announced last night after receiving the report of Dr. William D. McNally, coroner's physician, chemist, and toxicologist.

This finding was expected by Chief Justice Harry Olson of the Municipal court, brother of the late physician. He said the symptoms of his brother's illness and death indicated prussic acid poisoning, and that there would be no trace of it now, after three years.

Dr. McNally's report cleared the way for the resumption of the three-ply inquest which Chief Deputy Coroner H. O. Shakerberg said he will call for Tuesday at 2 p. m. With these verdicts arrived at, the next move of importance in the $1,000,000 typhoid case will be the trial of William D. Shepherd on the William McClintock murder indictment.

Expect Jury's Concurrence.

The coroner's jury has not finished the William McClintock inquest, it having been postponed shortly before the grand jury indicted Shepherd for murder. Then the bodies of Mrs. Emma Nelson McClintock and Dr. Olson were taken from their graves and postmortems conducted by Dr. McNally.

The expectation of the prosecution is that the coroner's jury will concur in the indictment of Shepherd in the William McClintock death. Should it follow Dr. McNally's report it will set aside the opinion of the attending physician that Mrs. McClintock died of heart disease and the verdict will be that she died of bichloride of mercury poisoning.

The jury may be asked to hold Shepherd responsible for this death, in view of the testimony so far given, the prosecution intimated. As to the verdict fixing the cause of Dr. Olson's death, if the jurors do as the prosecution wishes an open verdict will be returned.

Text of Chemist's Report.

Dr. McNally's report was as follows:

"On March 27, 1925, I performed a postmortem examination on the body of Dr. Oscar Olson at Graceland cemetery. I removed portions of the liver, bowel, both kidneys, heart, blood from the heart, spleen, both lungs, stomach, and brain for pathological and chemical examination.

"A chemical examination of the liver, kidney, blood, and intestine showed the presence of formaldehyde due to embalming and acetone and phenol due to decomposition processes. Tests for other volatile poisons were negative. Tests for arsenic, antimony, bismuth, barium, and fluorides were negative. Tests for alkaloidal poisons were negative.

"A slight amount of mercury was found in the bowel which I believe was due to medication." Signed

"WILLIAM D. MCNALLY, M. D."

Thinks Open Verdict Sure.

Because of this report, because of the testimony at the inquest, and because of Dr. McNally's expert opinion that prussic acid or aconitine might have been used to kill Dr. Olson and be untraceable now, Chief Justice Olson holds that any other than an open verdict would be an error. He cites the visit of Shepherd to the Olson home the day before the doctor's death—Shepherd's first visit there in six years—as a strong circumstance.

There was testimony that Shepherd and Dr. Olson were alone in the bedroom for a time. Then Dr. Olson became delirious—insisting that Tommy O'Connor was trying to get into the house. He turned pink, sweated profusely and died four or five hours later.

It is the contention of the prosecution that all three deaths were part of a sinister design to wrest the McClintock fortune from its possessors. The finding of mercury in Mrs. McClintock's body strengthens this belief, the assistant state's attorneys say, the autopsy showing a sufficient quantity to have killed her within ten days.

Charge Shepherd with Plot.

Thus the three deaths, the first by mercury, the second still a matter to be determined by a jury, the third by typhoid fever, all come under the scrutiny of judge and jury because of the charge that Shepherd was the instigator of a sixteen year conspiracy to do away with whoever stood between him and the $1,000,000.

Britain's "Gloomy Dean" Visits U. S.

The Very Rev. William Ralph Inge, dean of St. Paul's cathedral, London, and known to the press of Great Britain as "the Gloomy Dean," arrived with his wife in New York City yesterday.

BRITISH DEAN ARRIVES; SOUNDS LIBERAL VIEWS

New York, April 18.—The Very Rev. William Ralph Inge, dean of St. Paul's cathedral in London, and frequently referred to by the English press as the "gloomy dean," arrived today on the steamship Mauretania for a series of lectures at Yale university.

"I don't care to discuss liberalism in the church," he said. "Men get into trouble in New York for doing it. I see that one has just been suspended for being liberal. I suspect that I shall be tomorrow."

Opposed to prohibition, Dean Inge said that it would not affect him to any extent because he would be here only three weeks. He did not believe it ever would come to England.

He said he favored the admittance of women to holy orders. "Some women ought to be bishops," he added, "and pretty women in the pulpit would do much to revive church interest wher[illegible]s too frequently lacking."

Th[illegible]s no fundamental antipathy betw[illegible]eligion and science, he said.

Judge a Funeral by the Automobiles

Only one of the many features which distinguish a "Hursen" funeral is the amazing beauty and elegance of Hursen's automobile equipment.

There is no more beautiful car in America today than a "Hursen" funeral-limousine. Each one of these cars was specially designed by Hursen himself, in order to supply that uttermost refinement of quality and service found nowhere else except in "Hursen" funerals.

Each "Hursen" funeral-limousine cost a fortune to build. The purpose was to surpass anything of its kind yet seen in America. That Hursen has succeeded is proved by the demand for "Hursen" cars. Hursen "limousine-hearses" are a revolution in hearses, doing away with the old-style, gloomy-looking vehicle.

In many funerals not conducted by Hursen, one often sees automobiles, pressed into funeral service, which are unworthy of such a use; old, unkempt, dilapidated, of ancient design, and driven by men untrained to the exacting requirements of "Hursen" service.

It is a remarkable fact that for the use of these palatial cars there is no extra charge over the usual auto hire, no matter what the size of the funeral may be. This is only one of the many features which have made "Hursen's" the most distinguished institution of its kind in America. Call Hursen, of course!

MUNDING GETS 22 YEARS FOR KILLING WOMAN

Makes No Demonstration Over Penalty.

BY JOHN HERRICK.

GEORGE W. MUNDING.

Twenty-two years in the state penitentiary was the sentence a jury of Du Page county business men and farmers gave to George W. Munding, Chicago riding master, yesterday as punishment for the murder of his common law wife, Mrs. Julia Abb Douglass, on her farm near Hinsdale last September.

The murder verdict was returned in Wheaton at 9:50 yesterday morning in the courtroom of Judge William J. Fulton, where the trial has been going on for the last week. It represented the outcome of eleven hours' discussion by the jurors.

Mother's Funeral Near Same Hour.

At approximately the same hour, in Toledo, funeral services for Munding's mother, Mrs. Anna Munding, were being held. She died last Wednesday of brain hemorrhage—her illness due partially to her worry over the fate of her son, it was said.

It was not until Sheriff John Hesterman had led the convicted man outside, on the way to the jail, that Munding showed any signs of feeling.

"I'd gladly serve another year in prison if only I could attend my mother's funeral," he said.

It is probable that he will be taken to Joliet April 24. Attorney Hadley made the routine plea for a new trial, and Judge Fulton said he would hear arguments on that date. But no one expects the petition to be granted. Sentence will be passed then.

Jurors Take Fourteen Ballots.

Fourteen ballots were taken by the jurors, it was learned. In three ballots the jurors cast aside all the expert testimony of the alienists and established their unanimous belief that Munding was sane at the time of the shooting and sane now.

During the subsequent eleven ballots cast to determine the sentence, Juror John Kavanagh, a Lombard farmer, it was reported, held strongly for a manslaughter verdict, carrying with it a penitentiary term of from one year to life.

As far as the actual time Munding will have to serve in Joliet is concerned, twenty-two years is a misnomer. He will be eligible to parole eight years and four months after the day he enters, penitentiary authorities said. With time off for good behavior, he may shave the twenty-two years down to a term of twelve years and three months.

COLORED WOMAN SLAIN.

Mrs. Ethel Simmons, 22 years old, and colored, was shot and killed in her home at 3600 Rhodes avenue yesterday. Her husband, Thomas, and his brother, Levi, are held for questioning.

ROOSEVELTS ARE IN LONDON, MAKING READY FOR HUNT

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

LONDON, April 18.—Theodore and Kermit Roosevelt arrived in London today for a week's stay to complete their preparations for their scientific and hunting expedition to Central Asia for the Field Museum of Chicago.

"We will spend most of our time here getting certain equipment which we could not secure in America, and are taking advantage of the opportunity to meet and talk with British explorers, scientists, and authorities familiar with conditions in Central Asia," "Young Teddy" said. "From London we will go to Paris and Marseilles, whence we will take a P. & O. liner to India.

"My brother and myself wish to express our deepest appreciation for the help and courtesy of the British government, through the viceroy of India and Sir Esme Howard, the British ambassador to Washington. All difficulties with the India office have been straightened out."

BANKER, BROKER, MILLIONAIRE RIOT IN ITALY'S MARTS

Protest Mussolini's New Orders on Trading.

ROME, April 18.—Bankers, brokers, millionaires, and office boys rioted in all the stock exchanges in Italy today as a protest against the government's efforts to stabilize money through curbing speculation. A new government edict provides that 25 per cent of the value of all stocks and bonds purchased on a margin must be paid for in cash.

The rioting marked the second phase of the battle, which began with a brokers' strike and a threat to close all the exchanges in Italy. This threat was followed by Premier Mussolini's action overruling the decrees of Finance Minister Di Stefani and the issuing of orders relieving stock transactions to some extent. But since this order required cash deposits, it was seen that business could not proceed as usual, and in fact a general slump in bonds followed.

In Trieste the slump in industrial bonds was so marked that the public entered the exchange and smashed the quotation boards. In Florence operations were suspended because of riots and the police were called to evict the crowds from the exchange. At Turin and Milan the brokers engaged in fist fights, and resolutions were passed and forwarded to Sig. Mussolini asking more concessions, otherwise the general slump would affect the kingdom's business as well as ruining thousands of holders of stocks and bonds.

BULLETIN.

ARIS, April 18.—(Associated ress.)—A Sofia dispatch to the atin says Peter Zatgorski, a bea- le of the Sveti Kral cathedral, has fessed to complicity in the bomb plosion Thursday. He named as principal authors of the outrage o men, Kosta Yankoff and Nin- ff, the latter a former officer in engineers corps. The two chief sub-chief respectively of the communist executive central mittee.

OFIA, April 18.—[Ullstein.]—Mos- w's hand directed the infernal ma- ine which killed re than 200 ersons and unded 1,000, Bulgarian gov- nment declares. e destruction of cathedral dur- the funeral vices of Gen. orgieff was a ect attempt on life of King ris, planned by peasant com- nists in pursuit the general pol- laid down for by the ird Internation- le.

M. ZINOVIEFF.

Four million gold rubles ($2,000,000) ntly found its way into Bulgaria m the Third Internationale of Mos- w, headed by M. Zinovieff, for the pport of the communists, the foreign ice declared today.

It was only chance that kept the g from the cathedral. He had al- dy declared he would be present. e throne was erected directly under main dome of the church. At the t moment King Boris decided to at- d the funeral of his chief huntsman, d from a modest little church in the urbs. He sent Gen. Davidoff as personal representative. The body the general was blown to bits and s only identified by scraps of his uniform and orders, some of which he wore on his breast.

Bomb Near Royal Throne.

The bomb exploded close to the throne and most of those killed were within a short distance of the royal chair. The others lost their lives when the dome and south wall caved in, burying them under the mass of stones and wreckage.

Pitiful scenes were enacted today during the cleaning out of the cathedral. Relatives of those who attended the service and are still missing crowded around the building, as near as the police would permit, awaiting a chance to identify their loved ones.

The military courts organized yesterday by royal decree began to work today. The trial of suspects arrested immediately after the explosion will be pushed through to a quick conclusion and fitting punishment meted out under military law.

Communists Hurt Cause.

The communists have done themselves damage with the people which they will probably never be able to repair. A wave of rage swept the land when it became known to what lengths Moscow's servants would go for the overturn of the Zankoff government.

The sharpest measures are being taken by the government to wipe out communism in Bulgaria. Carrying weapons is forbidden except by troops and police. Railway travel is permitted only with proper passes. A censorship has been placed on telephones and telegraphs. All persons must be off the streets before 7:30 in the evening.

Sofia City was dead yesterday and today. Few street cars were operating and automobiles virtually disappeared. Many business houses closed.

BLAME ZINOVIEFF

BY RAYMOND FENDRICK.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1925: By The Chicago Tribune.]

CONSTANTINOPLE, April 18.—The cathedral bomb outrage at Sofia, Bulgaria, when more than 200 persons were killed and more than 1,000 injured, was ordered by M. Zinovieff, president of the Third International of Moscow, according to information received here.

The revolutionary campaign in Bulgaria is directed from a branch office of the communist international at the soviet embassy in Constantinople and early in January M. Zinovieff ordered the branch to make a supreme effort to establish peasant soviet republics in Bulgaria and Macedonia during March and April.

$2,000,000 Sent.

"I will only receive 10,000,000 gold rubles ($5,000,000) from the soviet government during the first three months of the year," M. Zinovieff wrote the Constantinople branch. "I am so hopeful of the revolutionary movement in Bulgaria and Macedonia that I am sending you four of my 10,000,000 for an intensified campaign in these countries during March and April, although this forces us to abandon important work in China for several months."

It is explained that from the Communist standpoint Bulgaria is the key to the control of the Balkans. If Bulgaria is won the first effect will be the destruction of Roumania; the second will be the establishment of a soviet republic in Macedonia with Saloniki the capital and the dissolution of Jugo-Slavia; the third will be the arrival of Russia at the Aegean and Adriatic seas; the fourth will be the isolation and absorption of Turkey, and fifth, the establishment of soviet republics in central Europe, notably Albania, Croatia, and Galicia.

ASKS $100,000 OF EX-HUSBAND AND HIS BRIDE

Angry and hurt because her divorced husband, Frank Y. Parsons, sales manager for the Sherman Sales Service corporation, has remarried, Mrs. Edna R. Parsons of Madison, Wis., yesterday filed two suits in Superior court, each for $50,000.

The first suit, naming Parsons and his new bride, Mrs. Julia Tweedie Parsons, is based on a charge that they conspired to break up the first Mrs. Parsons' happy home, according to Frederick Arnd, counsel in both cases.

The present Mrs. Parsons should pay $50,000 to her predecessor for having won Parsons from her, according to Attorney Arnd, who stated the second suit was for alienation of affections.

3-GUN PARSON LEADS RAIDERS ON SPRINGFIELD

Wet Spots in Capital Are Mopped Up.

Springfield, Ill., April 18.—[Special.]—The Rev. Henry E. Rompel, thought by bootleggers to have gone into retirement after they dynamited his residence and church in Joliet, today resumed his place in the dry spotlight when he led thirty Chicago prohibition agents in an onslaught on twenty-four wet spots here. Quantities of liquor were seized and many arrests made.

CHAS. W. VURSELL.

Following the practice which first gained him fame as one of the most aggressive of the Volstead supporters, the Rev. Mr. Rompel wore his three trusty guns. He found it unnecessary to do any shooting, however.

The agents were under official command of Chief Enforcement Officer Charles W. Vursell of Chicago, assisted by group chiefs from each of the four Illinois prohibition areas.

Retired from Pastorate.

Shortly after the blasting of the Ottawa Street Methodist church and parsonage in Joliet the Rev. Mr. Rompel resigned his pastorate and became a field worker for the Illinois Anti-Saloon league.

Investigation begun shortly after the Illinois legislature was called to order revealed, according to Mr. Rompel, that many legislators and other state officials and attachés were wont to quaff the flowing bowl or indulge in jolts of liquor. Therefore the state capital was selected at the first spot needing his attention.

The Rev. Mr. Rompel, known affectionately as "Dad" in prohibition circles, asked the aid of all of Chief Vursell's state enforcement staff in procuring preliminary evidence upon which today's search warrants were based.

Deny Political Significance.

Prohibition Director Percy Owen, a former resident of Springfield, had been advised of flagrant violations in the vicinity of the capitol and coöperated in the work which made possible the roundup.

As in the case of the Saturday raids on Governor Small's home town, Kankakee, several weeks ago, prohibition officials denied there was any political significance reflected in the wholesale dry activity.

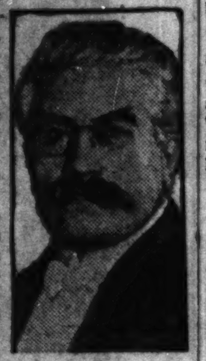
A variety of booze, both good and bad, was found in most of the places visited. The few which succeeded in concealing their liquid assets are in as much trouble as the others, however, for liquor purchases previously had been made in each of the establishments raided.

Chief Vursell anounced that he would ask a jail sentence for each defendant arrested and that he also would seek injunctions closing all the raided places for one year.

Millerand Fights Cailloux as French Finance Minister

BY HENRY WALES.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1925: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, April 18.—Former Premier Herriot accepted the candidacy for president of the chamber of deputies to succeed Paul Painleve today, and the former premier certainly will be lected, as he commands a clear cut majority in the lower house.



M. MILLERAND.

The new premier today was busy outlining his ministerial declaration to be made Tuesday in the chamber and senate. He is expected to confine it largely to his financial program and security for France.

Joseph Caillaux told THE TRIBUNE correspondent this afternoon:

"You must not expect exceptional measures nor extraordinary solutions from me. I am concentrating on positive and immediate plans, which are not necessarily definite solutions."

Millerand to Fight Caillaux.

The senate leaders today were arranging a campaign against the new cabinet, aimed principally at M. Caillaux, and former President Millerand will head the demonstration with a speech Thursday in behalf of the new Nationalist party.

M. Poincare apparently intends to disassociate himself from the manifestations, realizing that the people generally are willing to accept M. Caillaux and forget the past if he solves the financial troubles.

Nationalists attempted to hiss and boo M. Caillaux in the movie theaters when they showed his picture on the screen, but most of the spectators yelled, "Shut up." War veterans staged a demonstration at the Arch of Triumph this afternoon against the return to power of "the traitor Caillaux."

Dodge Fight in Senate.

[Copyright: 1925: By the New York Times.]

PARIS, April 18.—Former President Millerand has taken the lead in opposition to Joseph Caillaux's readmission to the government. His newspaper L'Avenir announced today that next Thursday M. Millerand, newly elected senator, will head the list of speakers at a mass meeting of protest of the newly organized party of republican-nationalists. M. Millerand is obviously anxious to avoid direct conflict with Finance Minister Caillaux in the senate at once.

Balanced as it is by the presence of Anslid Briand and several other ministers and faced with the urgent necessity of getting order into the nation's finances and dealing with the security problem, the Painleve cabinet as a whole contains elements of solidity which neither M. Millerand nor M. Poincare are yet ready to put to a test. Their intention or at least that of M. Millerand and his press is to excite public opinion outside the chambers against M. Caillaux's return and await some future day when they can attack him on the ground of his financial policy.

COLD STEINS AID HINDENBURG IN FRAMING POLICY

Gives "Beer Evening" to Announce Platform.

BY JOHN CLAYTON.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

FIELD MARSHAL VON HINDENBURG. [Wide World Photo.]

BERLIN, April 18.—Tomorrow will be the big day in Germany's presidential campaign. Gen. von Hindenburg, the nationalist candidate, will receive several delegations at Hanover, where the "steel helmets" plan a demonstration. In the evening the field marshal will be the host to the foreign correspondents at a "bear evening" during which he will deliver a carefully prepared address outlining his ideas on the German foreign policy.

In Berlin both the Republicans and the nationalists will stage demonstrations and their military organizations are scheduled to hold parades. The police have been reinforced and are prepared to prevent any possible street clashes. The election occurs next Sunday.

Nationalists Silent on Marx Speech.

The speech of Wilhelm Marx, candidate of the Republican parties, in which he urged annexation of Austria, failed to draw fire from the nationalists today. They refused to answer his appeal for a "greater Germany."

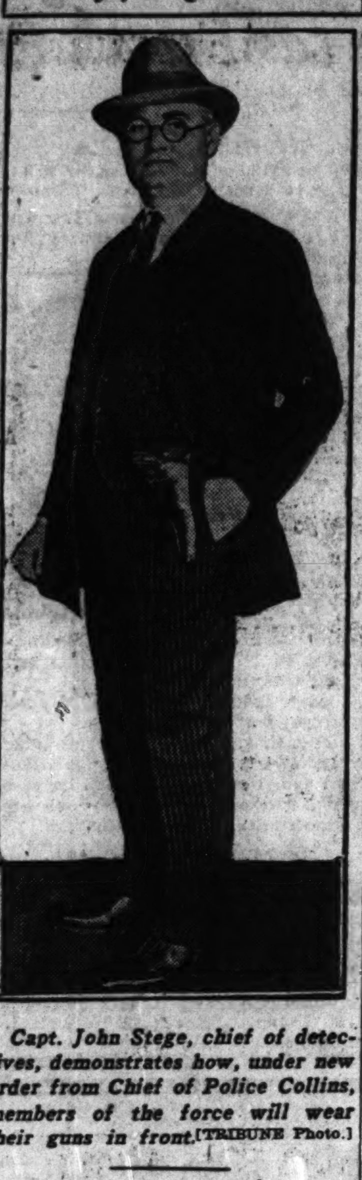
Die Zeit, the newspaper of Gustave Stresemann, foreign minister, however, suggests that the nationalists also will do well to declare that they support the "greater Germany" idea and not let themselves be influenced by foreign protests.

Foreign Office Nervous.

Dr. Stresemann's position still worries the nationalists, but tonight's Die Zeit half heartedly appeals to its readers in a proclamation "to clean up corruption and elect an honest man." Only in the headlines does Field Marshal von Hindenburg's name appear.

The foreign office is nervous over the effect Dr. Marx's address will have abroad. The Republican candidate revealed more of Germany's foreign policy than have any of those directly responsible for it. As former chancellor, it is felt that his word carries too much weight abroad.

Ready for Quick Draw



Capt. John Stege, chief of detectives, demonstrates how, under new order from Chief of Police Collins, members of the force will wear their guns in front. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

COLLINS TELLS COPS TO WEAR GUNS IN FRONT

Chicago policemen are going to be first on the draw if there is any shooting about, Chief of Police Collins declared grimly yesterday as he directed that his men's revolvers should be worn in holsters in front instead of at the hip as heretofore. The bottom button on the coat is to be open, so that with a deft reach the policeman can have his shooting iron in hand before he is drilled by a gunman.

"The idea is to have fewer policemen shot," Chief Collins said. Following out the inference, he means that there are to be more criminals shot.

After explaining the manner in which firearms are to be carried to all his captains, meeting in his office, Chief Collins directed them to search camps of Mexican laborers, who are said lately to have been obtaining guns.

The captains also were instructed to exert especial vigilance to prevent bank and pay roll robberies.

HANDS OFF CHINA, RUSSIA AND JAPS WARN UNCLE SAM

Joffe Says Invasion of U.S. Capital Is Feared.

BY JOHN CLAYTON.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1925: By The Chicago Tribune.]

ADOLPH JOFFE.

BERLIN, April 18.—"Hands off China, Uncle Sam," is the warning indicated by the Russo-Japanese teaty, in the opinion of Adolph Joffe, former Russian minister to Vienna.

The Berlin correspondent of THE TRIBUNE has seen a translation of the confidential diplomatic report based on the conferences of the former minister to Vienna, giving an outline of the soviet foreign policy and the relations of China, Japan, and Russia following the Russo-Japanese pact. THE TRIBUNE correspondent is in a position to state that the report not only expresses the opinions of M. Joffe but the official foreign policy of the Moscow government.

There is much in the report which must be regarded as diplomatic half truths, some of which might be considered propaganda, but on the whole M. Joffe gives a picture of close relations between the three great oriental powers, which he describes as a "moral alliance," directed against American capitalistic penetration in China.

Aimed at U. S. Supremacy.

According to M. Joffe's declaration, the soviets acknowledge only a defensive policy. In the east it is based purely on economic grounds. In the west, especially as regards Roumania and Poland, it is a military defensive policy, with troops ready for action.

The understanding reached between Russia and Japan and China, according to M. Joffe, is the natural result of the capitalistic supremacy of the United States. These three nations were unable single handed to resist American capital. By returning Saghalien to Russia, Japan has assured itself a friendly attitude on the part of Russia.

China was weakened through inner political struggles. The generals in China were supported by foreign governments. So Russia does not side with one or another of the factions in China. Russia will only grant support against foreign efforts to exploit China's civil war. This support, according to M. Joffe, is not military. He believes moral support is sufficient.

No Formal 3-Power Treaty.

There is no formal three power treaty between China, Japan, and Russia, nor will such a treaty be signed, declared M. Joffe. The common interests of the three states inspires their attitude today and in the near future. If one wishes to discuss military problems one should think only of two possibilities:

1. An attack against the United States. Not one in the three thinks of this because it would be utter insanity. They have no military power in the Pacific ocean which would enable them to carry a war to the American continent. Consequently, an attack would be ridiculous from the beginning.

2. An American attack against either Japan, China, or Russia. In all these three cases a long war would ensue, which, even though successful at the start for the attacking party, would end by the United States being bled white, at least financially, because the whole territory of the states supporting one another morally is tremendous. This relation will certainly prevent America from attempting this plan. Therefore, Moscow is convinced that in the near future the Pacific ocean will be truly pacific.

If, despite this, Japan and China and Russia feel themselves drawn together by instinct it is because the capitalistic expansion of the United States may lead to consequences of vast political importance. But while class interests brought these three states together in a moral alignment against America, one can nowhere see a threat against the United States in the alignment because it was inspired only by economic reasons.

As regards the foreign policy of the soviets in the west, M. Joffe repeated the declaration that the soviets do not think of an attack against Roumania and Poland, border states. Moscow has not and never will recognize the annexation of Bessarabia to Roumania. That is sufficient.

The situation is similar to the question of Poland's eastern frontier. Russia will never recognize conquests by the violence of the Poles.

COUNTY'S AUTO TOLL REACHES 192; THREE DEAD

Boy Is Killed When Car Upsets in Road.

The death clock advanced three notches yesterday and Cook county's motor total since Jan. 1 is 192.

JOHN DRAGOME. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Gorman O'Mara, 17 year old, 7732 South Sangamon street, was fatally injured when he was pinned beneath his automobile at 115th street and 52d avenue, in Worth township, after he had lost control of the car and it overturned in a ditch. O'Mara was a son of Sergt. Stephen O'Mara, connected with the state's attorney's office. His skull was fractured and his chest crushed. He died shortly after the accident.

Killed by Taxicab.

Eugene Hill, 65 years old, 4137 Greenview avenue, was struck by a taxicab at Southport avenue and Clark street. He died at the American hospital a few hours later. The driver of the cab, Max Teiger, 1509 South Kedzie avenue, is being held pending the inquest.

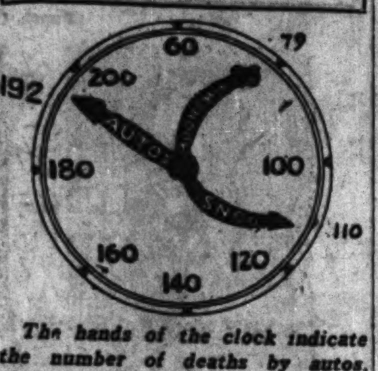
Gertrude Andrews, 9 years old, 3535 North Ashland avenue, died in the John B. Murphy hospital of injuries received Jan. 21 when she was struck by a De Luxe cab at Ashland avenue and Addison street. The cab driver was Joseph Gilman, 2142 Haddon avenue.

Woman Badly Hurt.

Mrs. Johanna Sheen, 63, 1424 Washington boulevard, was probably fatally injured when she was struck by an automobile at Washington boulevard and Sheldon street. Police are holding the driver, George Sprouse, 228 North California avenue.

Among Friday's victims was John Dragome, 4, 1716 South Jefferson street, killed by his father's truck.

HANDS OF DEATH



The hands of the clock indicate the number of deaths by autos, guns, and moonshine in Cook county since Jan. 1. Yesterday was the one hundred and eighth day of 1925.

BELIEVE GIRL KILLED SELF.

Ethel Simmons, colored, 22, 3600 Rhodes avenue, found shot to death in her home late yesterday, is believed to have committed suicide while despondent.

TRUSTEE GROUP O.K.'S 10 TO 30% TEACHER BOOST

Asks for Increase of $1 in School Tax Rate.

Chicago public school teachers were virtually assured of a salary increase from 10 to 30 per cent yesterday. The finance committee of the board of education, sitting as a committee of the whole, unanimously approved the new scale recommended by the superintendent. It will be acted on formally by the board at its meeting Wednesday.

At the same time the committee by resolution recommended the public be asked to approve an increase of $1 in the tax rate for educational purposes to perpetuate the increase and bolster up the financial condition of the board, which is now nearing a crisis. The $1 increase represents approximately a 30 per cent boost in the levy, the present rate being $1.92.

The $1 increase will give the board a revenue annually of approximately $50,000,000 for educational purposes as against $33,000,000 available under the present rate. Nearly half of the increase will go to meeting the higher salary scale.

New Scale in Effect Sept. 1.

The new scale would go into effect Sept. 1, and the present revenue will carry the schedule through to January, 1927. Unless the referendum receives a favorable vote at the first election, which will probably be in April, 1926, teachers' pay will revert to the old scale in 1928.

The decision to ask for an increased levy was reached after an analysis of school finances showed that no dent could be made in the $20,000,000 deficit in the educational fund, unless additional revenue were provided. At the same time Supt. William McAndrew has advocated increased salaries for Chicago teachers ever since his arrival here a year ago. He has contended that the city's schools are in the second class as long as the present salary schedule is maintained.

He has held that Chicago has not contributed enough to education and has urged seeking a boost in the levy for the betterment of the system in general.

The largest increased provided is for elementary school principals. They will receive a flat increase of $1,000, and the maximum is raised from $4,800 to $6,250. High school principals are given a maximum pay of $7,500, as against $5,700, the present salary.

In the elementary group, which comprises about 75 per cent of the educational forces, the maximum is raised from $2,500 to $3,250, an increase of 30 per cent. The starting salary remains the same, $1,500.

High school teachers holding general certificates are given a boost from $3,800 to $4,900 for maximum pay. Those with limited certificates will receive $3,900 after maximum service, an increase of $600 over the present scale. The junior high group has a maximum of $4,100.

None to Suffer Reduction.

In putting the schedule into effect no teacher will suffer any reduction. Teachers will advance to the highest scale on the new schedule or remain on the old rate until reaching a point of increase on new scale.

Appended is a comparative scale of the old and new schedule for elementary teachers, of whom there are 8,602, all of whom will be affected.

Year.	Old.	New.
Lower Group.
1	$1,500	$1,500
2	1,625	1,550
3	1,750	1,600
4	1,875	1,800
5	2,000	2,000
Upper Group.
6	2,125	2,250
7	2,250	2,500
8	2,375	2,750
9	2,500	3,000
10	2,500	3,250

Teachers at any point in the lower group will advance in that group until they reach the upper class. New teachers coming into the system will receive the new scale. In the upper group teachers will advance to the next higher scale. Thus a teacher now at the maximum of $2,500, will advance to $2,750, attaining the maximum in the new schedule in three years.

WHY LAWS ARE NOT ENFORCED IN THIS COUNTRY.

A writer in the Independent, Prof. Haynes, in an able discussion of law enforcement, recalls that, while crime at present is created by statute and is penalized by statute, "in earlier periods, statute law played a much smaller part in defining antisocial practices. Customs gradually developed into the common law. People were born, educated, and lived under relatively unchanging or slowly changing social conditions. Crimes were few in number and were clearly defined."

But today, as he remarks, "any session of our state legislatures may add new crimes to the list of forbidden acts." He says a majority only is required to constitute an act a crime, but in fact the situation is worse than that. A great many of the statutory offenses have been created not by a conscious act of any majority but by reason of the pressure of an organized minority applied to the sensitive political nerve, in the absence of a counter check from the actual popular majority, which normally is uninterested and even unaware of the legislative action. Senator Reed of Missouri in a recent protest against the multiplicity of statutes said there were 18,000 in Missouri and that obviously they were too many to be read, much less applied and enforced. In 1923, says Prof. Haynes, 1,032 measures were introduced in the legislature of Iowa, of which 388 became laws, and the record of the two preceding legislative sessions were about the same, so that in three sessions more than a thousand new laws were enacted in this one state. The same process is going on in most of the states and in congress.

Obviously this creates a task of law administration and enforcement which is flatly impossible, and it produces a worse consequence than that. It undermines respect for law and government. But the weakness of most statutory creations of offenses has other sources than multiplicity. Crimes declared in the gradual processes of the old law were offenses against a common sense of right—ethics would once have said an inherent sense of right—offenses against the common conscience. Therefore a law declaring them to be crimes and affixing a penalty had the sanction of the common will, of a virtually unanimous public opinion. Their enforcement, therefore, was chiefly a question of administrative efficiency. But offenses created by legislative fiat may or may not have any general sanction. As we have said, many are imposed by a minority, without the authority of an awakened majority will or at least without that of any such dominating consensus as the older criminal laws commanded. They seek to penalize acts or omissions which a considerable part of the community may not yet recognize as offenses or may not consider condemnable. In many cases they represent premature judgments and even if that judgment turn out to be sound, this implies a period during which the public is catching up to the advanced opinion, a period in which it is not sufficiently convinced to insist upon strict enforcement.

The phenomenon of nonenforcement or inefficient administration in this field cannot be taken seriously as evidence of a fundamental lack of respect for law among our people. Yet it cannot but have some effect in weakening that respect unconsciously or indirectly. And another practical consequence is that it overloads the administration of justice and diverts or divides its energies so that they cannot be as effective as they ought to be in dealing with the problems of crime of the basic order.

CRIME IN THE NEWS.

Some newspapers whose editors thought the circulation could stand a stunt gave crime news abnormal treatment for a while. They segregated it, obscured it, and held it down. Most of them are returning to normal.

The activities which get the most space in representative American papers are first business and second sports. An examination of a number of papers put police news at under 10 per cent of the reading matter. Every once in a while that 10 per cent starts on page one and impresses some readers as being about 50 per cent of the issue.

The crime which does this is drama. It has some of the elements which draw people to Hamlet, Othello, Macbeth, etc. It has what makes them want to read Conan Doyle, a good deal of Dickens, some of Stevenson. The modern theater and modern fiction are not strong for crime. They want [illegible]. Crime remains the newspaper drama. It requires unusual mystery, unusual character, unusual motive. Most of Chicago's murders get a paragraph, sometimes only three lines of agate. "John Smith shot and instantly killed William Jones at —— and —— streets last night. They had quarreled. The police are seeking Smith." Next to saying nothing about it, that is about as little as could be said.

When a community has many murders it indicates that something is wrong. It may be in the enforcement of law. It may be in the trial courts, in the police system, in the politics of the place, in the conditions of life.

San Francisco, after the gold rush, had some abnormal conditions. There had been an influx of hard criminals and they were hand in glove with dominant politicians. San Francisco knew that its future was to be great and it might have argued how to meet the crime situation, whether by suppressing mention of it or by suppressing it. The reputable elements said that the thing to suppress was the crime.

We have an idea there would be an outcry sooner or later in this town if, for political or commercial reasons, the newspapers were ignoring all the existing dangers to public security. When in proportion to population Chicago has three times as many murders as New York, there is something wrong. It will not be righted by forgetting it.

The citizen who has been out driving with his wife, who is slugged or shot and robbed, and whose wife is carried away and who never had read that any such thing ever had happened before, might want to know how long this had been going on.

Celebrated crime stories are printed because they are drama. Some of them remain celebrated for years and go into the history of the locality. The most orderly community may have one. It may not be a reflection of social conditions. Our record at this writing, 104 murders this year, is a reflection of conditions. The correction is not in ignoring it. We do not know where it will be found, but we have an idea that it will begin when there is a general feeling that the condition is not tolerable.

WHAT PRIVATE ENTERPRISE CAN DO FOR US.

Samuel Insull says that government ownership of utilities is a step toward communism, and theoretically it is. But it is not a long step, and sensible Americans will not take that ground as a serious objection. It is far better to consider government ownership in its practical workings as we are likely to find them if we are unwise enough to adopt it. Mr. Insull himself makes the really effective case against government ownership and its logical corollary, official or political control, when he describes the marvelous development of the electrical industry in the forty years of its existence. From nothing this industry has swept forward with ever broadening scope until there is now invested in it over six and a half billion dollars, and it serves 16,000,000 customers. That is what unshackled energy and initiative will do, and its benefits to the public hardly need statement. If this magnificent development had waited upon politics and bureaucratic routine it would still be in its infancy.

Socialism, or, in other words, the turning over to government officials of industry, is best refuted by an analysis of the tremendous accomplishment of private enterprise and a comparison with the workings of officialism. The worst faults of capitalism or private enterprise are less injurious to progress and to the happiness of a people than the deadening effect of officialism upon energy and imagination. A wise people will address themselves to the careful correction of the excesses and perversions of individual enterprise, as we in America are trying to do, while retaining its enormous vitality and productivity. They will not turn industry over to jobholders and politicians.

If we want to pay three men for doing what one can do, if we want to put a premium on red tape and stubborn resistance to invention and progress, we can do so by turning production over to officials and politicians. But we are quite sure the widespread and increasing benefits of private enterprise, the profits of which directly and indirectly reach us all, are too well understood and appreciated by the intelligence of America to be obscured by the glittering promises of socialism in any of its disguises.

Our danger lies in no swift or revolutionary substitution, but in a gradual drift toward political and official regulation, and as to that there has sprung up of late a healthy resistance among all classes. Organized labor, for example, which has been considerably affected by the plausible generalities and intense propaganda of socialism, is beginning to see more clearly the fundamental weaknesses and the real meaning of government expansion and to cast up the substantial benefits it has enjoyed and is advancing to year by year in private industry. For a time it seemed that our democratic tendency was inevitably sweeping us into some form of socialism. But there is now good reason to hope that the tendency is being checked and our progress, through coöperation and the steady spread of individual prosperity, turned into right channels.

WHAT'S WRONG HERE?

A contributor to the Voice of the People last week wrote:

"More than $2,000,000 has been collected (this year) from motorists for city tags. Is not some of this money supposed to be used for the repair and paving of city streets? Send out a man with a camera. I'll pay a $5 bill for a picture of a single gang repairing the pavement of any street."

A generous offer which has not been met. There is no doubt that many of the streets are in an outrageous condition and that little is being done about it. Chicagoans have a habit when entering taxicabs of bracing their legs against the opposite wall. This is not comfortable, and there is something in the etiquette book about its being bad manners, especially for the ladies. Still, we all do it, men and women, because if we don't our heads will be cracked against the roof. The most careful drivers often can't avoid the ruts because they extend across the streets.

We are not now speaking of the boulevards, many of which are in an equally deplorable condition. The vehicle taxes are not spent for maintaining boulevards, which are in the jurisdiction of the park boards. What the users of the city's streets want to know is how the money is being spent. There is a strong suspicion, based on the condition of the streets, that paving construction is faulty, and that much could be saved if repairs were promptly made.

Last year's vehicle taxes totaled more than $2,000,000. That should have repaired a lot of streets. Where's the money going?

THE MISSISSIPPI GAME PRESERVE.

Dispatches from Springfield say the bill to create the upper Mississippi wild life and fish refuge was nearly defeated in the Illinois legislature by a parliamentary trick. Congress has appropriated $1,500,000 for the refuge, provided the four states concerned, Illinois, Wisconsin, Iowa, and Minnesota, cede to the federal government the flood lands along the Mississippi from Rock Island, Ill., to Pepin, Minn. Iowa and Minnesota have done their part and Wisconsin is going to do hers, but opposition has developed in Illinois. What is the reason for the opposition has not been disclosed, but owners of marsh lands who might benefit from draining them are assumed to be the chief opponents of the measure.

We learn by our mistakes, and there have been many of them in the destruction of the natural resources of our country. We have drained marshes often to discover that the land was poor and that it cost more to drain it than it was worth for farming. The draining of the marshes tore the delicate web of life, and we are only beginning to see some of the disastrous consequences. For one thing, the destruction by floods in the lower reaches of the river becomes more appalling every year. This is the direct result of the destruction of forests and the draining of the marshes, which are the natural reservoirs for flood control.

The backwaters of the great river are the spawning grounds for game fishes, the breeding place of many songbirds, and a port of call for migrating waterfowl. The federal government does not propose to prohibit hunting and fishing on this 300 mile stretch of river, but to place it under federal control in the interest of the whole valley. Such abuses as commercial fishing during the spawning season are to be stopped. The reserve is to become again a great fish hatchery, and from it the government will stock the depleted lakes and streams of the middle west.

The movement has the unqualified indorsement of many sportsmen's leagues, of naturalists, and of conservationists. It has been approved by congress and by two legislatures. There may be sound reasons for opposing it in Illinois, but we don't know what they are. It would be a pity if a measure which appears to have everything in its favor should be defeated through parliamentary strategy without giving the people so much as an inkling of the reasons behind the opposition. Such tactics suggest that the opponents of the measure are unwilling to present their case in the open.

THIS IS ALSO THE CRIME CAPITAL.

A few days ago we pointed out with such pride as the matter deserved that this city is the murder capital of the civilized world. To that distinction another has since been added. Our state has been awarded the bank robbery championship for 1924 of the United States and Europe. Illinois had fifty-three bank holdups last year, 40 per cent of all there were in the country. Blue Island added another Friday. They'll have to go some to beat that record.

Chicagoans will be interested in knowing that our community not only leads in these matters, but is sponsor for what is coming to be called the Chicago idea in criminology. The leaders of this school are Chief Justice Harry M. Olson of the Municipal court and the court's psychiatrist, Dr. William J. Hickson. These men think that almost all crime is committed by persons with undeveloped minds, morons in the exact meaning of the word, who, though physically mature, have the intellects of children. The Olson-Hickson theory is admirably set forth in an interview with the judge which is printed in this month's "Forum." He tells how prisoners are sent from the branches of our municipal court to Dr. Hickson and states that the vast majority of them are found to be sufferers from dementia praecox. He concludes that the vast majority of crimes are committed by sufferers from this disease, marked as it is by arrested mental development. If this is so, these feeble minded criminals should be confined in asylums instead of prisons, and should in some cases be sterilized so that they may not reproduce their rotten kind.

THE COMMUTER'S TICKET.

The robins' nest is built in the balsam and ready as a cradle. The blood root is about to drop its petals. Wild gooseberry has its leaves. The woodpecker has attracted his mate by hammering on the tin drain. Petunias and asters are up in the cold frame. So are lettuce and radishes. The last of the wintered parsnips, the crop of last year, have been dug and fried. Trilliums are coming. Tulips have pushed up. There is a flush at the top of the white dog wood. Lilac leaves will spread out in another minute. The willow is a lace of green and the shad bush will break into a fairy veil of white. The migration is in and on. The feeding boxes of the winter are deserted. The cardinals sing from the tree tops. May apples have raised their tents. Maples are wet with sap. Only the white oak says that old times are best and still holds the yellow leaves which it bore last year, a tory which will have no innovations until it is overpowered.

Editorial of the Day

NEEDED—ONE FIRST CLASS MASSACRE.

[Philadelphia Public Ledger.]

This country and its congress have a habit, when facing some problem or some temporary and immediate need in government, of setting up new boards, commissions or other federal agencies. Members appointed on such boards or bureaus do their work well, ill or indifferently, as the case may be.

Possibly the need for the board or bureau continues. Very probably it does not. Yet these live on and on, taking up desk room and office room, employing secretaries, chief clerks, clerks, typists, ushers and messengers. In the course of time constituents of congressmen get jobs in them. They become a part of the "vested interests" of the jobholder and of Washington.

The District of Columbia is literally full of them. They are housed all over the capital. A casual count shows more than 200 bureaus, boards, commissions and agencies. Many of them are attached, one way or another, to the eight great executive departments. Most of these are indispensable and necessary. They have a job to do and are doing it. Even in the departments, however, there are all kinds of "vestigial remnants" of governmental evolution.

Those having any value should be merged with existing departments, their personnel discharged or greatly reduced and such work as they have transferred. Somewhere between forty and fifty of them, at the least, should have their heads chopped off.

President Coolidge has called for an invoice of these bodies and is marking many of them for early death. Virtually every one of them is a tax-eater.

Among those being doomed is the war finance corporation, revived despite the Harding administration and hanging on seven years after the war. The work of the alien property custodian may as well be given to the department of justice. The federal board of vocational training has finished its real work. So has the railroad commission.

Next winter there should be a first class massacre of useless boards and tax-eating bureaus and agencies. Congress may be chicken-hearted, but nevertheless the life-blood of these parasitic agencies should run down Capitol Hill. The best way would be a clean sweep under a general reorganization act. If that fails, they should be picked off one by one or a whole covey at a time. This will be fought, of course, by an entrenched, case-hardened, chilled-steel bureaucracy.

Nevertheless, it is one of the roads leading to economy and the broad highway of further tax reduction. It is a chore that congress and the White House should do in the interests of good government as well as economy.

PLACE FOR BABY IS AT HOME

HOME is the place for a baby, sick or well. It may be a poor home—even a very poor home—but at that the baby has a better chance of health and life there than in a hospital. It is a mistake to build a baby hospital, or even to build a baby ward in a general hospital. The people who put up the money for such hospitals are sentimentalists acting under bad advice.

These opinions as to homes and hospitals for babies under 1 year of age hold true for children 1 to 4 years of age. In Paris a large number of the young children spend their days in crèches. A crèche is a place where parents who must go out to work leave their young children during the day. In 1922 thirty-seven of the 115 crèches in Paris were closed on account of measles.

Drs. Debie and Joanon say: "Children's hospitals and crèches in Paris still remain a danger as well as a refuge to slum children. The sickly slum infant who cannot be nursed at home would be better off in some other carefully selected home than in a large institution."

The movement away from the large institution and toward the small home with foster parents may not become general if means can be found to suppress epidemics of measles in hospitals almost as soon as they begin. These authors say measles is much worse in European cities than in the United States because we have fewer slums and young children are not so frequently kept in crèches and hospitals, and yet here is a report from Detroit which shows measles takes a heavy toll in that city.

Of the deaths from measles in people of all ages, more than 96 per cent are in children under 7 years of age; 75 per cent in children under 4 years and one-fifth in children under 1 year of age. One of the conclusions coming from Paris is that the older a child is when it gets measles the better its chances of living through it. On this point Dr. Vaughan says: "Look at the table, and you will see that it doesn't pay to let the little tot get whooping cough or measles. A glance at the table will convince of the necessity of doing everything possible to prevent communicable diseases among small children."

For almost a generation Dr. Chapin of New York City has been pounding away on the theory that babies with summer bowel trouble and babies who are to be protected from summer bowel troubles should not be in institutions. His plan is to provide a group of farm homes, into each of which a very few young children would be placed for the summer. These homes would be selected by inspection. The women of the homes get a course in baby care. A visiting physician and nurse service is provided for a group of homes. The arrangement is as near mother care and home care as is possible.

The Detroit figures show that pneumonia of one sort or another far outranks all other forms of disease in importance. Statistics show that the pneumonias are worse in hospitals and asylums than they are in the home.

DIET FOR TUBERCULOSIS.

Mrs. J. S. writes:

1. Would like very much to have you state whether bovine tuberculosis in human beings can be cured?

2. Do you know any special diet or helpful advice to give to a person who has had bovine tuberculosis?

REPLY.

1. It can be. The possibility of cure is considerably influenced by the location of the infection. The glands and the bones are frequent sites for this infection.

2. The diet should consist largely of plenty of good milk, meat, bread, vegetables, and fruit. Cod liver oil should be used if it does not upset the appetite. In the treatment of tuberculosis rest, fresh air, light, freedom from worry, good habits, and good medical supervision are more important than dieting.

THE ONE REMEDY LOST.

Chicago, April 14.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—I took lease on an apartment the 6th day of last June, which will expire May 1. I was allowed no concession whatever, having paid rent from date of occupancy.

Illness made it necessary that I vacate March 26. Owner agreed to endeavor to sublet apartment and same was advertised by me in THE TRIBUNE. It was expressly understood between owner and myself that should he secure a tenant he would consult with me before making concession of any kind to prospective tenant.

Instead of so doing and unbeknown to me he has rented the apartment to a party who has occupied same since April 4, giving this party, so he says, a concession to May 1st, with the understanding that in the event some other party was desirous of obtaining the apartment and were willing to pay the rent for the balance of April they (the present occupants) would have to vacate. Owner claims he is still trying to secure a tenant who will pay rent for the balance of April, but I have called the party on the phone who has charge of renting several times, on the pretense of being interested in the apartment, and have been told that it was rented. Owner did have sign on door advertising same, but when present occupants moved in sign was removed.

Can I be held liable for the payment of rent due for the month of April?

A. S. V.

Yes. You were entitled to prevent the landlord from re-renting, but that is, in substance, your only remedy.

BELONGINGS STOLEN.

Evanston, Ill., April 13.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—I am a maid in a hospital and was here but three days when all my belongings were stolen. They amounted in value to about $300. I was refused a key when I asked for one. Would the hospital be responsible?

S. B. O.

Not upon the bare facts stated.

60 YEARS AGO TODAY

APRIL 19, 1865.

SPRINGFIELD.—Maj. Gen. Hooker ordered twenty-one minute guns to be fired at the state arsenal today at noon, the time set for the funeral services for President Lincoln in Washington. Information here is that Gov. Oglesby with the body of Mr. Lincoln will start for Illinois immediately after the Washington services, coming through Baltimore, Philadelphia, New York, Albany, Buffalo, Toledo, and Chicago. The committee on local arrangements is composed of J. C. Conkling, Sharon Tyndale, and O. H. Miner.

WASHINGTON.—It is reported that the assassin who stabbed Secretary of State Seward has been arrested. It is certain that one of the assassins—probably Surratt—has been taken. Samuel Mattam of Hookstown, Md., who wrote the letter found in J. Wilkes Booth's trunk, signed "Sam," has been arrested. It is reported that Booth is surrounded in a nearby Maryland county.

WASHINGTON. — Mrs. Lincoln is very ill from the shock of the assassination of the President. Every train is bringing crowds to Washington for the funeral.

RICHMOND.—The Whig editorially says: "The greatest blow that has ever fallen upon the people of the south has descended. Abraham Lincoln, President of the United States, has been assassinated. The time, manner, and circumstances of President Lincoln's death render it the most momentous, most appalling, and most deplorable calamity which has befallen the people of the United States. Just as everything was happily conspiring to a restoration of tranquillity under the benignant and magnanimous policy of Mr. Lincoln comes this terrible blow. God grant that it may not rekindle excitement or influence passion again."

CHICAGO.—The city election passed off quietly and resulted in a glorious Republican victory. The Democrats as a rule did not vote, or, if they did, voted the straight Republican ticket. John B. Rice was elected mayor by a plurality of 5,600. Other officials elected were: Board of public works, Fred Letz; city attorney, D. D. Driscoll; city treasurer, A. G. Throop; collector, A. H. Heald, and police clerk, William Vocke.

25 YEARS AGO TODAY

APRIL 19, 1900.

CHICAGO.—Dr. E. Benjamin Andrews resigned as superintendent of Chicago's schools to accept the chancellorship of the University of Nebraska.

NEW YORK.—Miss Helen Bertram of the Bostonians, now playing here, admitted she is engaged to marry S. George D'Essauer, wanted in Chicago for bond forgeries. She was too ill to appear in the cast last night because of shock following revelation of the character of her fiancé.

CHICAGO. — J. Stanley Goldsmith, secretary of the defunct Western Security company, is missing and is believed to have gone away with S. George D'Essauer, with whom he lived at 52 Astor street. It is now believed D'Essauer's profits from his forged bonds are much more than $100,000.

LONDON.—The staffs of Gen. Buller and Gen. Warren have not been on speaking terms since the battle of Spion Kop. The recall of Gen. Buller is expected daily, and that of Warren has already been sent, according to the best information available.

CHICAGO.—The Hull House Woman's club decided to withdraw from the General Federation of Women's Clubs, the reason given being that the federation is "simply a succession of conventions."

CHICAGO.—Lieut. John E. Ptacek was appointed assistant superintendent of police, effective today, to succeed Lyman Lewis.

CHICAGO. — Miss Ethel Burnham, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel H. Burnham, and Arthur B. Wells were married at the home of the bride in Evanston.

10 YEARS AGO TODAY

APRIL 19, 1915.

WASHINGTON.—According to gossip William F. McCombs, chairman of the Democratic national committee, and Mrs. McCombs, formerly Miss Dorothy Williams, have separated. Recently she has been staying at the country home of Joseph Leiter in McLean, Va. She is a sister of Mrs. Leiter.

CONSTANTINOPLE.—The war office issued this official announcement: "The British submarine E-15 has been sunk in the Dardanelles, east of Karanlik. Three officers and twenty-one men of the crew of thirty-one were rescued by the Turks and made prisoners."

LONDON.—According to persistent reports, Austrians who were passing over Italian territory, actually fired upon Italian troops. The Italians repulsed their assailants and in return penetrated into Austrian territory.

CHICAGO. — Mayor Elect William Hale Thompson has gone on the water wagon to stay throughout his administration, his brother-in-law, William Nelson Pelouse, announced.

CHICAGO.—Mayor Carter Harrison sang his "swan song" in a long message in which he urged the city's purchase of public utilities and declared that what the city needs is a comprehensive system of subways.

CHICAGO.—Billy Sunday has consented to come to Chicago for a big evangelistic campaign. He prefers to come next January rather than later in the spring of 1916. About 350 ministers signed the request for him to hold a series of Chicago meetings.

INDIANAPOLIS. — Mayor Donn Roberts of Terre Haute and fifteen others convicted of election frauds in that city started to Leavenworth penitentiary to serve their sentences.

CHICAGO.—Gov. Edward F. Dunne laid the corner stone of the new $400,000 armory of the 2d regiment I. N. G., at Madison street and Washtenaw avenue.

AIR SERVICE IN THE WORLD WAR.

Chicago, April 13.—If there was any lesson at all that the world war brought home to the man in the ranks, it was the importance of the aviation service in modern warfare. For some strange reason, whether it be misguided patriotism or mere reluctance to speak about the painful past, one seldom hears about the extraordinary efficiency and effectiveness of the German air forces in the late war. Though I was often within sickening proximity to their machine gun fire, I could not help admiring the wonderful dexterity and precision with which the German aviators maneuvered in action. I do not think that there is the least doubt in the mind of any candid observer that the Germans won the battle of St. Mihiel—in the air. The allied planes were helpless before the swift precision and hawklike sweep of the enemy planes. It is true, of course, that the U. S. infantry actually did attain their objective, but under other circumstances the air victory of the Germans might have told heavily against them. As it was, the infantry was considerably hampered by the enemy aviators.

It was a common sight, later on in our neck of the Argonne, to see German planes drifting leisurely overhead, without let or hindrance, calmly taking observations which later resulted in heavy shell fire and loss of good American lives. This was true in particular on the day before the armistice, when nearly half of our company—some of the finest men I have ever known—were ruthlessly sacrificed to our lack of proper air defense.

I should not think, for a moment, of attempting to disparage the services of our aviation corps during the war. They did the best they could under the circumstances and were the victims of a situation which they could not control.

Let us learn from experience, however, and develop our aviation service to the highest possible point of efficiency. Let us not by our indifference become comurderers of the very men we may ask to defend our country and ourselves.

I am not a military man or interested in anything in the world except the well being of my country, and what I learned was learned from bitter experience in the ranks as a private soldier. V. C.

WHY THE BOY SAID "YOU'RE WELCOME."

Chicago, April 13.—I had the pleasure of reading your reporter's interview with Michael Arlen in which Mr. A. states that he is most impressed by "your courtesy over here." Asked for examples, he says:

"For instance, when the boy in the lift deposits me at my floor I always, as a matter of course, say 'thank you.' At home that is taken as a matter of course. Over here the lift boy always says, 'you're welcome.'"

The psychological explanation of this special courtesy is as follows (and you're welcome to it): The English lift boy is so used to hear the "thank you" that he does not respond and should not respond, while his American colleague is so highly impressed by such an act of courtesy that he looks up, amazed and puzzled, feeling he must say something in gratitude. Hence the astonished utterance "you're welcome."

NEWS ABOUT EASTER.

Chicago, April 12.—What is the one big item of news today? Any one will tell you in reply that it is Easter Sunday. From the little kids up to the granddads everybody has been grooming for it, and not one in a thousand as the day came forgot what day it was.

What we look for in a newspaper is news. Today, right on the front page, we should be confronted with the fact of Easter—when Easter came last year, what the weather was, how this season differs (if it does), what the flower shop and the millinery and the dress goods shops say about their sales, how Easter affects other businesses, what the Holy Name cathedral's services are, what the Fourth Church services are, what music and sermons can be picked up over the radio and when.

What do we get from you? A few cheap lines about the weather, and those wrong. Even the world's worst newspaper could have done better.

W. L. RICHARDSON.

RESPONSIBILITY OF COLLEGES.

Chicago, April 15.—To what extent is a college responsible? If I send my son—the most delicate and susceptible and at the same time the most wonderful and valuable mechanism in the world—to John Smith, who advertises that he runs a college and solicits me to place my son in his charge and promises me that he will give him the necessary surveillance and care, as well as instruction; that he will attend to his character and help to develop him into a man of clean living and integrity, and, yet, after he gets him, he only keeps a few written records concerning him, makes a few entries as to classes and anonymous written examinations, and meanwhile the boy—delicate, plastic, in that mysterious state of efflorescence known only to early youth, ambitious for he knows not what, with plenty of gray matter, but an uncontrollable and indefinable urge from his swiftly maturing passions—is neglected, is not seen, is not called, is not watched over, is not known, is not made a friend of, is not asked about himself, is not advised, is not sympathized with, is not forewarned, is not punished, is not helped, but is allowed and forced by his environment to mold his own callow, plastic self, with never an admonition, and he selects the inviting line of least resistance and goes straight and willingly to perdition—which, by and large, may be natural—to what extent is that institution to blame? JUDEX.

AT THE CIRCUS.

Chicago, April 13. — Sam Miano, who fired a shot at a circus usher, probably had the same experience I had last year. I took my two children and bought $1.50 seats, which proved to be way at one side and in the back row right behind a big pillar so that the boys couldn't see. After the show started there were several vacant seats across the aisle and nearer the front, so we moved into them, thinking if any one should come to claim them we would move. Two ushers tried to get a dollar a seat more from me and said unless I paid it I couldn't stay. The man in front of me and the one next to me said they only paid $1.50 for their seats, which was what I paid, so I refused to move. They called the head usher and held a conference. I suppose if I hadn't been a woman they would have thrown me out, they were so mad, but I wouldn't be bullied into giving more money, as the seats cost the same as the price I paid, so I stayed. Why do people have to put up with such rough stuff from a bunch of roughnecks? A seat for $1.50 and an unoccupied seat at the same price should not be different.

FOR AN ALL AMERICAN DICTIONARY.

Lyons, Ia., April 13.—For the love of our country why should Prof. W. A. Craigie, a Briton, edit a new dictionary in American English. The British are more prejudiced toward America than any other nation under God's sun.

Why an American-English dictionary? Drop the English; cut it out entirely. Make it a dictionary in the American language, and have it edited by a thorough American, who loves his country, his language, and we have plenty such, possessing also all the ability required for such a general and universal work.

In our papers, magazines, books, sermons, and speeches cut out the adjective English, use "American" whenever reference to the language of our beloved United States of America is made. There will be no cause for ill feeling, no room for hatred. REV. JOSEPH M. TEITS, Pastor St. Boniface church.

DANGEROUS MUSICAL DOCTRINE.

Mendota, Ill., April 14.—In your editorial entitled "Jazz Again" in Monday's TRIBUNE you say, "We get nothing out of music that we have not put into it, through association or mood, and if we could divorce the Good Friday or the Venusberg music from our knowledge of what they are intended to express in their dramatic background and could present them to a jury unprepossessed with literary interpretations we are quite confident there would be no agreement on a verdict for or against the moral implications of either."

In other words, if I understand you correctly, you are saying that there is no difference in music—no such thing as good and bad music. Isn't this a dangerous doctrine? LESTER C. GEIGER.

DEFENSE SCORES AGAINST U. S. AT WHEELER'S TRIAL

Nothing to Fix; How Could He Fix It? Is Query.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

Great Falls, Mont., April 18.—[Special.]—Adjournment tonight found the government attorneys fighting hard to maintain their case against Senator urton K. Wheeler, with indications that Judge Frank S. Dietrich would decide against them Monday morning on an important phase of the case.

This concerns the evidence of H. J. leman, attorney of Billings, in regard to conversations with the Democratic senator over a government permit upon which there was no controversy at the time the senator was employed in the Gordon Campbell oil affairs.

Senator Defends Senator.

Senator Thomas J. Walsh led a terrific attack on this and all other evidence of a similar nature on the ground that Senator Wheeler could not have agreed to fix something in Washington when there was nothing to fix.

R. P. Stewart, special assistant attorney general, maintained that the controversy was in the minds of the principals at the time of the employment of the senator, but Judge Dietrich said he found it difficult to follow this line of reasoning, that the indictment must be adhered to.

He reserved until Monday a ruling on this point, which, if adverse to the government, will chip away another ck from the structure erected to pillory the young Montana radical. Defense attorneys predicted that the case will never reach the jury.

Prosecutor Offers Proof.

District Attorney John L. Slattery offered to prove through Mr. Coleman that Senator Wheeler on Feb. 15, 1923, after a long discussion of an oil land permit which had been granted to the California Oil company, stated that he knew a man in Washington who could fix it up so that Gordon Campbell would get the lowest basic royalty. The man referred to was Edwin S. oth, at that time solicitor for the department of the interior.

In the testimony of Clyde Glosser, former secretary to Campbell, this afternoon, and in that of Fred Zriny, a former employé of Campbell, this morning, the government substantiated several of the charges made against Wheeler.

Glosser told of a meeting in room 212 of the Rainbow hotel, Great Falls, Jan. , 1923, where Senator Wheeler, Campbell, W. W. Rhea, now dead, and himself were present, and where, he said, government permits were discussed.

Already Had a Lawyer.

Rhea, he said, had trouble over a permit and Campbell suggested that Wheeler could fix it up in Washington. To this Rhea replied that he already had an attorney.

"As he left the room," the witness said, "Senator Wheeler told me to send him a memorandum of the status of all the Campbell government permits and he would look into the matter and see that it was straightened out."

The following telegram was identified by Glosser and read into the evidence:

"To Gordon Campbell, Great Falls, Mont., March 8, 1923:

"I wish that you would have your office send me a detailed list of the conditions of your permits that we discussed with the Standard Oil of California in order that when I take it up with the department of the interior that I will be able to intelligently discuss the matter. B. K. WHEELER."

The telegram also told of efforts to help finance Campbell and to raise ,000,000.

WOULD LEGALIZE 1000% PROFIT FOR UNDERTAKERS

What would you say is a reasonable margin of profit for a funeral director?

A bill to prohibit undertakers from charging more than 1,000 per cent has been introduced into the state legislature of Nebraska.

Unfortunately such a law, even if passed, would not stand the test of the courts. No undertaker can be prevented from charging either 1,000 or 5,000 per cent profit on a burial casket, provided that he does not misrepresent its quality. Certainly it is to be deplored that the public, as a rule, does not know what questions to ask or how to judge the actual value of such products.

It is this fact that dishonest undertakers take advantage of, finding it easy to make more profit on a $500.00 casket than a furniture dealer, for example, would try to earn on a $2500.00 sale.

CASKETS as low as $25

Don't depend on the law or the police to protect you against the curbstone undertaker's profiteering. Protect yourself and your friends by urging them to compare Skeeles-Biddle quality and prices with those found elsewhere.

References—hundreds of them—gladly furnished on request, convincing proof that we save our clients from one-half to one-third.

The superb, new Skeeles-Biddle casket coach is everywhere admired as a fitting complement to the many other high class and distinctive features of Skeeles-Biddle service, our luxurious limousines and our two beautiful memorial chapels, the finest of their kind west of New York.

It is well to remember that the opportunity never comes to correct the mistakes that follow when an inexperienced or careless undertaker is engaged, and that no matter how much he may overcharge you it is difficult to recover any part of your loss later.

A telephone call involves no obligations and will instantly bring a member of our firm to any part of Chicago or Suburbs.

U. OF C., U. OF I., N. U. $20,000,000 RICHER IN YEAR

Evanston Institution Given New $500,000.

With the announcement yesterday that the Wieboldt foundation has given $500,000 to Northwestern university for use on the commerce building in its downtown campus, donations to the state's three great universities have reached more than $20,000,000 in the last twelve months to date.

Presidents of the various colleges interpreted the golden gifts from the midwest as a primary reason why Illinois schools are among the nation's leaders in education and research.

Second Such Gift in Two Days.

It was the second such gift in two days from the same source, the University of Chicago also getting $500,000. Not neglected is the state's institution, the University of Illinois, which got $100,000 Friday from Boetius H. Sullivan for a Roger C. Sullivan memorial radio station.

From private donors and state sources — the latter confined to the state university's aid—twelve months have seen the treasuries of Illinois, Northwestern, and Chicago enriched by more than $20,000,000.

The most ambitious money raising program is that of Chicago. It has set 1925 as the period to raise an endowment fund of $17,500,000. Since Jan. 1 it has raised $6,028,000 of that sum.

Principal donors are: General educational board of New York, $2,000,000; Julius Rosenwald, $1,000,000; the alumni, $985,000; and now the Wieboldt foundation with its $500,000.

N. U. Gifts Total $8,000,000.

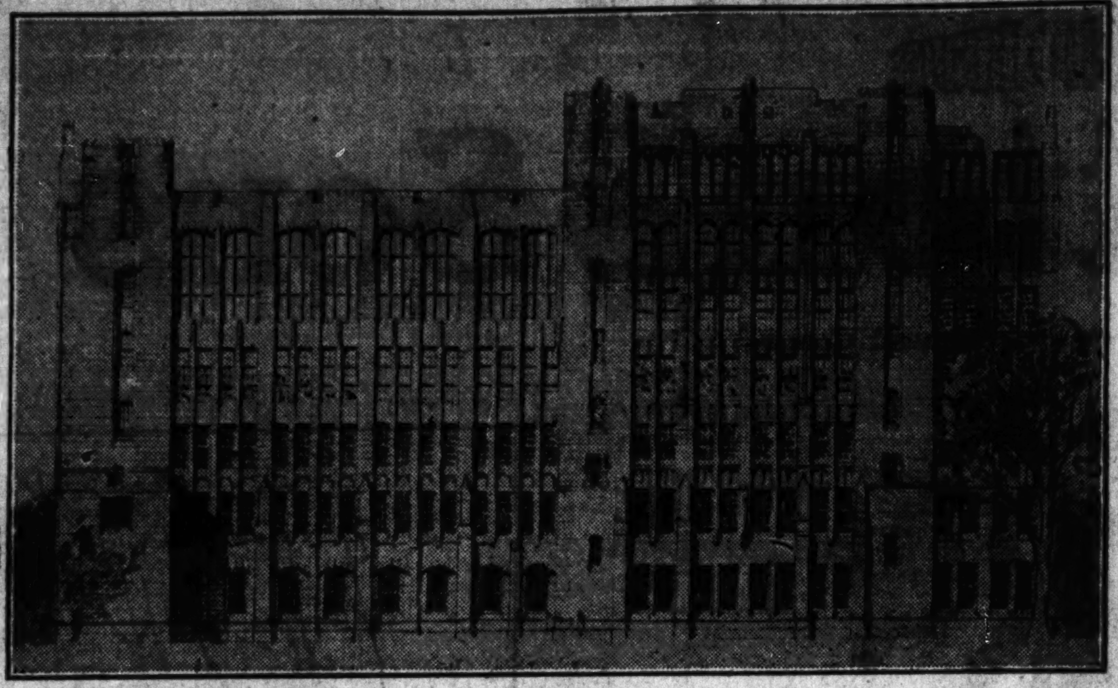
Northwestern has been given $8,000,000 during the last year, most of it for expansion of the downtown campus, with its law, medical, commerce, dental plants, and auditorium. In addition to yesterday's half million dollars from the Wieboldt foundation chief givers have been: Mrs. Montgomery Ward, $4,000,000; Milton H. Wilson, $600,000; Mrs. Levi Mayer, $500,000; Mrs. Ellen M. Thorne, $250,000.

The University of Illinois gets comparatively few private bequests. The Illinois State Electrical association gave $5,000 recently, six Chicago public utilities chipped in a total of $25,000, seven downstate companies gave $5,000, and the $100,000 from Mr. Sullivan made a twelve months total of $145,000.

But the state has appropriated a biennial budget of $10,732,000, making this year's available fund for the state university about $5,366,000.

With Chicago expecting $11,000,000 more this year and with Northwestern looking forward to proportionate gifts, it is considered safe to assume that the west will have given its three great Illinois schools a pre-Christmas gift of between $30,000,000 and $35,000,000 before the New Year rolls around.

Proposed Wieboldt Hall of Northwestern University



The gift of $500,000 by the Wieboldt foundation to Northwestern university's school of commerce means the early completion of a $1,100,000 building on the McKinlock Memorial campus, university officials say. The above is the architects' drawing for the building.

LEATHERNECKS IN CITY PLAN MARINE WEEK

The Marine post of the American Legion is planning to make next week Marine week in Chicago.

On Tuesday night at the Fort Dearborn hotel at 6:30 the Gyrenes will hold a dinner. Every ex-marine is invited to attend. Special acts of vaudeville have been provided and Frank Comerford is to speak. On Friday night at 8 o'clock a dance will be held in the rose room of the Hotel La Salle and ever ex-marine is invited to attend.

Lieut. C. Wayland Brooks, D. S. C., commander of the Marine post, estimates that there are about 2,000 former marines in the city. Many of these men were wounded and incapacitated during the war. The purpose of the Marine post is to develop into an effective and efficient service organization to render any necessary assistance to these former comrades.

Next month the leathernecks will hold a marine fathers' night, at which time every living marine will be invited to bring his father and they, with the fathers of the marines who lost their lives during and since the war, will be guests of honor.

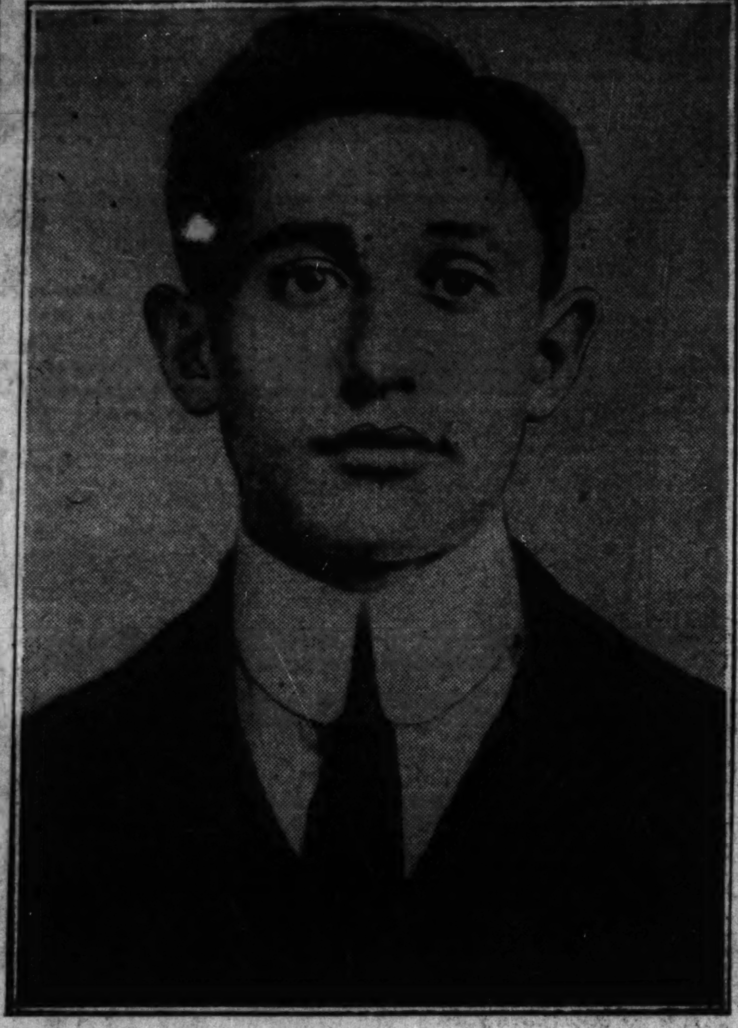
MIDGET SLAYER, BANK ROBBER IS CAPTURED HERE

Caught in Library After Four Years' Search.

Midget Bandit Seized in Library



Henry Ferneke, diminutive bandit, hunted for four years as the leader of a gang of bank robbers which has obtained more than a half million dollars in Chicago, is arrested in the Crerar library. He is wanted in the east as a murderer.

pounds, the detectives told each other. He lived under a lucky star.

A year ago Lieut. John Ryan and Sergts. Andrew Aitkin, Arthur Murphy, George Barker, and William Brown were told to get Fernekes. They were destined to be successful after many disappointments.

Meanwhile Fernekes was operating with reckless abandon. He robbed bank after bank, his two guns prominently displayed.

Friday, a man who gave his name as Max Abrahamson was arrested. He whispered that he knew where Fernekes would be found. He was hidden in a Shakespeare avenue cell while Lieut. Ryan's squad followed his instructions.

They had been given innumerable tips to go to dingy poolrooms, to disreputable flats, to saloons disguised as soft drink parlors. This time they were told to go to a library just outside the loop and on the crowded boulevard.

Detectives Go to Library.

Yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock the five men took the elevator to the fourteenth floor of the Crerar library. They went to the room where the books on photography were kept. At a small table in a corner, his head bent over a work on color photography, sat Fernekes intense in his study.

There was no confusion. Barker approached the youth from behind and suddenly "strong-armed" him. The others crowded around. Fernekes smiled and said, "Well, you fellows aren't so slow, after all."

In cunningly contrived holsters under Fernekes' arms were found the two revolvers he always carried. They were taken from him and he went peaceably to the detective bureau.

Detectives Are Praised.

When the news spread, Chief of Police Morgan Collins and Capt. John Stege congratulated the lieutenant and his squad. There will probably be promotions for the men who did what the entire police force tried to do for four years.

At the detective bureau Fernekes met Mrs. Annie Beacham, 49 years old, 4148 West 22d street, and two other women who were said to have played parts in his life. The names of the two women are being withheld pending investigation.

Fernekes was said to have been studying chemistry to perfect a bomb with which he could temporarily blind bank employés and a chemical to poen safes without causing a noise.

Fernekes had been a student of chemistry at St. Viator's academy, Kankakee, Ill., from which he was graduated. He took a two years' course in manual training at Lake View High school. Combining these two studies, he became fitted for the profession of bank robber and safe blower.

He was a son of "Lizzie" and "Pete" Fernekes, who ran the Village inn, a notorious resort at Erie and Clark streets, twenty years ago.

It was as the son of "Pete" and "Lizzie" rather than as the student that he responded to the questions put to him at the detective bureau.

"This is all the bunk," he told the men who had captured him. "Those Pennsylvania and New York murder raps are no good. Get Clarence Darrow. You boys will be whistling for me yet."

ROBBERS GET $16,000

Pay roll robbers and highwaymen yesterday escaped with loot worth $16,000 in four spectacular raids.

The first was in the fur shop of Constantine Pokar, 4555 Broadway, where a handsomely gowned woman was an accomplice of two armed men. She entered the shop and had Mrs. Pokar show her a neckpiece. Soon the two men came in and locked the proprietor and his wife in a rear room.

Then they took the choicest furs, valued at $7,000, while the woman went outside and started the engine of an automobile in which all three drove away.

William Ding of the O. D. Gammon teaming company, 118 North Ada street, lost a $4,000 pay roll when five men held him up in Loomis street. They crowded his car to the curb and took the satchel, containing the money he was bringing from the bank. Ding furnished the police with a license number of the robber car.

Two men escaped with 110 suits of men's clothing valued at $3,000 which Thomas Bluett, driver for a loop store, was trucking from a freight house at 1110 West 16th street to State street. The robbers kidnaped Bluett, transferred all the suits to their auto, and carried him several blocks before throwing him out.

Three armed men got $2,000, most of it in cash and the rest in checks, when they held up four employés yesterday afternoon in the Home Crystal laundry office, 5050 South Halsted street. Only the office force was present when the robbers entered. They took the money from the cashier's cage and fled in an auto.

Police early yesterday arrested eleven men and two women, suspects in search of four thugs who shot George F. Pugsley, American Express company messenger, and escaped with a currency shipment of $10,000 as it was being dropped at the Rock Island station at Blue Island.

Two raids were made, one on the flat of Joseph Tomasino, poolroom proprietor at 1437 West Taylor street, and the other on the home of Ralph Avino, 1411 West Taylor street.

In the second shooting affray of a week between police and Mexicans, Patrolman Arthur Fitzgerald, 1218 West 31st street, was shot and probably fatally wounded. Antonio Sepeda and Jose Cillicana were captured by Patrolman Charles McMullen, Fitzgerald's partner in a flivver squad. Cillicana was identified by Fitzgerald as the man who shot him.

HEIGHTS WON BY KELLOGG WITH CREDO OF WORK

"I Never Had Help," Is His Epitome.

This is the third and last of the little stories on "The Boy I Grew Up With" by the new members of President Coolidge's cabinet. One was Jardine, the Rocky mountain boy; one was Sargent, the Green mountain boy; now speaks Kellogg, the Mississippi valley boy. All were farm boys; all worked hard, and all have risen to high positions—Kellogg to the highest of them all—and my guess is that he had the hardest row to hoe.

BY JAMES O'DONNELL BENNETT.

Washington, D. C., April 16.—[Special.]—Any American boy who doubts that going to college is worth the struggle — every struggle it may cost him — ought to talk the matter over with Frank B. Kellogg, the man who holds the first place in Calvin Coolidge's "official family."

Frank Billings Kellogg is 69 years old.

The days when he would have given anything to go to college lie fifty years behind him.

Wins Own Education.

In that half century he made himself a good Latinist, an authority on the French revolution and on Napoleon as statesman as distinguished from warrior, and an authority on international law. He has accumulated—specializing in history—one of the best private libraries in the Mississippi valley. He has obtained some of the choicest honors an American can obtain—among them United States senatorship, ambassadorship to Great Britain, and presidency of the American Bar association.

Today he holds a position only forty-three Americans—I am not counting the secretaries of state ad interim—have held in the 136 years of our constitutional history. Some of them were our greatest Americans—Jefferson, John Marshall, J. Q. Adams, Clay, Calhoun, Webster, Edward Everett, Seward, Evarts, Blaine, Bayard, Gresham, Olney, Root, Knox, and Hughes whom Kellogg now succeeds. But:

The fact that, fighting hard for any kind of an education, he had to miss a college education, still grieves the present American secretary of state. It would not be fair to say that it irks him, for he is not pettish. Nor does he regard the lack as a discredit. But he does regard it as a deprivation and it still is on his mind.

Universities have given him LL. D.'s. But they don't console him for the B. A. he had not the chance to win for himself.

Always Views Lack with Regret.

In his half hour retrospect on the Minnesota boy he grew up with in the '60s, I am sure he mentioned the deprivation half a dozen times—saying once:

"It's not a fact I'm proud of"—and the grave emphasis with which he mentioned it made me cringe for thinking of the hours and days I wasted when I was being given the chance he still yearns over.

"In my day," he said, "law schools and colleges never were in my reach. I've always regretted the lack of the college chance and what it could have given me. I had to get that my way."

His way was the hardest.

His father and mother—she was a Billings—moved from northern New York into the southeastern corner of Minnesota when it was new country and their Frank was 9. They built a cabin near a hamlet called Viola. Viola is still a hamlet, but Rochester, the town nearest it, is now world famous as the seat of the hospitals and schools of the Mayo brothers. Dr. Will Mayo is today one of the closest friends Frank B. Kellogg ever has had.

Work Is Key of Life.

At Viola the keynote of Kellogg's life struck. That note was work. By it he still lives. The afternoon he gave THE TRIBUNE thirty minutes, secretaries kept their eyes on the clock for him, because at a certain hour important pouches leave, carrying diplomatic papers, and there would be last minute documents to sign, and he had to keep his eyes on 4 o'clock because at that hour his wife was to give a reception to diplomats. The room he was sitting in looked toward the monument and the far reaches of the Potomac.

Portraits of men who have made and who have muddled American history hung all around him. Raising a finger as he sat there in the big room he could be in almost instant touch with remote capitals and chancelleries, and by releasing a few words he could worry ambassadors—even make them work—and could set French deputies to shrieking.

Pondering those matters, my mind went back to the hamlet of Viola, where the keynote struck him at the age of 13. From then on work, work, work. All kinds of work—milking the cows, teaming, plowing, sowing, reaping. Between whiles a term of district school in the winters and a term of district school in the summers. Never any high school.

He summed it up in his detached, unresentful way:

"I never had any help from anybody."

Little Time for Play.

At 19 he moved over to Rochester to study law, still wringing out of life everything that he got out of it. He swept out Mr. Eckholdt's office, built Mr. Eckholdt's fires, looked up Mr. Eckholdt's references, copied Mr. Eckholdt's papers. That was by day. In the evening he went out and took care of the horses and cows of a farmer living on the outskirts of Rochester.

Such were the Kellogg boy's winters. When spring came he drove a team and helped the sowers. The pay was $13 a month. In harvest time he bound up after the reapers—$2.50 a day for that, and for thrashing $1.50 a day. To this hour he still mentions those sums with respect. They carried him through more winters of law school—they and the Rochester cows he fed at nightfall.

Spending money?

He didnt' have any to spend. No help from home—"not a cent."

Amusements?

He didn't have any. It was work.

His Hard Won Culture.

For, you see, all this time he was studying law he was doing double study. Day time he gave to law. And at night, after he had tucked in the cows, he had to bend to these cultural studies that high school and college would have given him—Latin, history, government, literature.

Now the point of all this is that the Kellogg boy got the habit of work so ground into him that when the man Kellogg wanted an amusement he simply turned to another kind of work. It was thus he became learned in international law. That came out when I asked him about his relaxations. He confessed to international law—calling it "a sort of side issue." Thirty years ago he took it up as "a cultural study," to use his phrase. United States senatorship and membership of the foreign relations committee of the senate lay two and twenty years away; ambassadorship to Great Britain, eight and twenty. But when they did come the fruits of the study he had begun for the culture in it were very valuable to him. In his present position they were, he said, invaluable.

Using One's Opportunities.

Frank B. Kellogg's great, nay, his greatest, predecessor as secretary of state of the United States—Daniel Webster—once said in giving counsel to a young man, "after all, progress in knowledge depends less frequently on the opportunities enjoyed than on the use made of them."

That's was Frank Kellogg's way. He did not "enjoy" opportunities. He "used" them. And usually he had first to make them.

What made Kellogg was that he was always learning something. And learning something he could not use at the moment was his ideal of relaxation. Later its moment would come.

He makes his side issues supreme assets.

He is more than tenacious. He is pertinacious—in the good sense.

The trouble with him as a man enjoyable to the man of casual contacts with him is that to him many things—including this interview—do not seem important.

He fairly writhed when I tried to drag the record of achievement from him. "I won't give you an interview," he said. "I hate this blowing my own horn!"

So I said that if he would give me a copy of his privately printed monograph on Napoleon I would go away.

He said that he would—gladly.

Chicago Tomorrow Opens 2 Week Cleanup Campaign

Chicago's face is due for a general cleanup and scrubbing, beginning tomorrow, according to plans of city officials working in coöperation with the Association of Commerce. For two weeks the citizens are asked to work getting rid of rats, flies, rubbish, ashes, bottles, stagnant pools, and whatever else you can think of that should be cleaned up.

ROME WORRIED OVER EUROPEAN CHURCH OUTLOOK

Leaders Placing Hopes on Marx Victory.

BY GEORGE SELDES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1925: By The Chicago Tribune.]

ROME, April 18.—In the vatican's foreign office it was said today that the Roman Catholic church is watching with serious interest the important developments affecting the church in Hungary, Czecho-Slovakia, and Germany and France. Considerable trouble affecting the church has occurred in these countries. The papal nuncio to Hungary has returned to Rome and is not returning to Budapest, giving rise to rumors of troubles in the relations between the Roman church with the Horthy government.

In Czecho-Slovakia it is admitted that a serious situation is faced. According to one report, the clergy in that country are demanding that the vow of celibacy be removed. In other words, the clergy there want the same system as in the Greek Catholic church in Russia, where certain priests are permitted to marry.

Separation Row Worries.

The official conflict with the Czecho-Slovakian government concerns the separation of the church and the state, and at present the battle is on the subject of state holidays. The Benes government recently proclaimed as a legal holiday the birthday of John Huss, founder of the Hussites, who was burned at the stake, a martyr. The Roman church proposed the birthday of one of its martyrs for a legal holiday, which was refused. On this less important question, however, rests the entire question of the church and state separation.

The Vatican continues to take the liveliest interest in Chancellor Marx' efforts to become president of Germany. Many reports reaching Rome show the great stir on the religious question in the present German campaign.

Will Affect German Vote.

In the center of this movement are the monarchists in Bavaria. Bavaria also is Catholic and must choose between Gen. von Hindenburg, representing monarchist tendencies, and Chancellor Marx, representing its religious convictions. There is reason to believe, according to Catholic authorities here, that the Bavarian vote will show a considerable swing towards the Catholic Chancellor Marx rather than the monarchist Gen. von Hindenburg.

BEG YOUR PARDON

Timothy A. Smiddy, minister plenipotentiary of the Irish Free State, states that he was misquoted in THE TRIBUNE on April 12 during his talk before the Chicago council on foreign relations. He said he used the word "country," not "republic," in his reference to Ireland.

A photograph of Gen. Charles G. Dawes printed in yesterday's TRIBUNE was credited to Chambers studios. It should have been credited to Eugene L. Ray.

BIG MENAGERIE HOWLS IN FEAR AT ROSE MARIE

Most things that happen at a circus don't happen if we adhere strictly to the truth, but now and then something really happens that actually happened. It was like that last night—and Health Commissioner Herman N. Bundesen is trotted forth as a character witness for the press agent who tells this story:

"Rose Marie is a lamb, ten inches high and white and cute. She was given to us by J. Ogden Armour. She has behaved herself for three days, but tonight she became mischievious.

"She slipped out of her home and went to play among the elephants. She wanted only to play with the baby elephant, Charlie Ed, but the twenty-five big bulls were as scared of her as they would be of a mouse. They stormed and tore at their chains. Soon they had the lions and tigers roaring with them. The laughing hyenas laughed. The monkeys chattered. The giraffes gargled tonsiline—all the animals joined in the chorus. The crowd was frightened for a minute or two, feared a tiger or lion was loose — all because of a lamb."

Attorneys Acquitted of Concealing Rondout Loot

Little Rock, Ark., April 18.—Wallace Davis and Tom Poe, attorneys, were acquitted by a federal court jury here today of charges of possessing and concealing $100,000 worth of stolen bonds, part of the loot of the $2,000,000 Rondout, Ill., train robbery. The jury was out an hour and fifteen minutes. Similar indictments are pending against the two men in Chicago.

Called Paranoiac; Escapes Trial for Asylum.

St. Paul, Neb., April 18.—[By the Associated Press.]—Mrs. Emmanuel Sorenson, 28, wife of a section foreman, is in the county jail tonight charged with the deaths by poisoning of eight persons, including three of her own children, her first husband, the latter's mother, and three other children.

Found to be mentally irresponsible, she will be taken to the state insane asylum as soon as possible and there will be no prosecution, County Attorney Dobrey of St. Paul said tonight.

Seven of Her Victims.

The following deaths are attributed to Mrs. Sorenson:

Joe Weldman, her first husband, who died Sept. 20, 1920, Mrs. Wilhelmina Weldman, her mother-in-law, who died shortly after her son's death; Minnie Weldman, 5, died Sept. 7, 1920; Delores Sorenson, 1, daughter of her second marriage, died Feb. 19, 1924; Viola Cooper, 1, daughter of Weldman's sister, died July 23, 1918; Clifford Cooper, four months, died Aug. 20, 1922; Ruth Brock, less than 1 year old, died Feb. 20, 1923.

Another of her children, whose name is unknown, was also said to have died of poison administered by Mrs. Sorenson, the county attorney said. Mrs. Sorenson, he said, was stoical and would make no statement, except that "another one of my children died of convulsions recently."

Children's Illness Leads to Arrest.

Authorities said that the investigation started about three weeks ago. According to Dobrey, the woman had visited the Irwin Knott family at Danneborg recently and two of the children became suddenly ill of convulsions. The children, he continued, said they had eaten some cookies given them by Mrs. Sorenson.

Saliva from the children was then taken to a chemist at Lincoln, Neb., who found that poison had been administered. The investigation then led to the arrest of Mrs. Sorenson, Dobrey said.

Dr. Fast of the Ingleside institution near Hastings, a mental improvement institution, said that Mrs. Sorenson is a paranoiac. Her maiden name was Della Sidel. Her husband and two children reside at Danneborg.

Draws $480 Out of Bank to Pay Taxes; Pocket Picked

Daniel Jurkovich, 10300 Hoxie avenue, a laborer, drew $480 out of the bank yesterday to pay his taxes. On a Torrence avenue car, three young men jostled him. He saw one of them take his money and asked the motorman to hold the street car at 92d street and Baltimore avenue while he went in search of a policeman. When he returned, the car was gone.

SOLONS VIEW SITE OF PROPOSED PORT, TO USE WOLF LAKE

PETER S. KRUMP.

Inspection of the site of the proposed Wolf Lake harbor project was made yesterday by a house appropriations subcommittee headed by Rep. Peter S. Krump of Chicago. The inspection was made for the purpose of recommending to the legislature action on the Schnackenberg bill for creation of a commission to act jointly with Indiana authorities on plans for developing the proposed interstate harbor in the Calumet district.

The special commission provided for in the Schnackenberg bill would be required to report to the next legislature on the question of creating a harbor district and an interstate board for developing the project. The bill appropriates $50,000 for the commission.

Wolf Lake lies on the Illinois-Indiana border and is connected with Lake Michigan by the shallow Wolf river about three quarters of a mile long.

Three Workmen Injured When Brick Wall Falls

Three laborers working in the basement of an apartment building under construction at 70th place and Paxton avenue were seriously injured yesterday when a brick wall collapsed burying them. The men, Philip Laporte, 478 West 26th street; John Cossey, 7949 Evans avenue, and John Casey, 6540 Drexel avenue, were stunned and suffered internal injuries.

ARRESTED IN PAY ARGUMENT.

An argument over salary due George W. Hamilton, 53, resulted yesterday in the arrest of three other salesmen and their manager, all employed by the No-Kol company, 215 North Michigan avenue. They are accused of assaulting Hamilton. The men are K. E. Curtis, Thomas Kipping, Donald Melville and E. E. Melville, the manager.

ARSENIC WIDOW HELD AS SLAYER FOR GRAND JURY

Mrs. Anna Cunningham, middle aged housewife, who has admitted she killed three of her children with arsenic and sought to kill a fourth, was arraigned in her cell at Crown Point, Ind., before Justice of the Peace H. H. Kemp yesterday and ordered held to the Lake county Circuit court for grand jury action on a charge of first degree murder.

In the warrant she is charged with murdering her 10 year old son, Walter, in whose body Coroner's Chemist William D. McNally of Chicago reported the finding of a large quantity of arsenic.

State's Attorney August Bremer was present to block any move to arraign Mrs. Cunningham before a sanity commission until after the grand jury had time to act. Mr. Bremer won his point over Mrs. Cunningham's counsel, Al Gavit of Gary, retained by the daughter, Mae Cunningham, who is only 17.

Check Victims Identify Man Held in Robbery

Fred Powell, alleged colored bandit, who was captured several days ago after he is said to have held up a Great Atlantic & Pacific Co. store, was identified by six persons yesterday as a passer of worthless checks totaling $200.

At the North American Restaurant you "serve yourself." We don't need to add anything to our prices to cover "service". So, we can give you big portions of the finest quality food at low prices. For instance:

Whole Baby Lobster (Broiled or boiled with melted butter and chile sauce) 75c—an example of North American quality food at the lowest prices

Broiled or boiled live lobsters are among the choicest of sea-foods. They are such a delicacy that many people will pay almost any price for them. For that reason most restaurants and hotels charge anywhere from $1.25 to $2.50 for a lobster. Yet here at the North American Restaurant, you pay only 75 cents for a whole Baby Lobster—broiled or boiled—with melted butter and chile sauce.

Yet in spite of our low price this restaurant has become so famous as the "Home of the Baby Lobster" that many people come here particularly to get them, knowing they can't get anything finer at any price. We cook only Baby Lobsters—the tenderest, sweetest caught. And they are specially selected for us, and shipped out to us alive.

And this is only one of the many astonishing food values which you get by "serving yourself" here at the North American Restaurant.

Among our other specialties are:

Pork Tenderloin: 45c
Fried Premium Chicken: with bacon and cream gravy or giblet sauce. Dark meat 55c
White meat 65c
Tenderloin Steak: A thick, juicy steak, with French fried potatoes and lima beans 85c

And for Breakfast:—
Honey Waffles: With 3 strips of bacon or Mickelberry's Old Farm sausage, butter and pure maple sap or honey 25c
Bacon and Eggs: Two fresh Fox's Snowhite eggs, fried in butter and 4 strips of bacon 30c

POLISH ARTISTS PLAY WELL IN BRIGHT ATTIRE

Peasant Orchestra Is Purely Nationalistic.

BY EDWARD MOORE.

A stranger coming into Orchestra hall yesterday afternoon might have believed that he was about to see a folk dance festival. Seldom has the stage been so colorfully decorated by a masculine organization. It was all long white cloaks trimmed with bright red, red caps surmounted by peacock feathers, long boots, everything that the ordinary observer is accustomed not to see worn by mere males.

But instead of dancing gyratory, breath taking mazurkas, they played them. They were the Polish Peasant orchestra of Warsaw, Petrograd, Berlin, Vienna, and points west.

Most Nationalistic Artists.

Coming into Chicago with an irreducible minimum of advance publicity, these players disclosed themselves as a curious and rather fascinating group, the most purely nationalistic of any foreign organization that has come here yet. With the exception of "The Star Spangled Banner"—and that was coupled with an anthem of their own country—the program was entirely Polish.

The aforesaid stranger would probably have found some unknown names on the program. Chopin he would probably have recognized, and possibly Moniuszko, but how about Noskowski and Lewandowski and Zelenski and Powiadowski? There were polonaises on the program, likewise mazurkas, overtures, groups of songs, other groups of dances, popular music of various sorts and persuasions.

Jazz Manifestations Old Stuff.

Stanislaw Namyslowski, the conductor, and the son of the man who organized this orchestra on his estate in Poland some half century ago, was differentiated from his forty-five or fifty players by a somewhat more elaborate display of colors and by boots of larger displacement. Part of the time he wielded a baton; occasionally he took up a violin and played with his men. From the encouragement he gave them to indulge in whistles, shouts, and various other symphonically unorthodox sounds during some of the dance tunes, one infers that certain jazz manifestations are old stuff in Poland. Quite a bit of the program was composed by him.

As a matter of fact the Polish Peasant orchestra plays some things extremely well, using good tone most of the time, and laying into dance numbers with an uncommonly exhilarating rythmic pulsation. It has a curious habit of marking emphasis with detached, semi-staccato notes, but it has been trained into smoothly working efficiency on anything it attempts. Altogether, an interesting organization.

STEALS IN CHURCH

CONSTANCE RIENER.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

While men and women waited in line for confessions at St. Clara's Roman Catholic church, 64th street and Woodlawn avenue, yesterday afternoon, Constance Riener, 18 years old, 6548 Kimbark avenue, went quietly among the pews and collected pocketbooks containing several hundreds of dollars.

Complaints about stolen articles in the church had become so numerous that Sergt. John McGinley had been stationed in the church. He watched the pretty young girl gather up a dozen pocketbooks and start to leave the church. Then he took her into custody.

At the police station the girl admitted that she had been living on the proceeds of robberies in churches.

PROSECUTION OF LEGISLATORS IS FERGUS PLAN NOW

BY FRANK BUTZOW.

Illinois legislators who continue to disobey the constitutional mandate for reapportionment will face criminal prosecution for malfeasance of office.

JOHN B. FERGUS.

This new challenge was hurled at defiant state solons yesterday by John B. Fergus, jinx of the legislature in 1915, rteasury watch dog, and grizzled champion of the rights of Chicago, where he was born eighty-two years ago.

Mr. Fergus revealed his latest plan yesterday in preparing to go to Springfield this week for the renewed battle over the reapportionment resolution in the house. It was passed in the senate by a vote of 32 to 8 last Wednesday.

When the smoke of final battle has cleared away Mr. Fergus plans to seek indictments from a Sangamon county grand jury against legislators who oppose reapportionment.

He will seek the aid of State's Attorney Ernest Fullenwider in the prosecutions.

Mr. Fergus said yesterday that he intends to show legislators that the oath of a public official is something that cannot be taken lightly or ignored. Prosecutions against individual legislators constitute only part of Mr. Fergus' program, which is being carried out by the constitutional apportionment legion.

Prepares Suits Against Assembly.

His attorney, John A. Watson, is preparing the preliminaries for suits against the general assembly as a body similar to the famous Fergus suits of 1915 when the supreme court undid the labors of an entire session and laid down important rulings affecting the state government.

Members of the house who voted against reapportionment two months ago when the Schnackenberg resolution was before them will have an opportunity to go on record anew when the Haenisch resolution passed by the senate comes up. If the house passes the resolution the eight senators who voted against it probably will have another chance. The resolution calls for a special committee of five senators and five representatives to draft a bill redistricting the state.

Even Gov. Small may not escape prosecution, Attorney Watson said. The fact is recognized that it will be difficult to draft a satisfactory reapportionment bill, and should the legislature adjourn its regular session without revamping the district lines, the governor will be asked to call a special session for that purpose. His refusal to do so, Mr. Watson declared, would make him a defendant in a malfeasance case along with the defiant legislators.

Conviction for malfeasance carries penalties that mean forfeiture of office, and bar the convicted persons forever from holding public office again in Illinois. Mr. Watson said he is going through court records of the forty-eight states in laying the groundwork for the contemplated prosecutions.

Those Against the Change.

A legislative reapportionment on the basis of the 1920 census would give Cook county five additional districts and change a number of downstate district lines.

These eight senators are on record against the Haenisch resolution: Bohrer [Rep., McLean], Hicks [Rep., Winnebago], Burgess [Rep., Wayne], Shaw [Dem., Saline], Dunlap [Rep., Champaign], Swift [Rep., Lake], Emmons [Dem., Lawrence], and Telford [Rep., Marion].

QUARREL OVER $2 PAY, UNION DUES, PUTS 3 IN GRAVE

East St. Louis, Ill., April 18.—An argument over 50 cents' union dues and $1.25 shortage in pay is believed by police to have caused a revolver battle on a street corner in the heart of the business section here today, resulting in the death of three men, one of them a policeman.

Peter Totsch, 57, business agent for the Plumbers' Laborers' union, was fatally shot by Christopher Columbus Gwaltney, 32, union member, who also shot and killed Patrolman David Mohler, 51, before being himself killed by Detective Sergeant George Burns.

Totsch, police said, found Gwaltney a job as pipe fitter. Through a misunderstanding Gwaltney had been underpaid one day's wages and Totsch promised the extra pay this week.

Gwaltney was required by the union to pay 50 cents per day dues, and refused to do so until he had received his day's wages. In the ensuing argument Gwaltney shot Totsch through the heart, and Mohler, who attempted to interfere, three times.

PRINCE REVIEWS 20,000 IN WILD TRIBAL DURBAR

Many Die of Hardship on Way to Ceremony.

KANO, Nigeria, April 18.—[By the Associated Press.]—The Prince of Wales, who has seen many gorgeous pageants in strange corners of the earth, today witnessed one of the most stirring and colorful spectacles of his career—the durbar, or reception for native princes, held here in his honor. To the unceasing throb of tom toms and the weird strains of native orchestras, more than 20,000 African troops, costumed in brilliant colors and with fantastic trappings, maneuvered with amazing skill before the prince's reviewing stand for several hours.

PRINCE OF WALES.

A vast native crowd of spectators, giving every evidence of wild excitement, cheered constantly to the roll of the drums and the yelling of "devil dancers," and the multitude of horsemen dashed magnificently across the great field.

Many Die on Way.

Before the durbar began at 8 a. m. every jungle road for many miles was jammed with persons endeavoring to reach the scene. Most of them had tramped all night, many had traveled for several days, and numbers died of the heat and jungle perils.

The emirs from all surrounding native districts appeared in new costumes, mostly costly and colorful. Their leader was the emir of Kano, who rules more than two million subjects.

The prince was particularly thrilled as troops of cavalry, strikingly caparisoned, many carrying ancient swords that date to the period of the crusades, dashed directly toward his stand, with extended lances, sweeping away in waves when almost upon him, in a remarkable display of horsemanship

Some of the horsemen wore ancient suits of chain mail. Some bodies of soldiers, wearing brilliant red uniforms, carried golden trumpets five feet long, wore plumed helmets, and were armed with bows.

Reviewed by Prince.

After the spectacle the emirs were received by the prince. They approached his dais in dignified attitudes and then knelt respectfully—some throwing themselves at full length upon the ground. Then they squatted in a semi-circle fully fifty yards away to hear the prince's address.

However, through the official interpreter the prince interposed, "bring them in from there. They cannot hear."

SEEK EX-CHIEF OF KLAN AS SLAYER IN POISON DEATH

Indianapolis, Ind., April 18.—[United Press.]—Although under indictment on a charge of first degree murder for the death of Miss Madge Oberholtzer, D. C. Stephenson, former leader of the Indiana Ku Klux Klan, was still at liberty today.

For three hours the capiases for the arrests lay on the desk in the sheriff's office with no apparent effort being made to serve them.

Sheriff Too Busy.

Finally Prosecutor Remy called the sheriff's office and demanded the cause of the delay. A deputy explained he had been to busy to serve the capiases.

Return of the murder indictment followed closely the coroner's inquest into the death of Miss Oberholtzer, a young educational worker, which resulted from poison taken after the alleged attack.

The three men were charged in the indictment with refusing medical attention to relieve the young woman's suffering until it was too late to counteract the poison.

The girl's story of the alleged kidnaping and assault as told at the inquest by her father, George Oberholtzer, furnished the basis of the murder indictment.

Lured to Home.

Miss Oberholtzer, according to the testimony, was lured to Stephenson's home by a telephone call, compelled to drink liquor, and forced to accompany him on a midnight train ride to Hammond, Ind.

She said she was repeatedly assaulted.

Finally, it was testified at the inquest, she eluded Stephenson's guards long enough to buy poison and take it.

Upon learning of her act, Stephenson started back to Indianapolis with her in an automobile, and throughout the trip refused her pleas to stop and call a doctor, according to the evidence.

SENATOR DEFIES DRYS; HOLDS HIS HOOTCH PARTY

Offers Them Drinks, but Refuses Samples.

leaders were invited by the senator. He said there had been no complaint and unless there was he could obtain no search warrant.

"So far as I can determine, the senator is not violating the federal law," Mr. Madden said.

Called "Gentleman's Affair."

After Madden's visit, it became a question whether any of the other forces of law would take a hand.

Chief of Police Jacob Laubenheimer indicated plainly that he has no intentions of interfering in such little affairs as the senator's. He called it a "gentleman's affair." and then added:

"Neither I nor any other member of the police department has been invited to the senator's party, and as gentlemen we will not intrude."

Sheriff Charles C. Reichenbach has never been known to make a dry raid. He merely smiled, and when asked about it said:

"Don't ask me foolish questions. What the senator does in his own home is none of my business."

Couldn't Be Found.

Capt. Roy Fuller, state enforcement officer for the Milwaukee district, could not be found in any of his usual haunts last night. He lives at a downtown hotel, and there it was stated that he was out on some investigation. He did not appear at Senator Gettelman's home, however, and so the inference was that it was some other matter which interested him.

That left only the Rev. MacInnes to do something; and the Rev. MacInnes' chair at the party was saved for him and empty.

A goblet of sparkling cider stood alongside of it all evening towards his coming, and some one drank it at last and turned down the empty glass, quoting old Omar as he did it.

Couldn't Find Pastor.

At Dr. MacInnes' home it was said over the phone early in the evening that Dr. MacInnes was at the Bay View branch of the Y. M. C. A., where he had taken dinner. No one at the Bay View branch of the Y. M. C. A. could be induced to answer the telephone. A ring to the preacher's home later elicited the information that if he couldn't be reached there he "must have gone soliciting after dinner."

As the party in the senator's home progressed and everybody became friendly in increasing good spirits, the men talking and smoking and drinking and the women talking and playing cards and occasionally drinking, also.

It seemed quite a gathering. Among the first to arrive of the senator's friends was Eddie Moha, former pugilist, one time welterweight champion of the world. Then came Roy Wickes and Mrs. Wickes, and then John Ferris, candidate for lieutenant governor of Wisconsin in the recent elections—the only Coolidge candidate on the state ticket.

Then came Frank E. Davidson, chairman of the Republican county committee, and in regular order there followed Mr. and Mrs. H. Bohnen, Mr. and Mrs. Otto Hafeman, Mrs. S. Gettelman, the senator's mother; Mr. and Mrs. William Landt, and Mr. and Mrs. Bob Matuska.

The senator was jovial. He considered his brush with Madden a distinct victory.

"I won my first point right there," he said. "It was a victory for the people, for the workingman. That's what I'm driving at, and that's the principle I'm fighting for."

And then the senator explained that he is not trying to be disloyal or to flout or defy the government, but that he's fighting for a principle.

Ohio Assembly Passes 34 of 41 Vetoed Bills

Columbus, O., April 18.—The Ohio general assembly adjourned early today after passing thirty-four of forty-one measures which had been vetoed by Gov. Vic Donahey. The chief executive's veto was sustained only on one measure. Six other bills were withdrawn from further consideration, allowing the veto to stand.

Among bills passed at the final session was one providing for a two cent gasoline tax and the Buchanan Bible reading bill, calling for compulsory reading of at least ten verses of the Bible in the public schools daily.

ANDREWS DEFIES FENG'S PROTEST ON ASIATIC TRIP

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

KALGAN, China, April 18.—Defying emphatic protests of the Christian general, Feng Yu-hsiang, the third Asiatic expedition of the American Museum of Natural History and the Field museum of Chicago, departed for Mongolia today under the leadership of Roy Chapman Andrews. All members of the expedition were heavily armed with pistols and rifles.

Owing to bandit activities along the route, where a Belgian priest was captured recently, Gen. Feng refused permission to the Americans to depart, but Mr. Andrews, eager to reach his destination, 900 miles distant, signed a paper which released the Chinese from all responsibility in case of an attack.

G. O. P. FEARS '26 MAY SEE DEMS. GRAB CONTROL

Slim Control Now, and New Vote Is Peculiar.

BY ARTHUR W. CRAWFORD.

Washington, D. C., April 18.—[Special.]—Administration forces are showing concern over the specter of a possible loss of control of congress in the 1926 elections.

President Coolidge expects to be in a fairly good position to obtain legislation throughout the life of the present congress, notwithstanding evidences of a somewhat uncertain senate, as exhibited during the controversy over the Warren nomination in the recent brief special session.

As to the 70th congress, which comes into existence on March 4, 1927, the President's friends are already admitting that there is real occasion for alarm. It will be the 70th congress which will be freshest in the minds of the voters at the time of the next presidential election in November, 1928.

Must Secure Control.

Inability to control that congress will add to the difficulties of the Republican party in electing President Coolidge or whoever may be the nominee in that year.

Republican leaders in checking over the senate situation with special reference to the November, 1926, elections find that it could not easily be much worse. It so happens that out of thirty-two senators whose terms expire in March, 1927, only seven are Democrats. All of them are from the south and are virtually certain of reëlection.

This means that the Republicans have no chance whatever to increase their present slender margin of control of the senate. They must make a defensive fight in the twenty-five states where Republican senators come up for reëlection. In a considerable number of these the situation is uncertain and the Democrats have an even chance or better to make gains.

Roster of Present Congress.

The present senate is made up on paper of fifty-five Republicans, forty Democrats and one Farmer-Labor member. Actually the Republicans have a much narrower margin of control than is indicated by these figures. Four of those listed as Republicans, have been read out of the party by their associates. This reduces the Republican strength to fifty-one as against a combined opposition of forty-five.

Even these figures show a larger Republican majority than actually exists, because there are no less than seven other Republicans who are more or less independent and cannot be counted on at all times to support the administration. Whenever any three of the seven desert the administration it means that the total is reduced to forty-eight as against a combined opposition of forty-eight. Defection of four places the opposition in control.

Can Rule Committees.

In matters of party organization the Republicans can count ordinarily on the fifty-one members. This means that the Republicans can retain control of committees even though they lose two seats in the 1926 elections. If they lose more than that the Democrats and the four La Follette insurgents are likely to effect a combination to organize the senate. The Democrats would need to win in nine out of twenty-five of the states where Republican senators are up for reëlection in order to win control of the senate without the aid of the La Follette group.

The Republicans managed to organize the senate in the sixty-eighth congress, although the La Follette group held the balance of power. The La Follette senators at that time had not been deprived of their committee chairmanships and seniority, and were willing to be regular in matters of organization. Since that time they have been read out of the party and might not now be willing to help the Republicans organize, even though they were offered inducements to come back into the fold.

G. O. P. Majority Safe.

The house situation is fairly satisfactory from a Republican standpoint. There are 247 Republicans, including two Republican vacancies; 183 Democrats; two Socialists, and three Farmer-Labor members. This gives the Republicans a majority of fifty-nine over the combined opposition.

Of the 247 Republicans, however, twelve were not invited to attend the party caucus. Deducting them, the Republicans have 235, while all others total 200, the Republican majority being 35.

The Republican majority will disappear if the Democrats should capture eighteen of the seats now held by Republicans.

IMPROVED CARE REDUCES DEATH RATE OF BABIES

That mothers of Chicago are learning their lesson anent the ounce of prevention and the pound of cure is revealed by the quarterly report of the Infant Welfare society for the first three months of 1925.

Not only is there a reduction in the death rate among babies cared for by the society, but this in spite of an increase of 783 cases over the same period last year, making a total of 6,926 babies attended by society workers.

Taking well babies to the doctor for the purpose of keeping them well is becoming quite "the thing" to do among mothers in all sections of the city, workers declare. Increased attendance at the infant conferences is particularly gratifying, the report states.

EDSEL FORD SEES BIG FUTURE FOR AIRCRAFT FIELD

Washington, D. C., April 18.—[Special.]—A greatly increased aircraft production is in prospect in the country in the early future, with airplanes in daily use and landing fields everywhere, Edsel B. Ford says in an article in the Nation's Business magazine, published by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

Mr. Ford says it is conceivable that the Ford Motor company will some day be engaged in the quantity production of aircraft.

"The interest which my father and myself have in the development of aircraft arises quite logically out of our interest in all forms of motor transportation," Mr. Ford says.

"While the Ford Motor company has not yet built any airplanes we have lent assistance to those who are doing so."

Mr. Ford said that the Ford Motor company in commencing its own aerial transportation line between Detroit and Chicago has done so for the experience it will give as well as the service it will render.

SHOT GUN ENDS HIS WOES.

Kendallville, Ind., April 18.—[Special.]—Clyde Shanower, 45, prominent farmer residing ten miles north of here, committed suicide with a shot gun late last night. Despondency over ill health was attributed as the cause.

DEVER, COLLINS ARE GIVEN PRAISE BY DRY LEADER

Despite Chicago's lenient attitude toward prohibition the city has some public officials whose records for enforcement are inspiration to the drys of the nation, Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel for the Anti-Saloon league, declared here yesterday. Among these he listed U. S. District Attorney Olson, Federal Judges Cliffe, Wilkerson, and Carpenter, Mayor Dever, and Chief of Police Collins.

WAYNE B. WHEELER.
[Harris & Ewing.]

"Prohibition has not ushered in the millennium here in Chicago," he said, "but conditions are much better than they were when you had 7,000 saloons, 6,000 speakeasies, and about 50 breweries under the old license system.

35,000 Bootleggers Convicted.

"If anyone believes that prohibition enforcement is a failure he can get enlightenment by having a conference with 35,000 bootleggers who have been convicted during the last year by the federal agents alone.

"More than 2,000 buildings are padlocked and more than 800 federal, state, and local officers and millionaires in the penitentiary as conspirators are thinking this thing over and are convinced that the law is enforced better than they wish it was.

"With the saloon as a rendezvous criminals like Torrio, Druggan, and Lake were never convicted in Chicago. They got justice only when liquor headquarters were outlawed by the eighteenth amendment."

Lack One Officer in State.

Illinois' law enforcement machinery will be complete, Mr. Wheeler said, if the legislature creates the office of state prohibition commissioner.

The dry league leader is here to address a meeting at First Methodist church, Evanston, today when he will discuss some of the troubles of enforcing the dry laws.

FIRST DIVISION OFFICERS DINE AND REMINISCE

Sixty former officers of the First Division, A. E. F., sat down to dinner and a feast of reminiscences at the Chicago Athletic association last night. It was the second annual meeting of the organization formed last year by members of the division living in the central west.

Maj. Gen. Harry C. Hale, commanding the Sixth corps area; Brig. Gen. Benjamin A. Poore, commanding at Fort Sheridan; Maj. Gen. George Bell Jr., retired; Maj. Gen. George H. Harries, retired; Col. Manus McCloskey; Col. John G. Emery, former national commander of the American Legion; Prof. Henry J. Cox, chief of the federal weather bureau in Chicago, and George A. McKinlock were the guests of honor.

Charles Bushnell Fullerton, former major of infantry in the division, presided. Nine reels of official pictures, sent on from Washington, were shown, depicting the First division in action.

WOOD PROTESTS SALE OF VESSELS TO DOLLAR LINE

Washington, D. C., April 18.—[United Press.]—Gov. Gen. Leonard Wood of the Philippine islands has cabled a strong protest to the war department against the sale of the five president type liners now operated by the Pacific Mail Steamship company to the Dollar lines, proposed by the shipping board, it was learned here today.

Wood said all chambers of commerce and many leading firms of the Philippines opposed the sale on the ground that it would create a monopoly of shipping between the islands and the United States, and added his opinion that creation of the monopoly would be unfortunate for the islands.

GIRL GRAVELY HURT IN AUTO CRASH.

Petersburg, Ind., April 18.—[Special.]—Miss Ida Walker, 15, daughter of Sidney Walker, a farmer living west of here, was dangerously cut about the throat late last night when the auto in which she was riding struck a tree and she was hurled against the wind shield. Her condition is critical.

Mr. Walter Murray, our Decorative Advisor, says:

The average living room needs color and a more careful attention to the groupings of furniture. A deep seated Coxwell chair, with a high back that makes lounging easy, is one of the most necessary pieces of furniture for solid comfort. Preferably it should be down filled, upholstered in tapestry. If a figured design in tan, green and blue is used such a combination would harmonize well with a green and gold lacquer gateleg table, on which might be used a green pottery lamp, with a shade of gleaming gold.

3 WORLD RECORDS FALL, 1 TIED IN KANSAS GAMES

SIXTEEN OTHER COLLEGE, MEET MARKS BEATEN

Illini Relay Four Races Fastest Half Mile.

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

Lawrence, Kas., April 18.—[Special.]—Three world's records were shattered, one tied and two national intercollegiate marks broken in the third annual relay games of the University of Kansas, held in the Memorial stadium this afternoon. Weather conditions were ideal.

As the University of Kansas was host to nearly 1,000 athletes, representing 100 institutions from fourteen states, it was only proper one of its teams should share in the world's record breaking honors. In the 440 yard university relay, the Jayhawker quartet covered the distance in :42, which shattered all existing marks.

The former record was :42 3-10 and was made by the University of Illinois quartet composed of Sweet, Hughes, Evans and Ayers at the Drake relay games in 1923. It was a remarkable exhibition and Fisher, the last Kansas runner, pulled the race out of the fire by coming from behind to win.

Illini Break 880 Record.

In the university half-mile relay, Illinois smashed all records for the event, covering the distance in 1:27, which lowered the world's and American record of 1:27 4-10 made by the New York A. C. team in 1921. The performance also bettered the American intercollegiate record of 1:27 5-10 made by the Illinois team of 1923 at the Drake games.

The other world's record to go by the boards was in the 1¾ mile university medley. This event was won by the University of Texas in 7:35 6-10, which bettered the former mark of 7:38 2-10, made by the Texas team of last year in the same set of games. It also bettered the national intercollegiate and Kansas record of 7:38 2-10, made by Texas last year. The athletes from the Lone Star state were easily the class of the race.

Locke Ties Century Mark.

Roland Locke, the versatile University of Nebraska athlete, won his preliminary heat in the 100 yard in :09 6-10, world's record time. In the final heat, the Cornhusker won in a close finish with McAndrews of Wisconsin in even time.

Herbert Schwarze, the giant Wisconsin athlete, who is expected to shatter the world's record of 51 feet in the shot put, approached closer to his goal today with an effort of 49 feet 10½ inches. This performance breaks the American intercollegiate record of 49 feet 7¾ inches, made by Glen Hartranft of Leland Stanford last year. Earl McKown, Kansas state teachers college, shattered the American intercollegiate record in the pole vault by clearing the bar at 13 feet 2⅞ inches. This remarkable effort bettered the former intercollegiate record of 13 feet 1 inch made by R. A. Gardner of Yale back in 1912.

Fourteen Other Records.

Aside from these six record smashing performances, which also lowered the marks for the Kansas relays, fourteen other records for this growing event went by the boards.

The meet was well handled by competent officials chosen by Dr. Forrest Allen, one of the most competent athletic directors in the country. Knute Rockne, athletic director at Notre Dame, was active referee. Summaries:

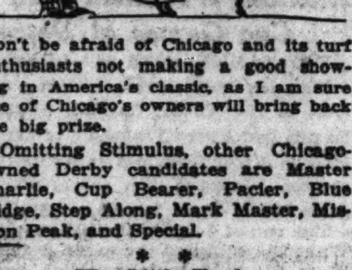
KENTUCKY DERBY.

WITH the elimination of Stimulus, Chicago loses one of its candidates for the Kentucky Derby, but The Wake is able to add Bankrupt, an All Gold-Quicksand colt, to the list previously published.

Bankrupt was nominated in the name of the Shapoff stables. G. Frank Croissant, a real estate man of Florida and Chicago, acquired the Shapoff string. Mr. Croissant casts his allegiance to Chicago in a letter to this column, which says in part:

I am proud to say I am a Chicagoan through and through, and my Derby candidate will be a standard bearer for that good city. My horse is Bankrupt, and as you know, he is an All Gold colt and holds the track record for a mile and one-eighth at Miami. He has won eight races as a 2 and 3 year old.

He is good on a heavy track as well as a fast one, and I am confident that he will go to the post for the great event and make a very creditable showing.



Don't be afraid of Chicago and its turf enthusiasts not making a good showing in America's classic, as I am sure one of Chicago's owners will bring back the big prize.

Omitting Stimulus, other Chicago-owned Derby candidates are Master Charlie, Cup Bearer, Pacier, Blue Ridge, Step Along, Mark Master, Mission Peak, and Special.

Wee Little Shack.

There's a wee little shack
With a garden in back,
And a spring where the birds come to drink.
The veranda before,
Where the vines clamber o'er,
Is a place where the dreamer can think.

When I've wandered afield
My tired senses yield
To its call as it beckons me back.
Here my cares fall away
At the close of the day,
In the spell of my wee little shack.

Babe Ruth.

Dear Wake: I read in a TRIBUNE editorial the following statement: "Babe Ruth is the greatest baseball player of record."

I am willing to admit that he is the greatest slugger, probably, the game has ever produced. But in sizing up ability one must take into consideration every department. Is he a greater pitcher than John Clarkson, Ed Walsh, Eddie Cicotte, Red Faber; a greater fielder than Kelley, Hugh Duffy, Bill Lange, Tris Speaker, Ty Cobb; a greater base runner than Ty Cobb or Eddie Collins?

I have followed baseball since 1871 and have seen most of the great players, past and present. I wouldn't venture to pick out any one player and say he was greatest. What do other Wakers think?

Adrian C. Anson was a mighty batter, and I have often wondered if the lively ball had been in use in his time if he wouldn't have walloped the ball over the fence as often as Babe Ruth does. D. M. S.

(The Wake will publish opinions of readers on whether Babe Ruth is the greatest ball player of all time—if they are not too long.)

Incidentally, Cubs and White Sox might have started off much worse in the pennant race, doncha think?

LANE TECH WINS SWIM; 2 COUNTY RECORDS BROKEN

Englewood Is Second in Maroon Meet.

TABLE OF POINTS

Lane	33	Schurz	10
Englewood	17	Marshall	8
Maine	15	Harrison	4
Lindblom	14	Tilden	3
Senn	12	Hyde Park	1

Scoring almost twice the number of points garnered by its nearest rival, Lane Tech copped the honors in the University of Chicago's first Cook county interscholastic swimming meet at Bartlett gymnasium last night, tallying 33 markers while Englewood garnered but 17.

Two county marks were bettered and another equaled in last night's competition, fast times featuring practically all of the events. Lane's 160 yard relay team sent the first record swirling to the depth in the finals, lowering its old mark of 1:22 2-5 by :00 3-5. Seehausen, L. Colbath, Wally Colbath and Don Petersen composed the winning quartet. They were pushed close in the splash by Senn.

Schwartz Clips Mark.

The other record was set when Schwartz, star of the Marshall tank turnout, docked in the 220 yards free style swim in 2:27, beating the time of 2:28 2-5 set by Dick Howell, former Hyde Park swimmer and now a Northwestern university light. Dick Peterson of Lindblom set the pace in the 100 yards breast stroke, navigating the distance in 1:11 1-5 to equal the mark of Bob Lennox of Oak Park, made last year.

One of the most thrilling contests was in the century swim, won by Petersen of Lane in :58 2-5 without much competition, Schwartz of Marshall and Walker of Englewood putting up a thrilling scrap for second, the former winning out.

Petersen Is Star.

Petersen of Lane was the individual star of the meet, by virtue of firsts in the 40 and 100 yard swims and participating on the two relay teams entered by his school. Summaries:

Plunge for distance—Won by Cates, Maine Township; Sinclair, Englewood, second; Lebitzsky, Lane Tech, third; Boyer, Hyde Park, fourth. Time, :28 7-10.

160 yards relay—Won by Lane [Seehausen, L. Colbath, W. Colbath, Petersen]; Senn, second; Maine Township, third; Lindblom, fourth. Time, 1:21 4-5 [new Cook county interscholastic record].

40 yards swim—Won by Petersen, Lane; Walker, Englewood, second; Busch, Schurz, third; Carter, Lindblom, fourth. Time, :19 3-5.

100 yards breast stroke—Won by Peterson, Lindblom; Sutkowski, Tilden, second; Tauber, Englewood, third; Abrams, Senn, fourth. Time, 1:11 1-5. [Equals Cook county interscholastic record held by Lennox, Oak Park High.]

220 yard swim—Won by Schwartz, Marshall; Adler, Harrison, second; Colbath, Lane Tech, third; Morbeck, Lane Tech, fourth. Time, 2:27. [New Cook county interscholastic record.]

Fancy diving—Won by W. Colbath, Lane; Stedwell, Englewood, second; Wall, Englewood, third; Holbrook, Lane, fourth.

100 yards back stroke—Won by Webster, Maine Township; Kusinsl, Senn, second; Speiss, Senn, third; Alexander, Maine Township, fourth. Time, 1:13 3-5.

100 yards swim—Won by Petersen, Lane; Schwartz, Marshall, second; Walker, Englewood, third; Adler, Harrison, fourth. Time, :58 2-5.

220 yards medley relay—Won by Schurz [Heier, Webb, McGary, Busch]; Lindblom, second; Lane, third; Englewood, fourth. Time, 2:12 4-5.

KELLEY SETS NEW HURDLE RECORD; JOIE RAY LOSES

Minneapolis, Minn., April 18.—Frank Kelley, South Dakota State college, established a world's record of :06 3-10 in the 50 yard high hurdles at the Twin City Fennia club games here tonight. The former record, one-tenth of a second slower, was held by Keeble of Missouri.

Paavo Nurmi and Willie Ritola, famous Finnish stars, and Joie Ray of the Illinois A. C., ran in tonight's program but failed to set any new marks. Ray was defeated in a one mile race by Ray Dodge, a teammate.

STANFORD TRACK MEN NIP BEARS

Palo Alto, Cal., April 18.—By the margin of a single event, the relay race, Stanford won its big dual meet with California here this afternoon. The final score: Stanford 66½; California 64½.

DE PALMA TO RACE AT INDIANAPOLIS

Indianapolis, Ind., April 18.—The entry of Ralph De Palma, veteran race driver, in the 500 mile race to be held at the Indianapolis motor speedway May 30, was announced today. De Palma won the classic in 1915.

DUTCH SURE TO HOLD OLYMPICS, SAYS SHERRILL

New York, April 18.—[Special.]—Any doubt that Holland would hold the Olympic games of 1928 at Amsterdam under the award of the international Olympic committee was dispelled today at the meeting of the American Olympic association following the final meeting of the American Olympic committee, in the Hotel Astor.

Gen. Charles Sherrill, former Yale sprinter and one of the three American members of the international Olympic committee, definitely advised the assembled delegates Holland is proceeding with plans for the classic games three years hence and that the meet positively would be held in Amsterdam.

On a motion from President Murray Hulbert of the Amateur Athletic union, Secretary Frederick W. Rubien of the Olympic body was instructed to cable to Holland a verbatim copy of Gen. Sherrill's statement as indicating the hearty accord of American athletic followers in the plans now under way for 1928 games and as an evidence of America's sincere desire to coöperate with the Dutch authorities in every manner possible.

Col. Robert M. Thompson, who was president of the American Olympic committee controlling the team which went to Paris last summer, was elected a delegate from America to the international Olympic congress to be held in Prague May 26.

MUNN ABLE TO QUIT SICKBED FOR TRIP HOME

Philadelphia, Pa., April 18.—[Special.]—Wayne ("Big") Munn, deposed heavyweight wrestling champion, who was shorn of his title by the veteran Stanislaus Zbyszko here Wednesday night, was recovered sufficiently today to start back for his home in Kansas City. The high temperature he carried during and after his match with Zbyszko has abated, and while his tonsils are still sore the big westerner is rallying rapidly.

After a short stay at home Munn will go to Hot Springs to recuperate.

"Had the state athletic commission known prior to the match between Munn and Zbyszko Wednesday of the condition of the champion a postponement of one week would have been ordered," said Chairman William Rocap today. "I didn't know Munn was sick until I went to Wayne's dressing room after the fall.

"Munn came to the state athletic office Tuesday at noon and applied for his license," continued Rocap. "He looked in fine form, was jolly, and fooled around the office for more than an hour."

Irving Park Presbyterian Wins Northwest Games

Here is a group of star track and field performers who will strive for records in Chicago today at Grant Park stadium in the Loyola university relays. Paavo Nurmi, for whom you may select your own superlatives to describe his speed, will face Ritola in a special match race. Ray will race in the mile and the 880 yards run, in both of which events Lloyd Hahn also is entered. Osborn is entered in the high jump, in which he holds the world's records for indoor and outdoor competition.

STRAIGHT FROM THE SHOULDER by Frank Smith

A LOT of things interesting to wrestling fans have developed as a result of the recent defeat of Wayne "Big" Munn by Stanislaus Zbyszko, the 55 year old veteran Pole. The outstanding feature is the sportsmanship shown by both of the big fellows. Munn went into the Philadelphia ring a sick man against the wishes of his wife and the advice of the club physician because he didn't want to disappoint the big crowd of fans who were on hand to witness the prowess of the Nebraska giant. The defeat of the man who tossed Ed "Strangler" Lewis out of a Kansas City ring and then laid claim to the heavyweight title came as a distinct surprise even to Zbyszko, who is big enough man to admit it.

Stanislaus, in a wire to a friend here, says he never expected to defeat Munn so decisively and quickly, and that the victory was as much of a surprise to him as it, apparently, was to the spectators. Stanislaus admits that Munn threw him when they met some time ago, and that he really never thought he could beat him in Philadelphia. Zbyszko says he never expected anything better than a draw.

"That was my goal when I entered the ring," Zbyszko wired. "I soon found that something was wrong with Munn. He didn't seem to have one-third of the strength he had when I wrestled him the first time."

That admission stamps Zbyszko as a sportsman and a man, but in the same breath he claims he is the heavyweight mat champion. The writer never has conceded that Munn was champion as a result of his fouling Lewis in Kansas City, and, therefore, cannot recognize Zbyszko as the title holder, although the crown could not be worn by a more sincere advocate of clean wrestling. The veteran has been whipped repeatedly by Lewis, and a return match between the pair would break any promoter with the temerity to back it, at least around these diggings.

Munn is a sportsman and a credit to the mat game. He doesn't know what stalling in the ring means, and puts his adversaries on their backs just as quickly as it is possible for him to do so. He doesn't waste a minute, and those who have watched him grapple know it. It is admitted that he has a lot to learn about the racket, but any one who knows anything about wrestling is aware of the fact that it takes years before one becomes expert. In spite of Munn's lack of experience, he is a spectacular figure in the ring and one to be reckoned with in the future.

Without question, there is a well merited dispute about who is heavyweight champion. Lewis claims he never lost the championship, and in that we agree with him. Munn claimed he won the title from the Strangler, and in that we disagree with him. As a result of Zbyszko's defeat of Munn, the Pole claims to be champion, and, naturally, we disagree with that opinion.

What we would like to see would be a return match between the Nebraska giant and Lewis. We don't know whether Lewis would want to meet Munn after his Philadelphia setback, and we don't know whether Munn would want to tackle Lewis again, but it is a logical match, and one that should give the fans a thrill from the tap of the gong until one or the other was pinned.

Here's a chance for Floyd Fitzsimmons and his $30,000 bank roll to get busy, as long as local promoters have kissed themselves out of the Munn-Lewis picture.

According to our best expert accountants, Killefer's Cubs lost a ball game yesterday. That they didn't lose their lives or their shirts or something else was no fault of the St. Louis Cardinals. Last night all the Bruins were accounted for and there were no shirts missing, but nobody is quite certain about the other things.

However, the estimate is that the St. Louis gang slammed, slapped, poked, pounded, etc., a flock of Cub hurlers in a highly amusing battle to the tune of 20 to 5, all of which was due to an epidemic of distant clouting that

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

St. Louis, Mo., April 18.—[Special.]—The White Sox knocked the Browns flat today in the first game of the series here, 14 to 5, and started a riot in the Browns' ball park. It was the fourth straight defeat for Sisler's men and the fans believe that no such thing would have happened if only Phil Ball, owner of the club would come to terms with "Baby Doll" Jacobson, the heavy hitting outfielder who still is a hold out.

Consequently, when the game ended the boys in the bleachers and a lot of them from the grand stand rushed upon the field and staged an indignation meeting right in front of the box occupied by Mr. Ball, B. B. Johnson, president of the league, and other friends of Ball.

Mr. Ball faced the music without once stirring but when the mob had grown to perhaps a couple of thousand Mr. Johnson walked out. The crowd jeered Mr. Ball, few of them knowing the league president. Some tossed handfuls of dirt at the Brown's owner while the entire throng began crying, "We want Jake, we want Jake."

Police Disperse Mob.

Mr. Ball refused to leave and the crowd continued to grow bigger and bigger until finally a squad of blue coated policemen came upon the field and rushed the mob. The gang dispersed without it being necessary to draw clubs on them but they continued to cry, "We want Jake."

After all had left Mr. Ball arose and walked slowly to his office accompanied by several policemen, for there was still a mob behind in the grandstand. One of them cried, "Phil Ball for mayor," and another yelled, "Big hearted Phil," but Mr. Ball retained all his dignity as he departed.

It is our private opinion that even had "Baby Doll" Jacobson been in the game today he would have been unable to stop the White Sox. They poled fourteen hits including four doubles, a triple and two homers. Mr. Jacobson couldn't have caught all of those balls.

Bush Chased in Seventh.

The veteran Joe Bush began on the rubber opposed by the young Chicago ace, Hollis Thurston. Bush made a good fight until the sixth inning when the Sox banged their way to the front and then in the seventh after two were out they simply annihilated Mr. Bush. Collins, Sheely and Falk hit two baggers to the left wall and Harris hit a single to center. Kamm walked and Clyde Crouse smashed the ball into the right bleacher. Six runs had crossed the plate. Mr. Bush didn't wait to be taken out. After the homer he walked briskly to the dugout and disappeared. The Sox had nicked Joe for a pair of runs in the first inning on singles by Mostil and Sheely bunched with a pass to Boss Eddie and an error by McManus. Mostil and Collins each stole a base, too. But after that Mr. Bush was pretty good until the sixth. Meanwhile, his mates had nicked Thurston for three runs. One came in the second when McManus and Bennett hit safely. Two came in the third when Thurston walked a man, hit one, allowed one single, and Davis was guilty of an error. Thurston was strong after that.

Crouse Breaks Up Game.

In the sixth, after two were out, the Sox went to the front when Kamm walked and Crouse poled one to the far corner of center field which was good for a homer by fast leg work. Crouse's second homer came in the next and sent Mr. Bush out for good. Grant took Bush's place and finished that inning.

Young Stauffer began the eighth but was yanked after walking three in a row. Girard replaced him and walked another after which Falk hit a sacrifice fly and Kamm poled a single, making a cluster of four more runs for the Sox. The Browns got two harmless tallies in the ninth when Sisler singled and McManus drove one into the left bleacher for a homer.

The series will be resumed tomorrow.

PAAVO, RIVALS RACE TODAY AT LOYOLA RELAYS

Olympic, National A. A. U. and intercollegiate champions, representing more than a score of universities, colleges and athletic clubs will compete in the first of Loyola university's annual relays at Grant Park stadium this afternoon.

The meet will open at 1:30 o'clock, the pole vault being the first event on the program, and the carnival will end at 4:05 with the University four mile invitation relay. A corps of experienced officials, headed by Maj. John L. Griffith, Western conference commissioner, will see that events are ran off on scheduled time.

Accommodations have been prepared for 40,000 spectators and if the advance sale counts for anything the stadium will be well filled. With Mayor Dever and the city council placing their approval on the games, the event is being accepted as Chicago's civic sport show.

Mile Relay Feature.

The relay card includes high school, college and university races from half a mile to four miles. The high spot of this end of the program will be the mile special between Georgetown and Holy Cross. These teams have met three times in eastern meets, the Georgetown flyers winning all three races. Coach Bart Sullivan of Holy Cross, whose runners have been working out here since Thursday, is confident the tables will be turned today. He ventures the prediction Georgetown will have to step the route in record time to outspeed his athletes. Georgetown yesterday beat out a fast field in the mile and two mile events of the Ohio state relays.

Special events include 100 yard dash, 120 yard high hurdles, pole vault, discus throw, javelin throw, running high jump, running broad jump, three mile walk, mile run, and 3,000 meter run.

Paavo Races Willie.

While all of the special events have attracted stars of national or Olympic prominence, the 3,000 meter race between Paavo Nurmi and Willie Ritola tops the list. The Finnish rivals will be sent away at 3:35 o'clock. This will be the third meeting of the pair since Nurmi came to the United States. Paavo was beaten in their first contest in New York when he had to withdraw because of stomach cramps, but evened up later by beating Ritola at Buffalo.

The 100 yard dash will bring together Jackson Scholz, New York A. C.; Livwendahl, Finnish-American A. C.; Coaffee, I. A. C.; Wiley, Columbia; Dowding, Georgetown; Ripstein, St. Louis U.; Hermanson, C. A. A.; Barrett of Loyola, and several others. The first heat will be run at 2:15 o'clock, the second five minutes later, and the finals at 3:40.

Ray, Hahn in Mile.

Joie Ray, joint holder of the world's indoor record with Nurmi, will face a fast field in the mile, among his opponents being Hahn of the Boston A. A., Larivee of Holy Cross, Connolly of Georgetown, Shimek of Marquette, and Lockwood of Rector college, Brunswick, N. J. Ray and Hahn also will compete in the 880 yard race with Ray Watson and Ray Dodge of the I. A. C. and Livwendahl of the Finnish-American A. C.

Harold Osborn, greatest running high jumper in track history, is expected to have things much his own way in his favorite event, although Norton of Georgetown and Russell of the University of Chicago, who is competing unattached, may give him a battle.

The prep relays have drawn big fields, particularly the Catholic prep medley, in which every Catholic high school in the city save Mount Carmel, St. Patrick and St. Philip is entered.

The meet will be closed with a special four mile relay between Oregon Aggies of Corvallis, Ore., and Marquette university of Milwaukee. The coast runners, coached by "Dad" Butler, former track leader of the Chicago A. A., competed in the Kansas relays yesterday, and won their event in record time. Members of the team are Capt. Mason, Clayton, Keech, and Bell.

6 MARKS FALL AT SOUTHERN RELAY GAMES

Atlanta, Ga., April 18.—With perfect weather lending a hand six southern relay carnival records were broken at the annual meet at Georgia Tech today. Marks in four relay races were lowered and the southern record for the 120 yard high hurdles was bettered. The relay carnival mark for the pole vault was put up two inches.

Roy, Tulane hurdler, set a mark of :15 flat for the 120 yard high hurdles, winning in a driving finish from Moore or North Carolina. In the pole vault, Locke of Auburn went over the bar at 12 feet 2¼ inches.

With a record of 8:22 2-5 Clemson won the distance medley relay for colleges, followed by another record in the half mile relay for colleges when Furman won in 1:32 1-10. The Mississippi Aggies bettered the time for the two mile relay by five seconds in winning in 8:09 2-5. The University of North Carolina required only 16:36 to win the four mile relay.

Hamm and Joe Pritchard, star Georgia school boy sprinters, ran a special 100 yard dash, Hamm equaling the southern relay record of :10 in winning.

Lane Tech Nine Bows to Evanston Preps, 5-4

Lane Tech lost its first game of the season yesterday when Evanston took the measure of the Techs, 5 to 4, at Evanston. The game was close all the way, the home nine putting over the winning run in the final inning. Score:

Lane ....020 011 0—4 12 1
Evanston ....020 110 1—5 9 0

Batteries—Goldstein, Thorn, and Lincke; Phillip, Heap, and Wilson.

Naperville Bunches Hits to Beat Mt. Morris, 5 to 2

Naperville, Ill., April 18.—[Special.]—Northwestern college defeated Mount Morris college here today, 5 to 2, bunching hits in the fifth and sixth innings. Score:

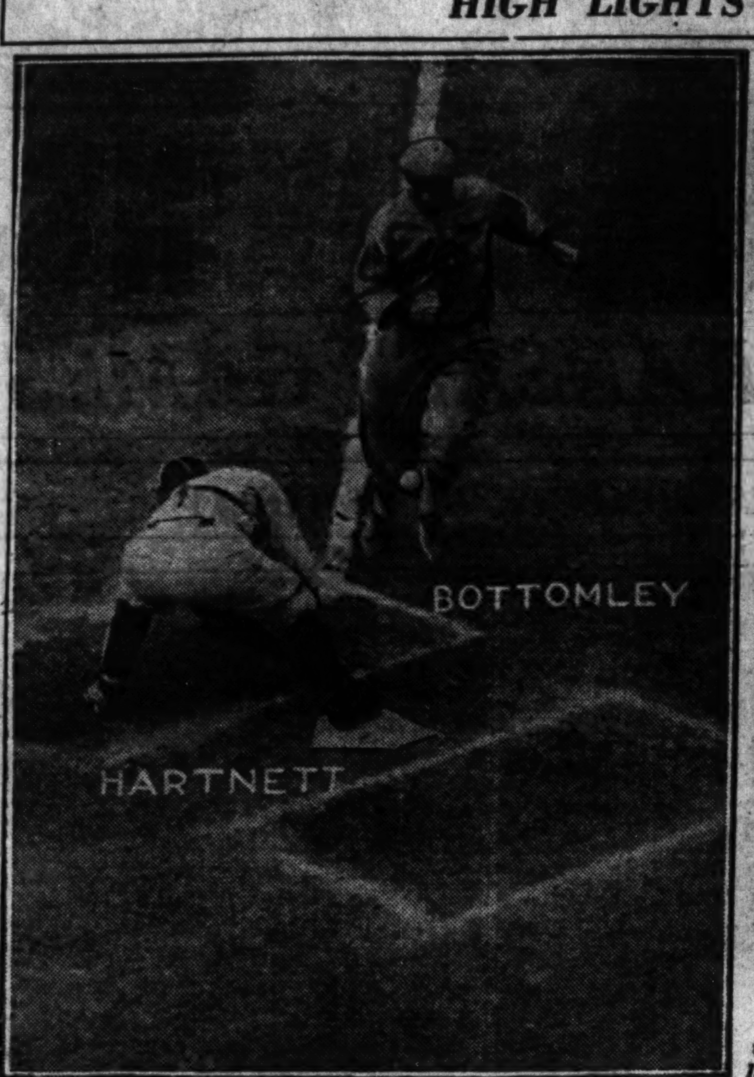
Northwestern ....000 023 000—5 8 5
Mount Morris..........000 011 000—2 4 4

Batteries—[illegible] and Aurand; [illegible] and Waters.

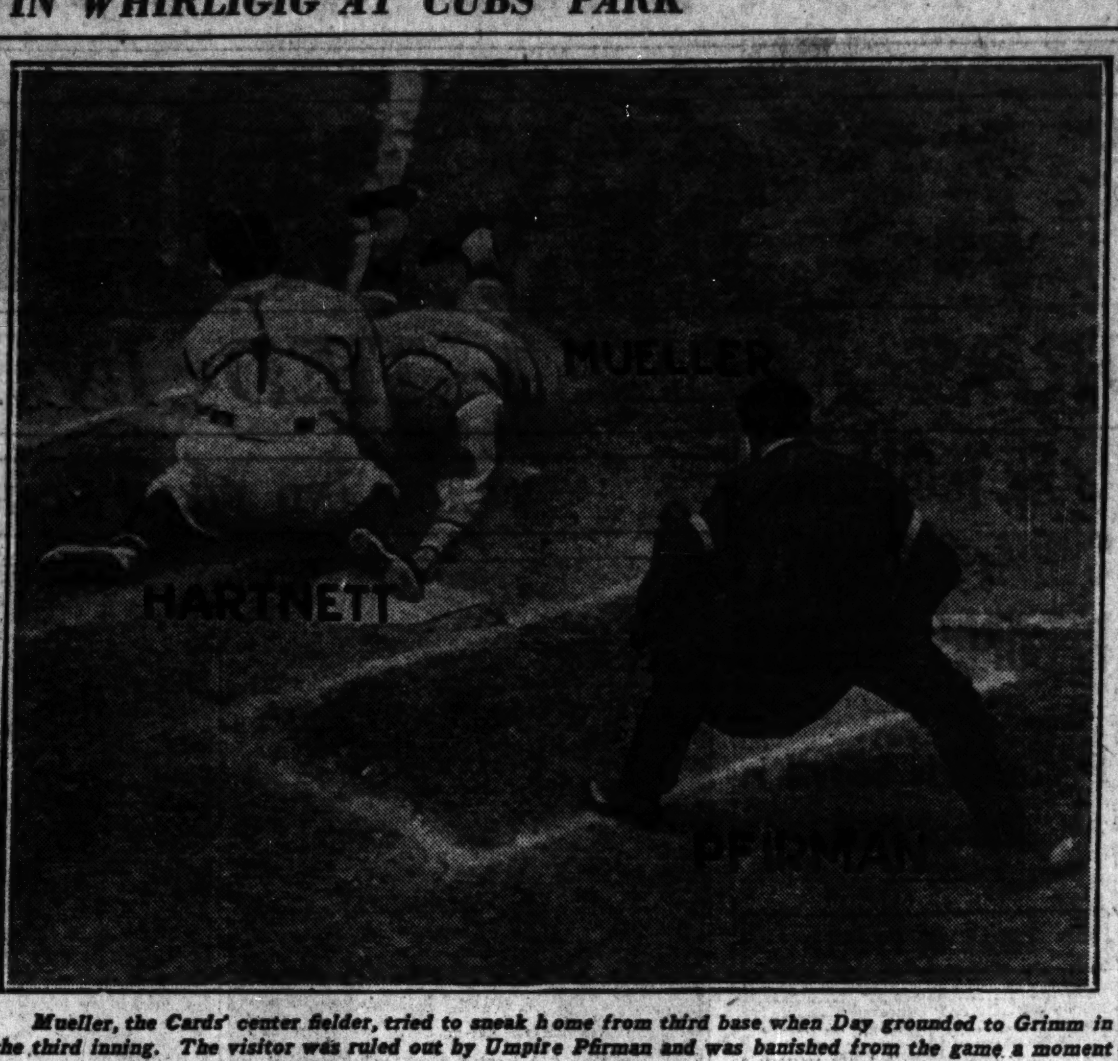
MORGAN PARK VICTOR.

Morgan Park Military academy track team took a close meet from Austin yesterday on the cadets' field. The score was 61½ to [illegible], Morgan Park gaining the victory by finishing first in the relay.

HIGH LIGHTS IN WHIRLIGIG AT CUBS' PARK



A slip that let in two Cardinal runs in the game at the Cubs' park yesterday. With the bases filled in the third round, Gonzales tapped to Bush. The kid pitcher tossed the ball to Hartnett, but the peg was wide and before the ball was retrieved in the vicinity of the grandstand Bell had followed Bottomley across the plate. The picture shows the ball bouncing away from Hartnett just before Bottomley reached the plate.



Mueller, the Cards' center fielder, tried to sneak home from third base when Day grounded to Grimm in the third inning. The visitor was ruled out by Umpire Pfirman and was banished from the game a moment later for complaining about the decision.

Thirteen Records Tumble in Rainy Day Buckeye Relays

Columbus, O., April 18.—[Special.]—De Hart Hubbard, famed colored athlete of the University of Michigan, today was beaten in the running broad jump for the first time in his collegiate career, at the second annual Ohio relays, sponsored by Ohio State university. Bill Dowding, Georgetown university star, handed Hubbard his defeat with a leap of 23 feet 2 inches, just a bare quarter of an inch better than Hubbard could do.

Nearly 890 athletes from ninety-four universities, colleges, Ohio high schools, and Columbus grammar schools participated in the mammoth track carnival, and thirteen records established last year tumbled.

Staged in Rain.

George Guthrie, Ohio State Olympic hurdler, won the pentathlon, taking first in all five events, when Wilson of Ohio State was the only man to enter.

The triathlon, which Frieda of Chicago captured last year, was won by Shively of Illinois, who amassed a total of 2,286 points in the hammer throw, shotput, and javelin throw.

The weather was anything but favorable to the athletes. A steady drizzle fell on the track during the preliminaries this morning and continued through half the afternoon, soaking athletes, officials, and the 2,500 spectators.

Georgetown and Michigan in the college and university class had the team events pretty well sewed up, while Ohio Wesleyan was the class of the college class in that respec.

Illini Star Injured.

While Hubbard, the Michigan flash, did not fare so well in the broad jump, he came close to the world's mark in the 100 yard dash, fighting a breeze and the rain to a time of :09 8-10.

The only casualty came when Martin Seeds of Illinois suffered a dislocated left elbow after hitting the sawdust hard in the pole vault. He was taken to University hospital, where his injury was declared not to be serious. Summaries:

Maroon Nine Opens Season with 4-1 Win Over Purple

Showing skill in all departments, University of Chicago's baseball team defeated Northwestern, 4 to 1, in the Maroon's Big Ten opener at the Midway yesterday, taking advantage of some ragged fielding and bad hurling by the Purple, particularly in the last couple of innings.

Joey Gubbins did the hurling for the Maroons through the whole melee, allowing but four base knocks, one of which, by Christman in the sixth netted thre bases and Gohn's run for the visitors. Schulze went through six innings for the Purple, allowing five hits, but after he had hit Marks and R. Howell with pitched balls, he was jerked in favor of Kirchoff, who allowed Chicago two runs and four hits in the remaining frames, John Howell scoring in the eighth after lining out a threebagger. HARLES EBBETS, WNER OF ROBINS, ES IN NEW YORK

New York, April 18.—[Special.]—[illegible] Hercules Ebbets, dean of the [illegible] of organized baseball and [illegible] and part owner of the Brooklyn National league team, died this [illegible] at the Waldorf-Astoria hotel. [illegible] was caused by heart disease. [illegible] had been confined to his room since [illegible] return from the Brooklyn team's [illegible] camp two weeks ago and had [illegible] steadily weaker. He suffered a [illegible] late Friday night and the members of his immediate family were summoned and remained with him to the [illegible]

Death came quietly. Mr. Ebbets fell [illegible] a sound sleep in the early morning hours and did not wake up until [illegible] before he breathed his last.

Charles H. Ebbets Jr. announced funeral services would be held in Trinity church, Brooklyn, Tuesday, the [illegible] to be decided upon later. All [illegible] games in the National league [illegible] for that day have been called [illegible] by President John Heydler. The [illegible] presidents of the other National league clubs, with Mr. Heydler, have [illegible] designated as honorary pallbearers.

One of "Old Guard."

After a conference between Mr. Heydler and the McKeever brothers, who [illegible] a half interest in the Brooklyn [illegible], it was decided to play today's [illegible] between the Giants and Robins [illegible] Ebbets field to avoid confusion. The [illegible] of both teams wore mourning [illegible] on their sleeves and the flags [illegible] ordered half staffed in all National league parks for a period of thirty days.

Ebbets field was built by Mr. Ebbets. At the time it was built he took Steve and Ed McKeever into partnership, but Mr. Ebbets always was the dominant figure and the Robins were generally spoken of as his team.

The passing of Mr. Ebbets removed from baseball one of its most colorful figures, one of the last of the "old guard" who still linked the days of the early struggles of the game away back in the early '80s with the present generation. Covering a span of more than forty years Ebbets' life and baseball were inseparably entwined.

Started Selling Score Cards.

Born Oct. 29, 1858, in the Greenwich village section of New York City, he made the City of Churches his home early in life and for years Brooklyn baseball and Ebbets were synonymous.

Ebbets started his baseball career in 1883 as a vender of score cards for the Brooklyn baseball club and by 1909 he owned the club right down to the last bag. He served two terms in the New York state assembly.

He was a member of the National league schedule committee and, in fact, it was as a schedule maker he first came to prominence.

Many of baseball's innovations can be directly ascribed to Ebbets. He was the originator of the rain check idea. He was a stanch exponent of Sunday baseball and in 1917 made a political issue of it in Brooklyn.

The system of drafting players whereby tail enders got first pick and pennant leaders last, was his suggestion, and he also agitated the movement, finally adopted, to establish a permanent schedule for world series [illegible]

Philadelphia, Pa., April 18.—[Special.]—Slim Harris was the hero of the Philadelphia populace this afternoon when he outpitched the great Walter Johnson to blank the World Champion Senators in the opening game of the series, 3 to 0.

Slim held the Griffmen to five scattered singles and in only one inning was in any immediate danger. Peck was the only athlete able to get two safeties off the lean hurler.

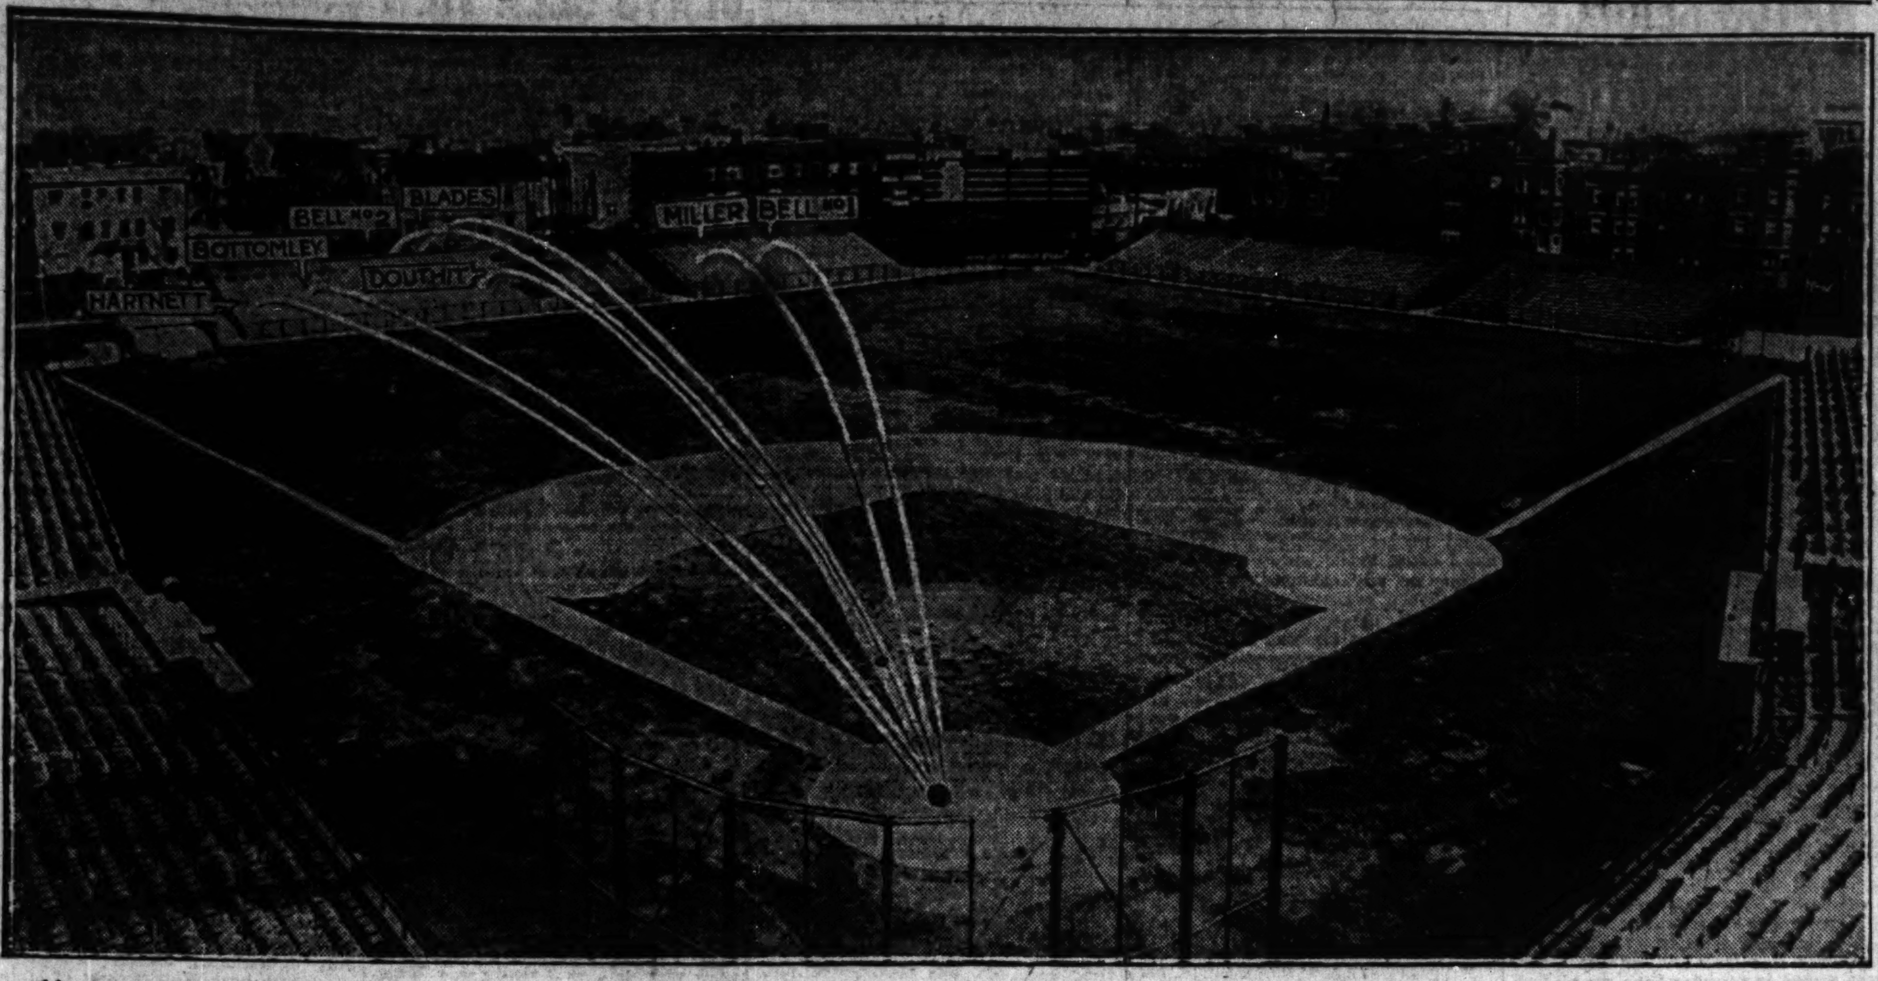
"A LOVELY TIME WAS HAD BY ALL"



After yesterday's barrage of home runs at the Cubs' park left field bleacher patrons are advised to provide themselves with masks and chest protectors. The above diagram shows the routes traveled by the seven homers hit in the tempestuous 20 to 5 affair. Two of the seven sailed clear over the heads of the sun gods, one being off Blades' bat in the fifth and the other the product of Bell in the seventh. Bell also hit for the circuit in the fourth with Holm and Hornsby on bases. This blast of home runs falls three shy of the modern baseball record, which is ten circuit clouts and was hung up during a game between Philadelphia and St. Louis on May 11, 1923. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

PLENTY OF SEATS FOR FANS AT WHITE SOX OPENING WEDNESDAY

THERE are plenty of reserved and box seat tickets for the opening game of the White Sox and Detroit Tigers at Comiskey park next Wednesday, Secretary Harry Grabiner of the Sox announced yesterday. The tickets will be on sale all day today at the south side park while tomorrow morning the sale will continue at The Hub.

Besides being opening day, big doings are planned by south side rooters and the local order of Elks in honor of Manager Eddie Collins and his Sox gang.

CARDS BURY CUBS IN WILD BATTLE, 20 TO 5

included seven home runs into the left field seats, one triple, seven doubles, and more singles than we care to mention. A few fielding blunders also were reported, but errors don't amount to much when mixed in with thirty-six hits, which was the grand total of the two teams' attack.

But Hartnett Got a Homer.

As five of the homers, the one three bagger, all the doubles and a healthy portion of the singles fell to the Cardinals it is a cinch they must have copped by at least a 20 to 5 margin and while a few runners my have been overlooked in the confusion one thing is a certainty and that is that men were tearing over the plate in such a speedy, unbroken procession the 15,000 dizzy spectators thought they were looking at a picket fence on the move.

There is so little to be said in behalf of the Cubs it might as well be mentioned in advance of what the Cards perpetrated. The one outstanding home achievement that stood out by itself was a homer Charley Hartnett lofted into the left field seats for his fifth home run of the season. It occurred in the first inning, with Heathcote and Adams on bases, and as the Cards had scored three bya similar process in their opening stand, Hartnett's work naturally was great stuff for the attending multitude.

Parade of Cub Hurlers.

The joy over Hartnett's No. 5 was short lived. In the third the Cards started to get rough with Vic Keen again and they put him out of action. Joe Bush fared no better; neither did Elmer Jacobs, Percy Jones, nor George Stueland, who followed. All five of the home hurlers were treated impartially and about the only thing that can be said in their defense is that at least some of the home runs would have been caught if a high wind from the southeast handn't helped carry the pills out of reach.

Now for the bad news. The first potent wallop was delivered by Bottomley with two on in the first inning. Hartnett's smash, as already mentioned, made up for it, but the tie lasted only until the third, when a number of hits and a bum throw by Bush, who had just relieved Keen, added three more hostile runs. The fourth was even worse, four more racing home on a combination of blows that had for a headliner a circuit drive by Bell.

In the fifth Blades hit one right out of the park off Jacobs and Bell did the same inthe seventh, giving him his second homer. In the eighth Douthit got the fever and raised the day's four base total to six. Then in the home eighth Hack Miller exploded one for the Cubs, but by that time most of the people had gone home.

MICHAELS MAY RETURN TO CUBS

Kansas City, Mo., April 18.—The Kansas City American association baseball club has obtained from the Philadelphia National league club Leonard Metz, shortstop, who was with the Waterbury club of the Eastern league last year. The Blues also procured L. F. Thompson, second baseman, from Pittsburgh.

It is probable that Ralph Michaels, shortstop, will be sent back to the Chicago Cubs before the Cubs return from their eastern tour, in accordance with an agreement made with Manager Killifer.

PYOTTS-FAIRIES TOP BUSY SEMI-PRO CARD

Semi-pro baseball begins in full blast today. Niesen's Pyotts have booked the strong Beloit Fairies, the Chicago league offers a seven game card, and five contests are listed in the Chicago Cook county circuit.

With two preliminary games out of the way, the Niesens are eagerly awaiting the game with the Beloit nine with its array of ex-big leaguers. The battle, which will start at 3 o'clock, promises to be a southpaw duel between Jim Vaughn and Lefty Sullivan of the west side club. Bobby Roth, Bob Hasbrook, Jimmy Breton, East, and Gharrity are former major league stars who supply the punch to the Fairy attack.

At Cermak park the Chicago league's feature game is expected to take place. Joe Lustig's All-Chicagos will furnish the opposition. Grover Baichley and Eddie Schultz are likely hurling opponents in this scrap.

With its large south side following anxious to see their favorite in action, the St. Michaels, one of the city's strongest park nine, will open the season with the Rogers Parks at the St. Michael lair.

Other Chicago league games today:

Chicago Giants at Chicago Blues, Grizzards at West Side Sportsmen park, Chicago Stars at Jones & Baumrucker, Joliet vs. Belle Plaines at Welles park, Chicago Tigers vs. Hammond at White City.

CHICAGO COOK COUNTY LEAGUE.

Auroras and Blue Island at Marquette Manor park, 63d and Oakley; Bricklayers and Evanston Tigers at Mason park, Evanston; Chicago Laundry Drivers and Commercial Trust at Sherman park, 52d and Racine; McHenry at Libertyville, Ill.; North Shore Boosters and Mellin A. C. at Winnemac park.

RUTH RECOVERING FROM OPERATION; FEVER SUBSIDES

New York, April 18.—[United Press.]—Babe Ruth, home run king of baseball, was reported to have spent an easy day today by attendants at St. Vincent's hospital.

The fever has subsided and the pain from the operation which was performed on him a few days ago has been relieved, according to Dr. King, his physician.

The Babe has lost considerable weight as a result of a liquid diet, Dr. King said, but he has not been weakened by it.

If he continues to improve as he has been doing, he may be able to leave the hospital in two weeks, it was said.

GIANTS TRIM ROBINS.

Brooklyn, April 18.—New York defeated Brooklyn today in the opening game of their series, 7 to 1, prolonged two and a half hours by the wildness of three pitchers, who passed sixteen batters and hit a seventeenth. Score:

CUB NOTES

THE two teams will renew their warfare on the north side lot this afternoon. Unless the weather is extremely punk, Alexander will make an attempt to lower the Cardinals' batting averages.

In a close game a manager can't be blamed for switching a left handed for a right handed hitter when a southpaw goes to the slab for the opposition. But when such a change is made with a team nine runs ahead it borders on the comical. Mr. Rickey staged such a piece of "strategy" in the seventh inning when Jones went to the knob.

Bob Barrett was called from the bench to pinch bat for Bush in the fourth inning. Bob shoved a single through short and scored Miller from second base.

Clyde Day, who hurled for the Cardinals, did time with the Muskogee, Okla., team last season. He is a large right hander with an apparent weakness for fielding bunts.

The peerless Hornsby slammed out two doubles that were real blows. One went to right, the other to left center. He also was credited with a single, thanks to a generous ump, who decided he had beaten out a slow bounder to Friberg.

No game will be played Tuesday, out of respect to the memory of Charles Ebbetts, president of the Brooklyn club, who died yesterday. The flag in center field will fly at half staff for the next thirty days.

Mueller, the Cards' center fielder, kicked lustily in the third inning because Ump Pfirman called him out at the plate. When Mueller had finished his speech he was told to beat it for the clubhouse. He did and Douthit played the rest of the game in center.

SOX NOTES

ST. LOUIS, Mo., April 18.—[Special.]—Charley Robertson is slated to slab against the Browns tomorrow in the second game of the series here.

The Browns' park shows vast improvement over last year. The fence around the outfield has been painted.

Fans of Granite City, across the river, came over and before the game presented George Bischoff, our recruit catcher, with a big basket of posies and a satchel big enough to hold at least twenty-four pints.

Johnny Butler is no longer one of us. He has been transported to the Minneapolis club, where he will perform as an outfielder.

President B. B. Johnson of the American league appeared here at the game today. He sat in a box with Phil Ball, owner of the Browns.

Jacobson still is holding out on the Browns and the fans are yelling for him and yelling at Bennett, who is filling in. It was said that Owner Phil Ball asked Bennett today how everything was in centerfield. "Everything is Jake," was the young man's reply. Correct, Azzell, judging from the bleacher cries.

PHILS BEAT BRAVES, 14-13.

TAYLOR'S FUTURE DEPENDS ON GO AGAINST SMITH

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

The future of Bud Taylor, aggressive Terre Haute, Ind., bantamweight, probably will be determined tomorrow night at East Chicago, where his injured right shoulder will be put to the test in a ten round bout with Rugged Midget Smith of New York.

Taylor was considered one of the most promising bantamweights developed in the west in years before he threw out his right shoulder by careless swinging. He had been told repeatedly by boxing instructors to eliminate the wild swings and learn to punch straight. Bud refused to heed this expert advice and has been out of commission for months.

Must Use Straight Punch.

He has been undergoing treatment by a New York specialist for quite a spell, and the physician asserted he would guarantee Bud's shoulder if he punches straight, but the old ailment will return the moment he starts to swing. In his training bouts Bud has been trying to overcome this weakness, but there is no telling what he will do in the heat of battle.

If Taylor shows any flashes of his old-time form, a great bout should result. Local fans will recall the interesting fights in the open air arena at East Chicago between Smith and Joe Burman. They were fights from the first tap of the bell, and such should be the case tomorrow night.

If Taylor goes through the bout in good shape, he will engage in a strenuous outdoor campaign.

Promoters Want Bud.

New York promoters want Taylor for Bushy Graham, the bouncing Utica, N. Y., 118 pounder, while fight conductors in Cleveland want Bud to trade punches with Carl Tremaine. Jim Mullen wants Taylor to meet Phil Rosenberg, the world's bantamweight champion, at Aurora, while Omaha wants him for Earl McArthur. None of these matches will be considered by Manager Eddie Long until after tomorrow night's fight, when it will be known whether Taylor's shoulder is entirely well.

In the semi-windup of tomorrow night's program, Mickey O'Dowd of Muncie, Ind., will meet Frankie Callahan of Columbus in an eight round bout at 135 pounds. Two heavyweights Al Moore, the East Chicago policeman, and Al Mathews, Woodlawn ice man, will clash in the four round opener. Paul Allen of Woodlawn and Bobby Cooper of the west side mix in one of the six round preliminaries at 126 pounds, while Dan Gaspara and Danny Kahn, local 155 pounders, will be the principals in the other.

Gardner to Referee.

Jimmy Gardner, the welterweight of fifteen years ago, will referee the main event, with Packey McVey handling the preliminaries. Tickets are on sale at the usual places, and a regular train will leave over the Illinois Central from the Randolph street terminal at 6:40 o'clock tomorrow evening.

International Ring Meet at Boston Again Deferred

Improving on History

I just finished hearing a Politician, one of the Washington Boys, talk on Abraham Lincoln, The only thing I could picture in common between him and Lincoln was that they had both been in Washington, When a Politician ain't talking about himself he is talking about Lincoln, Lincoln has had more Public men speak of his good qualities, and fewer copy any of them, than any man America ever produced, His famous address was only about two hundred words long, No Politician has ever been able to even copy his briefness, In fact, that is the last one of his qualities they would try to copy, Lincoln said more in those 200 words than has been said in the entire City of Washington in the last 10 years, And here is a quality that no historian or speaker has ever brought out before: At the completion of the Gettysburg Speech, he wisely refused one of Grant's Cigars, and borrowed a sack of 'Bull' Durham from an ex-Southern private, rolled his own, got on his Mule and went back to Washington.

GOLF'S CAPTURE OF YOUTH SHOWN AT BROOKWOOD

BY MORROW KRUM.

There is little or nothing concerning the proper age of golf club officials in that slender volume that contains the rules of the royal and ancient game. Nor has any other court or any judicial body of any nature sponsored edicts regarding a fitting age for tee box tourists.

But isn't it a fact that the general picture of a golfer is a man rather past middle age? Isn't it generally believed our golf and country club officials are gentlemen of maturity and well filled purses?

The game was brought to America by young men who have grown old or historic in their nursing of it. I has been built up to its present high plane by the seniors. It has been made famous by wealthy and young old men. (I know the man who asserts he brought the first clubs to Chicago; the story will be printed in this column soon.)

Youngsters Entering Sport.

But though the seniors have neither relaxed their efforts nor lost their importance in golf, the young men are taking hold of the pastime with remarkable vigor. Young men and men with moderate purses are coming to the fore every day.

Take Bobby Jones, the best of them all, for instance. Or the Sunset Ridge Golf club in Winnetka. Or the Brookwood Country club in Oak Park. The Sunset Ridge and the Brookwood clubs are made up from the ranks of men who are young. Most of them were in their early twenties when the war started. Now they have good golf clubs, well organized golf clubs, well governed golf clubs.

To particularise let us speak of the Brookwood club, which is new and fresh in our midst. It's located west of Oak Park. It will have a formal opening in June.

The average age of the Brookwood members is 34 years. The young men live in Oak Park, River Forest and nearby suburbs. They are enthusiastic. They wanted a golf club of their own and wanted it at moderate prices.

Spend Revenue on Course.

Now they have 166 acres of rolling land. Nine of the eighteen holes are completed. It was necessary to cut 1,400 trees to build the course. When you play the course you will cross a creek six times. The clubhouse will be ready next month.

The wisdom these young men have shown would credit any crowd of seniors. They spend 70 cents of each dollar on the course. The other 30 cents goes to the clubhouse. That is sound business judgment. It'll be a golf club, you see. The officers, to whom the credit must be due, are: Waldo B. Ames, president; Clifford H. Westcott, vice president; J. M. Dall, treasurer; Robert McMaster, assistant treasurer; William C. Savage, secretary, and John G. Ford, F. W. Slaughter, Garrett F. Larkin, F. W. Pringle, Frank C. Borwell, and George A. Overton, directors.

Members of Bunker Hill will dedicate their new clubhouse today. President B. F. Andresen will be chairman of the day. Miss Peggy McElhatton will christen the building in the old fashioned way. R. H. Allen, secretary, will be on hand. The club is located near Niles. Gordon Wright is the popular professional.

Those of you who intend to enter the national open tournament this year and who haven't filed your application should do so at once. The last day is May 1. No post entries will be considered. The entry fee is $5, and each entrant must state in which of the three districts he would like to qualify. The address is the United States Golf association, 110 East 42d street, New York City. Do it now, gentlemen, or you may forget.

The U. S. G. A. has made public the program for the national public parks championship at the Salisbury Country club, Garden City, L. I., Aug. 4-8 inclusive. The qualifying round will be divided into two eighteen hole tilts the first two days and team scores for the Warren G. Harding trophy, emblematic of the intercity championship, will be compiled from these frames. The winner of the individual trophy will receive the Standish trophy, while four medals will also be awarded.

Palos Hills and Edgebrook opened with great enthusiasm yesterday. There'll be many players shooting these two courses today. More than 500 appeared and approved of the opening yesterday.

James Shea, boss at Harlem, says the shooters are getting down into the seventies already.

It'll be another big day at Glen View.

And Ridge, Beverly, Westmoreland, Indian Hill, Skokie, Flossmoor, Olympia Fields, Idlewild, Midlothian, and many others will be going at top speed.

Tom Bendelow's clippings from old country papers indicate Bobby Jones is as well liked and his game as much respected in Europe as it is in Atlanta.

The Lincoln park course is coming along in good shape, but the formal opening probably is still a fortnight distant.

CUE FANS WILL WATCH REISELT IN COMING TILTS

Winning ten games straight, Otto Reiselt of Philadelphia steps into the limelight for the next six days in the title race of the National Championship Three Cushion Billiard league. He faces twelve games with the hope of tightening up on the three leaders. By capturing eighteen of his last twenty-two games Reiselt has taken a strong hold on fourth place with sixty games won and thirty-six lost.

Reiselt opens the week by receiving Allen Hall of Chicago on Monday and Tuesday in four games. He took three of a previous series in the middle west from Hall. On Wednesday and Thursday he visits Earle Lookabaugh at Boston. Lookabaugh dropped four to Reiselt in Philadelphia.

Reiselt Meets Champ.

On Friday and Saturday Reiselt engages the champion, Robert Cannefax, in New York. They split a recent series, but in the first round Cannefax took three of four. Cannefax, however, failed in a crisis the other day when he only divided with Gus Copulos of Detroit, the league leader. It gave Copulos a season supremacy of one game, the Detroiter taking seven of their twelve encounters.

Copulos is likely to hold his margin of 73 and 41 or better it during the next six days. He encounters three second division rivals from whom the leaders are steadily pulling away. He visits Charles Ellis at Pittsburgh on Monday and Tuesday, tackles Harry Wakefield at Cleveland the second pair of days, and concludes the week at home against Clarence Jackson, the other Detroit entry.

Layton Holds Place.

In eight games on the road Johnny Layton of Minneapolis is expected to hold the pace. He has won eighty and lost forty, trailing close to Cannefax, who has won seventy-seven and lost thirty seven. Layton's advance must be made at Milwaukee Monday and Tuesday against Arthur Thurnblad, from whom he took four of six recently, and at Chicago against Augie Kieckhefer on Wednesday and Thursday. Layton raised the high run mark of the league to fourteen for the season. Standing:

Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question.

The Question.

Do you think athletics in the Big Ten universities are becoming or already are corrupt, and that athletics and higher education should be 'divorced"?

Where Asked.

Washington and Franklin.

The Answers.

J. M. Mercer, 2223 Payne street, Evanston, editor Western Society of Engineers—Various disturbing rumors are heard about corrupt athletics, but I doubt if the condition is any worse now than a generation ago. Under proper faculty supervision athletics make university life worth living, which it would not be without such diversion.

G. Leland Seaton, 5212 Kimbark avenue, commercial engineer—Athletics in the Big Ten universities are on a higher plane now than they ever have been before. The very fact that Maj. Griffith is guiding Big Ten athletic activities is evidence enough for me that the tendency is toward encouraging higher education rather than lowering scholarship standards. Divorcement of athletics and scholarship would deflate the value of both.

E. A. Gardner, 140 Euclid avenue, Park Ridge, Ill., commercial engineer—I am a firm believer in college athletics. It may be that athletics, as carried on in the Big Ten, do have some bad effects, but those effects are far outweighed by the get together spirit which is a necessity in successful athletic competition. I have been closely associated with a number of athletes while at Ohio State and I say, "Give us more of them."

A. E. Stahl, 4406 Greenwood avenue, statistician—I think that the majority of athletes play the game for the pure love of the sport and because of the spirit of loyalty to the school. Athletics encourage this same loyalty among the students so that removing them from student life would take away one of the greatest advantages of attending college.

Edward S. Dowling, 730 Roscoe street, factory superintendent—They should not be "divorced." They are about as corrupt as baseball, which is very slightly, though greatly magnified. It would undoubtedly hurt athletics in general for profits from the sport of football largely are expended for promoting less lucrative sports.

LIVE WATER FISHING.

FISHERMEN who have never taken a river trip during the summer months should try this kind of a vacation, as it is guarteed to produce a few new thrills for the average lake angler. To be able to camp in a new place each night, to battle with hard-fighting river bass or muskellunge, to shoot a few rapids and to see each day new scenes are the rewards of the river angler who can travel either via the canoe or the rowboat.

Moreover, river fishing means further education in the art of learning where bass and muskies hang out. It is comparatively easy to read a lake, to spot the weed beds, and best loitering places of the finny tribes. But it's a different story on a river. One summer when we were paddling up and down the French river in Canada, Wilson, our guide, showed us a few tricks in reading a river, in learning places where muskies, pike or bass could be caught which brought home to us the fact that a guide is well nigh indispensable on a river exploring and fishing trip.

One afternoon Wilson took us to a beautiful spot on the French where a noisy rapids made sweet music for our ears. We asked him to tell us about the layout and to explain the program. So he quickly painted the picture as follows: first we were going to fish for small mouth at the rapids. Just bel the swift water and a little to the ri he pointed out a huge bowlder. Im mediately in front of that was a d hole, a pool, and in this we could g pike galore if we wanted them. Th the Indian waved his hand toward broad baylike widening of the riv several hundred yards to the left. Ov there he said was a weed bed seve hundred yards in width and there w could cast or troll for muskies.

After several hours of wond sport with rod and line we were r to admit that Wilson knew what was talking about. Scrappy mouth bass entertained us, pike f the deep hole had been hooked, and the weed bed an overgrown lunge been snagged, but he wrecked our tackle and went on his way rejoi

Many middle western anglers know how much fun awaits th nearby streams in Wisconsin wh offer dandy muskie and bass and fishing. On these rivers one can a trip of any length. Starting f Lac du Flambeau in the Flambeau In dian reservation it is possible to g taste of river fishing on just a day trip or you can load up your and set sail for a number of days camp, fish, shoot the rapids, and some beautiful country that is pretty much untouched by civiliz

Performance

—Consistent, Sustained, Dependable Performance

The best is not good enough—unless the car will do it every time and all the time.

A motor that will show great power—a car that will exhibit great speed, is all right so far as it goes, but what you want (and what you are entitled to receive, in a car today) is sustained power—long sustained speed.

And brakes—it isn't sufficient that your brakes function well for a time.

If they require frequent adjustments they are a nuisance—and a menace.

For, you never know when they are going to fail you.

Brakes that you have to worry about; brakes that need constant attention to keep them working; brakes that need adjusting every little while—are just as good as no brakes.

In brakes you need, above all things, dependability—certainty.

Rickenbacker brakes in average service have shown 20,000 miles without adjustment. Hundreds of owners tell us so.

More amazing, Cannon Ball Baker in his great drive from Coast to Coast—3,106.5 miles in 71 hours, 33 minutes, never once adjusted his brakes.

Again—he drove 1,558 miles, Canada to Mexico, crossed three mountain ranges—Cascades, Siskiyous and Tehachapi—at speed so terrific as to shatter all previous records!

Thousands of turns—hundreds of hair-pin bends on mountain switch-backs!

That's equivalent to at least 20,000 miles of average driving so far as brakes are concerned—and he never even looked at them.

There's uniform performance for you!

And this car—this motor—these brakes—will repeat that performance "every time and all the time" in your own hands.

Drive this Rickenbacker Six yourself—it will be a revelation to you.

$5,000 TROPHY IS ADDED TO YACHT PRIZES

Chicago yachtsmen have gathered a fund approximating $5,000 for the Commodore Sheldon Clark trophy foundation which will be added to the list of prizes this summer in the regattas to be held here. This new trophy will be the finest presented yearly to yachtsmen anywhere in the world.

Heretofore there have been expensive cups placed in competition but they rarely became the private property of the winners. In the Clark foundation case the winning craft in Universal and Seawanhaka divisions of some stated race will get permanent possession of a trophy which will be renewed every year.

Two Events Possibilities.

There are two races which are being discussed as possibilities for the new trophy. The first of these is the Lake Michigan Yachting club's annual regatta held July 4 on which practically all the sailing craft on this lake take part.

There has never been a distinctive prize for the winning craft in this event. There are a number of class races but the Seawanhaka and Universal craft cannot be fairly compared so that a definite winner of the day can be figured out.

Clark Ex-Yacht Head.

This data goes for the autumn regatta of the Chicago Yacht club also, and it is likely that one of these races will be handed the new trophy.

Commodore Clark was head of the Chicago Yacht club for 1920-'21-'22-'23, being the first commodore to be honored with more than two consecutive terms.

St. Paul, Minn., April 18.—Mike Gibbons, St. Paul boxer, who at one time was rated as one of the greatest middleweights in the history of boxing, later a manager of boxers, proprietor of a gymnasium, and an amateur fight promoter, has retired from the boxing business for good, he said today.

San Francisco, April 18.—Frankie Schoell, the Buffalo favorite, won the decision today in his ten round battle with Jimmy Duffy, Pacific welterweight. HARVEY-SPARTA GAME IS SOCCER FEATURE TODAY

Harvey and Sparta are slated to provide today's soccer feature. These two evenly matched elevens will battle this afternoon at Twenty-seventh and Kostner avenues in a second round Peel cup game. The suburbanites and west siders have played twice this season, one game being a 2 to 2 tie and the other a 2 to 1 triumph for Harvey.

The Harvey-Sparta scrap, however, will not occupy the spotlight alone today for local fans will turn their attention to the Canadian club, which plays for the national championship at Tiverton, R. I. The Cannucks will tackle the Shawshan eleven of Massachusetts.

Making ready for the battle royal the Spartans and Harveys have added new men to their roster. John King, star fullback of Gillespie, Ill., will be in the Sparta lineup and Harvey boasts the services of Pete Anderson, brilliant center.

Other games on the card are: Pullman vs. Olympia, at 103d street and Corliss avenue; Bricklayers vs. North Shores, at Thirty-fifth and Wentworth avenue; Thistles vs. Swedish Americans, at Riverview park.

MANDELL SIGNS FOR SCRAP ON COAST JUNE 6

Eddie Kane, manager of Sammy Mandell, announced last night he had signed up the Rockford boy for a ten round bout to a decision with Phil Salvator at Los Angeles, Cal., on June 6. The bout will be promoted by Dick Donald for the Lyceum A. C. and will be staged at the Ascot speedway. Kane looks for a big attendance as the Shriners are holding their convention in the coast city that week.

Right now Sammy is in bad with Rockford reformers, who have had the young fellow indicted for staging a benefit match. Kane, however, says he is not worrying over the matter and is going ahead figuring on many bouts for the lightweight during the summer.

Kane also announced that coast promoters are after Tommy Gibbons to put on the gloves with Tony Fuente, but nothing definite has come of negotiations to date. They are talking a July 4 fight.

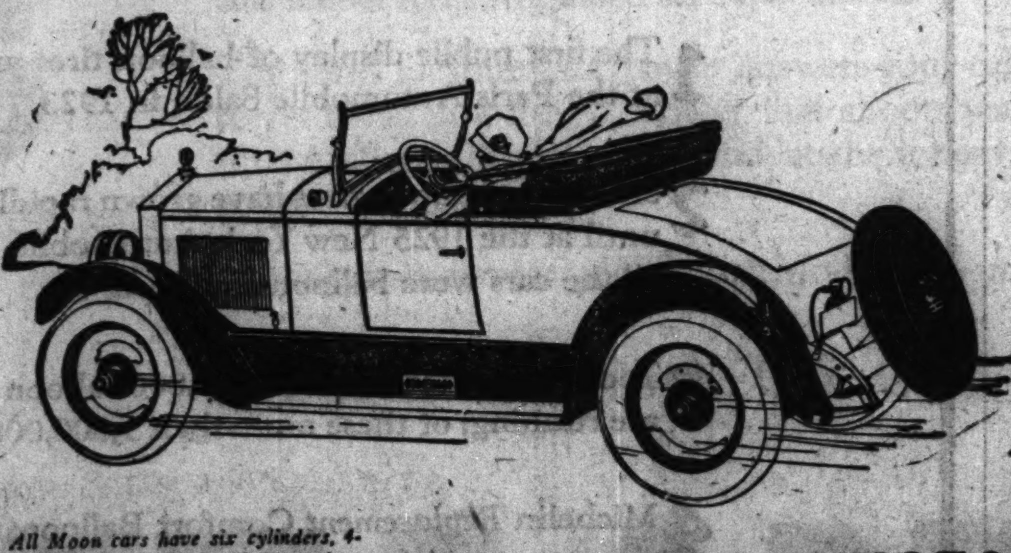
MOON

The hit of the metropolitan centers—where it takes class to win.

For instance, Los Angeles, the biggest open car market of the United States, immediately accepts them and orders them in trainload lots.

Novel, chic and practical, too. Note the disappearing rear seat. See the combined step and golf-club carrier on the right side.

Low, smooth and speedy. A reserve power of sixty miles an hour, if you care—and dare. Reeking with class and distinction.



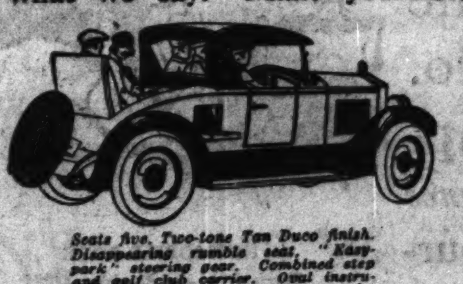
All Moon cars have six cylinders, 4-wheel hydraulic brakes, balloon tires, patented steering gear, Duco finish.

Companionable for two and yet roomy enough for five—three on the main seat and two behind. And best of all, a patented multiple-leverage steering gear with which you can park and unpark with an easy twirl of the wheel.

Motor, chassis, body are the "advance-engineered" product of a group of America's foremost engineers that has introduced a new class of motor-car construction.

Be sure and see this "Roadmaster." You'll get a real kick out of its style and action—and a real thrill of surprise at its price for the quality.

CALL YOUR NEAREST DEALER TODAY and prove what we say. Make your own comparisons as to its superior value in looks, performance, permanent style. LIBERAL TIME PAYMENTS AND DEALERS' FLOOR PLAN. Your territory may be open—allotments now being arranged. THE PRICE WILL SURPRISE YOU.



Seats five. Two-tone Tan Duco finish. Disappearing rumble seat. "Easy-park" steering gear. Combined step and golf club carrier. Oval instrument board with all instruments under glass.

TRINZ'S SPECIAL STARTS DERBY PREP AT AURORA

BY FRENCH LANE.

The Chicago racing district became the training ground for at least one Kentucky Derby candidate yesterday when the three year old Special, owned by Joseph Trinz, the movie magnate, was unloaded at Exposition Park track in Aurora.

The Derby candidate was shipped to Aurora from Tijuana with other nags owned by the Trinz & Richards stables. According to S. W. Richards, the trainer, the colt finished the long trip in good condition.

Special hardly displayed enough class in his Tijuana engagements to be considered of Derby calibre. The Chicagoan is anxious to have his silks represented at Churchill Downs, however, and as the Derby stacks up as one of the most open races in years, it is possible Special will keep the Derby date. He will not be declared out at least until after he has a chance to show his class in training gallops at Aurora during the next two weeks.

Won Two of Seven Starts.

In seven starts at Tijuana, Special was the winner of two races, both at six furlongs. He did not show a liking for a distance under weight. He has displayed some sparkling early speed, however, and in the Tijuana Derby, won by Hedge Fence, was the leader during the running of the first mile, wilting fast in the stretch to finish in sixth place.

Special is by Alvescot-Amelita, the latter by Sempronius, and was purchased by the Chicagoan from Harned Brothers of Kentucky. He was campaigned at Hawthorne last summer.

While a few elimination tests for Derby candidates have been run in Maryland during the last ten days, the first of the trials for western owned colts will come at Lexington, where the Kentucky spring season opens next Saturday afternoon.

Forty Candidates There.

Nearly forty Derby candidates are quartered at the Lexington track and most of them will get into action during the ten days the meeting runs. The tests, if they run true to the form of other seasons, will eliminate more than half of the forty from Derby consideration.

In the early eastern races at Havre de Grace the biggest failure of the highly regarded Derby eligibles is the imported colt Nicholas, for which Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt II. is reported to have paid $50,000 late last season. He was left flat footed at the post in his first start, and off first yesterday in a field of Derby rivals finished last in a five and a half furlong dash.

The race was won by The Bat, one of the colts Harry Payne Whitney is pointing for the $50,000 Kentucky race.

750 Horses at Hawthorne.

Nicholas may do better at a longer route by Derby day. Until his disappointing race yesterday the Vanderbilt interests had great confidence in his Derby chances.

The Chicago Business Men's Racing association reported yesterday 750 horses have been registered up to date for the season at Hawthorne, starting July 2. Numerous stables from Maryland and Kentucky are among those making reservations. Some New York strings also are included.

Oracle is owned by Mrs. M. M. Maddux of Warrenton, Va.

Quatrain's Trainer Breaks with Owner; Quits in Huff

Louisville, Ky., April 18.—[Special.]—Strained relations between Owner Frederick Johnson and Trainer Tom Harmon came to a break today when the latter resigned his position with the Johnson stable, which houses Quatrain, the Kentucky Derby favorite. Harmon's action struck like a thunderbolt from a clear sky, as on the surface it appeared as though he and his employer were on the best of terms, and none outside of perhaps those directly connected with the stable had noticed the slightest sign of discord between them.

This and a mile workout in 1:43 3-5 by Dan Lehan's Drowsy Waters were the chief incidents of importance today where derby activities are concerned. Johnson gave no reason for his trainer leaving, nor did he announce the appointment of his successor. He looked after his horses himself.

Relations Not Congenial.

To friends Harmon said that his relations with Johnson were not congenial and for this reason he deemed it best to leave his service.

Drowsy Waters galloped about today and was equipped with blinkers. He ran at an even gait—eighth in :12 4-5, quarter in :25 1-5, three-eighths in :38 1-5, half mile in :51, five-eighths in 1:04 4-5, three-quarters in 1:17 3-5, and seven-eighths in 1:30 3-5. Claver had him well in hand all the way.

Brave Bob in Good Move.

Brave Bob, C. M. Ferris' good colt, went a mile in 1:46 in handy fashion one of his stable mates, accompanied one of his stablemates, accompanied him the first five furlongs. His fractional time was: Quarter in :24 2-5, half mile in :49 4-5, and three-quarters in 1:17 1-5.

DANIEL COLT IN N. Y.

NEW YORK, April 18.—[Special.]—Master Charlie, William Daniel's 3 year old colt by Lord Archer-Bachelor's Choice, which is an equal choice with Quatrain in the winter book for the Kentucky derby, arrived at the Jamaica race course today to complete his training for the Preakness stakes and the Kentucky classic. He was in excellent condition after the long journey from New Orleans and will be given several days of rest. His first serious work will be given him next Tuesday morning when he will be asked to go a mile with Cooper up.

The leading Balloon Tire is MICHELIN

1 The first public display of balloon tires was by Michelin at the Paris Automobile Salon in 1923.

2 Since then balloon tires have grown rapidly in popularity, until at the 1925 New York Automobile Show 90.4% of all the cars were balloon-equipped.

3 Today it is estimated that 9,000,000 balloon tires of all makes are running; of these more than 3,000,000 are Michelins.

4 Michelin Replacement Comfort Balloons cost practically the same as high-pressure tires—and you can change to them one at a time as your high-pressure tires wear out. Ask your dealer how to do this.

5 Michelin Small-Diameter Comfort Balloons are the most durable and comfortable tires for the new type small-diameter wheels.

WHETHER you're making long drives down the fairway, or taking long drives down the highway, or running one of the hundred daily errands about town, you'll thank your lucky stars for your Overland.

With Spring here, and Summer already knocking at the door, it's more than ever Overland time.

Here is a car that makes motoring safer, pleasanter, more comfortable, more economical—the Overland All-Steel Sedan—the world's lowest priced Sedan with sliding gear transmission. A nation-wide leader in value and popularity. Sales of this model have surpassed all expectations.

The thrill of abundant power answers your call to get away in a hurry. Power that shoots you up the tallest hills with ease—and laughs at heavy going on rough roads.

A husky frame, a rear axle of tough Mo-lyb-den-um steel, bigger brakes, a modern disc-type clutch assure you of utmost dependability and long-lived service. And patented Triplex Springs level the bumps of travel to boulevard smoothness.

Greater strength, longer life, greater safety are provided by the All-Steel body of the new Overland Sedan—a body with the strength to withstand terrific shocks and jars. Slender steel body posts replace bulky, wooden cornerposts and give much clearer, unobstructed driving vision.

Luxury and beauty unequaled at anywhere near the price. Deep, wide, soft cushioned seats, richly upholstered. Finished in attractive blue Duco. Convenient window regulators.

Extreme economy—less gas, less oil, easier on tires, greater endurance. And the astonishingly low price of the Overland All-Steel Sedan is $110 lower than the nearest competitive car.

WOMEN DISAGREE ON WEDLOCK LAW AND TURN TO MEN!

Voters' League Tied Up in Debate Over Issue.

BY KATE WEBBER.

Richmond, Va., April 18.—[Special.]—The National League of Women Voters came to the first serious division of their annual convention today. The harmony of the delegates, gathered from all sections of the country to discuss affairs of state and home, went to smash when one of them advised that the opinion of the men should be sought before decision was made on the subject before the convention.

The league had discussed in perfect amity the duty of the voter, the economy of government, international relations of the country, the primary and the direct vote. It had agreed on the need of the budget system and the short ballot.

Go to the Men, After All.

Then Miss Esther Dunshee of Chicago brought up the subject which has been under consideration by the league for many years—uniform marriage laws for all the states and the legal status of women.

Prof. Sophonisba P. Breckinridge of Chicago announced that she had pity for the men under provisions of the old marriage law, "when a bridegroom in endowing the bride with all his worldly goods, immediately became possessor of all that she owned."

Then up rose Mrs. John O. Miller of Pennsylvania with a suggestion. She said she was not satisfied with the findings of the committee of the league which has been studying the subject for a year and declared that she would not accept those findings until she had consulted "some expert men lawyers" on the question.

Vote Delayed Till Tomorrow.

Mrs. Catherine Waugh McCulloch of Illinois, who had assisted in drafting the "model bill," urged that it be acted on immediately. After prolonged debate of more or less personal nature, the bill was held over for action on Monday.

The proposed uniform marriage law provides that "any unmarried male of the age of 21 years and upward, and any unmarried female of the age of 18 years and upward and not otherwise disqualified, are capable of consenting to marriage, providing, however, that any male of the age of 18 and any female of the age of 16 and upward can agree to a marriage with the consent of their parents or guardians."

The section of which many of the delegates seemed to disapprove was one providing that marriages between cousins are void from the beginning. Another section provides that "all marriages commonly known as 'common law marriages' hereafter entered into shall be and the same are hereby declared null and void."

Demands Health Test.

The act also provides that health certificates must be obtained by both parties to a marriage within five days prior to application for the license.

The program of the committee on status of women was adopted. An attempt was made to strike out the clause which calls for exemption of young mothers with children from jury service, its opponents declaring there were already enough discriminations against women jurors. This was voted down.

A slight change was made in the equal property rights recommendation, wherein a spouse's inheritance or gift of money shall include also accrued interest from such property, both to be clear titled and not owned in any part by the other.

A resolution renewing faith in the eighteenth amendment and its enforcement was introduced by Dr. Lavina R. Davis of New York and referred to a future session for action.

LOWDEN DECLARES FARMER HASN'T YET FOUND PROSPERITY

FRANK O. LOWDEN. [Copyright: Moffett.]

Washington, D. C., April 18.—[Special.]—Taking a rap at optimists who report that agricultural conditions are greatly improved, former Gov. Frank O. Lowden of Illinois today declared that farming conditions through the middle west were still much depressed.

"One reason is because the country does not realise the condition of the farmer," Mr. Lowden said, as he left the White House where he had called on President Coolidge.

"Some one is always finding something in a set of figures or in the comparisons of commodity prices on which to base a story that farming conditions are vastly improved.

"But such is not the case. There is still too great a discrepancy between the prices the farmer receives and the price he has to pay for what he buys.

"Laws will help but they will not bring prosperity for the farmer," Mr. Lowden said. "The only real remedy for the farmer is better organization and coöperation."

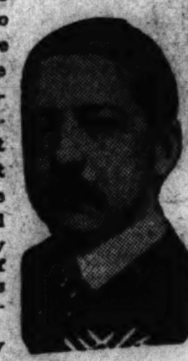
U. S. PROTEST ON MEXICAN GRAB CALLED STERN

Seeks End of Property Seizures by States.

BY JOHN CORNYN.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1925: By The Chicago Tribune.]



J. R. SHEFFIELD.

Mexico City, April 18.—Notwithstanding a denial from semi-official sources, there is good reason to believe the note handed by the American ambassador to the Mexican government protesting against the seizure of the Jalapa Light and Power company by the state of Vera Cruz, was couched in energetic terms.

It is stated by apparently authoritative sources that the American government is making a test of the Jalapa seizure to protect American investments in Mexico from arbitrary action on the part of state and local governments.

Recognizes No State Authority.

Semi-officially it is stated that the position taken by Washington is that the American government recognises no state authority in Mexico and it looks to the Mexican federal government for the protection of American lives and property in Mexico.

Mr. Sheffield, the American ambassador, explained the delay of the Mexican government in replying to the American note as due to the absence of President Calles and Foreign Minister Pani from the city and to the holiday season. He hopes to receive an answer or an acknowledgment next week, but he stated that, owing to the nature of the note and the matter treated, the government might need more time for investigation.

State Government Holds Plant.

In the meantime the authorities state that Vera Cruz apparently is determined to retain control of the Jalapa Light and Power company until the American firm bows to the conditions imposed by the state government.

Mr. Sheffield stated that a joint announcement would be made in Mexico and Washington regarding the date of meeting of a commission to discuss the proposed treaties on immigration and smuggling. The announcement is only awaiting notice of the appointment of the Mexican members of the commission.

Jailer's Wife Asks More Magazines for Prisoners

Declaring that the supply of magazines for the use of the prisoners in the county jail is almost exhausted, Mrs. Wesley H. Westbrook, wife of Warden Westbrook, yesterday appealed to the public to furnish a new supply. Mrs. Westbrook suggested that clubs hold a magazine day. The address of the jail is 440 North Dearborn street.

TWO CRIMINAL JUDGES ADDED TO CLEAR JAIL

In an effort to clean out the county jail and give its thousand or more prisoners speedy trials Chief Justice Jacob Hopkins yesterday assigned Judges Timothy Hurley and Joseph B. David to hear criminal cases. They will remain in the County building and a Criminal court call will be assigned to their courts Monday.

Judge Hurley will hear only bail cases, while Judge David will try jail cases. Chief Collins was appealed to when the call docket showed that in the fifteen cases assigned to Judge David the prisoners were all held in heavy bonds. The chief said he would assign several of his men to convey and watch the prisoners.

"I'll clean out the jail," Judge David said. "In two months I will get rid of 500 indictments."

There are now twelve judges hearing criminal cases. Seven trying jail cases and five hearing cases where prisoners have made bail.

Let Your Architect Be The Judge

-On Sanitation-On Economy

NO ONE is as deeply concerned as your architect in securing the most sanitary plumbing fixtures obtainable for your new building. And no one is as anxious as he is to prevent a burdensome increase in the cost of operating your building, due to plumbing fixtures that are extravagant with water.

No one is as well qualified as your architect to judge the relative merits of different designs of plumbing equipment. With his experience, and his facilities for making accurate tests, he is the authority on whom you may implicitly rely.

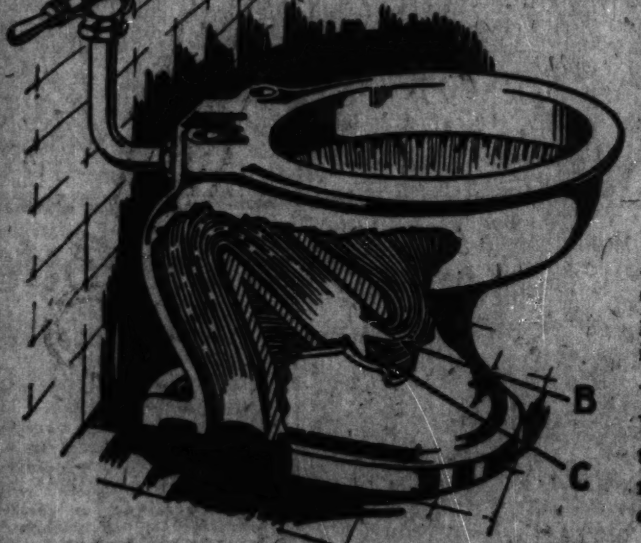
Watrous

Duo-Jet Closets and Flush Valves

Make Clogging and Overflowing Impossible
—Cut Water Cost to One-Third

Ask your architect's opinion on the effect of the narrow, zigzag passages in the commonly used syphon type of closet bowl. See Fig. 2 in the illustration above. Ask him about the frequent clogging and overflowing that they cause—and the resulting expense. Ask him about the money wasted at every flush through the large quantity of water necessary to produce syphonic action.

Then—take his candid opinion on the wide passage and straight, vertical outlet of the Watrous Duo-Jet Bowl, by which clogging is made impossible. See Fig. 1, above. Ask him to explain to you the economical operation of the Duo-Jet principle, which avoids syphonic action, and thereby reduces the cost of each flush to one-third.



The Watrous Flush Valve and Duo-Jet Closet Save 3 to 6 Gallons at Every Flush

A regulating device in the Watrous Flush Valve (see A in sketch at left) controls the quantity of water passing through it. Two powerful converging jets (B and C) at the base of the Watrous Duo-Jet Bowl instantly empty it; this, and the refill that follows, consume less than 2 gallons of water.

You can realize, therefore, the economy made possible by using the Watrous valve and bowl in combination. The valve is regulated to supply the exact quantity of water required by the bowl for a thorough flush and refill—and no more. The least wasteful of all other valve-and-syphon-bowl combinations consume 5 gallons of water at each flush. Many use far more.

If You Intend to Build—

Whether you are planning to erect a bungalow, factory, office skyscraper, hotel, apartment building—or any other type of building, no matter how small or how large—look into the matter of sanitation and operating cost before the walls go up.

State May Offer Paving Relief to Illinois Towns

Meents Bill Aimed at Gaps in Bond Issue Roads.

BLOOMINGTON, Ill., April 18.—[Special.]—Adoption by the Illinois legislature of the Meents bill may solve the Meridian highway problem, which threatens to leave in De Witt county a six to eight mile gap in the concrete of route 2 of the state bond issue between Rockford and Cairo, via Bloomington.

The Meents measure, which has been favorably reported in both the senate and house, provides that the state highway department may construct roads authorized by the bond issues through towns and villages below 7,500 population, instead of requiring all such municipalities to provide for such pavement within the corporation limits.

Clinton, the capital of De Witt county, has been the center of a controversy in relation to right of way which has delayed the completion of the Meridian between that city and Wapella at the northern edge of the county. The new road is completed all the way from Clinton to Cairo, and from Wapella to Rockford, with the exception of a short stretch now under construction in Ogle county.

The hitch developed over the route in Clinton. One faction insisted that the road go straight through the center of the city in order to aid the business houses. Another objected on the ground of traffic congestion and the expense of construction, and favored skirting the city at the western limits. After several years of agitation, the state highway department suggested a compromise by utilizing Grant street, which is midway between the two other routes. This was satisfactory to every one but the property owners along that thoroughfare, as they refused to pay for the pavement. This attitude deadlocked the controversy and the complication might have continued interminably but for the relief offered by the bill drawn by the senator from Ashkum.

The Meents bill provides that the state shall only pay for a width of eighteen feet, but if the corporation desires a wider pavement or wishes to vary from the plans and specifications standardized by the state engineers, all additional cost must be paid by the village or town.

Owing to the importance of route 2 and the heavy volume of motor traffic that is anticipated during the coming year, the state highway department is extremely anxious to close the De Witt county gap and avoid the extensive detours that have been necessary during the winter months. It is anticipated also that the Meents bill will adjust similar right of way complications which have developed, or will develop, among other small towns along the route of projected roads under the two bond issues.

THE INQUIRING REPORTER

He's Out to Learn the Truth About Motordom.

The Tribune will pay $5 for each question accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send name and address with your question to "The Inquiring Reporter," Chicago Tribune. For today's question $5 is awarded to J. A. Sanaker, 2013 Columbus avenue, Minneapolis, Minn.

The Question.

Are automobile races gaining or losing in popularity?

Where Asked.

Ogden and Crawford avenues.

The Answers.

William C. Stanlik, 3415 Ogden avenue, automobile dealer—I think the sport is gaining. So many people own cars now that the big majority of the public is interested in a sport which not only offers real pleasure, but also develops the automobile motor.

J. F. Opelka, 3013 Harding avenue, mechanic—I'd say gaining. I seldom miss a race and I hope to be one of the thousands that will jam into the great Indianapolis speedway in May. Automobile racing has done more toward making a safe and sound stock automobile than almost any other factor in American industry.

Anna Marcus, 1844 South Lawndale avenue, stenographer—I believe that races are gaining in popularity. This is a great sport, country and people are always ready to boost any sport that is clean and free from fake and graft. Automobile racing is about the cleanest and most thrilling sport on the list.

Thomas Husband, 2217 South Kedzie avenue, salesman—Auto racing is losing in popularity in Chicago at least. I think it encourages our younger sports to speed on the streets and I do not believe that it benefits anybody but the race promoters.

Lillian Barker, 1828 South Lawndale avenue, secretary—The greatest sport in the world is automobile racing. There are more thrills in watching a race than in any sport I know. The races will be more popular this year than ever.

Sign Language Is Subject of New Highway Campaign

Club Outlines Standards for Shape and Color of Warnings.

"STANDARDIZATION of direction and warning signs is one of the most important phases of safety first work that we have to consider today," declares a bulletin issued by the accident prevention department of the Chicago Motor club.

The American Automobile association has made an extensive study of the situation and the affiliated clubs are making a concentrated effort to get some action on this widely discussed subject.

The engineering standards committee recently recommended the following colors for nonluminous signs: Red background with white letters or symbols to indicate "stop"; green background with black letters or symbols to indicate "proceed"; yellow background with black letters to indicate "caution."

Not one of the forty-eight states conforms exactly to this color scheme, and no two use exactly the same color for the same purpose throughout their entire system, while, in some instances, the tourist runs into two different color arrangements in the same state, as in northern and southern California. Color, therefore, means little or nothing in present day practice, while the variety in the shape and symbols of signs is even greater.

In California every sign is placed on a diamond, while in Indiana the diamond shaped sign always indicates a dangerous condition in the road.

More motorists have come to grief at railroad crossings than any where else on the nation's highways. And yet, despite the toll of life, an amazing amount of variety has crept into this most important of all warnings. The round sign with the double R has been legally adopted as the advance warning in several states. But the fact remains that the sign today varies all the way from this somewhat standardized form to the grewsome attempt to portray a skull and crossbones.

One of the important points relative to railroad signs is the failure to standardize the distance of the advance warning from the point of danger. This, of course, applies to other important signs as well as to the railroad sign. It appears to be the general consensus that the sign should be placed from 350 to 500 feet from the point of danger. There were 2,268 fatalities at grade crossings in 1923

The American Automobile association report on highway signs says:

"As a general rule the well-marked states see to it that traffic regulation signs are displayed as prominently as the actual danger signs. In a great many cases, however, the motorist is not adequately told what he is expected to do. Take the speed limit as an example. Often the driver cannot tell when, exactly, he leaves one zone and enters another. The word 'begin' as used in Maryland is very effective. The "per hour" is eliminated without loss of any kind to the effectiveness of the sign.

"In a great many instances the distance and direction signs at cross roads are sloppy, indistinct, and oftentimes misleading. One of the most disagreeable features of these signs is the effort to put too much writing and too many names on the same sign, with the result that the motorist often has to come to a dead stop in order to ascertain the distance and direction to the next point. Instead of the writing standing out in relief, as in the case of the Maryland signs, to mention only one of several splendidly marked states, the signs, in many cases, resemble a medieval map of the world.

At its convention in San Francisco the American Association of State Highway Officials requested the secretary of agriculture to appoint a board to be composed of members of the bureau of public roads and of the state highway departments for the purpose of formulating a uniform program. The proposal met with the approval of the secretary of agriculture and a board will start work in the near future.

The highway officials in their recommendations clashed with the recommendations of the Hoover committee in one important particular. The highway officials recommend green tail lights for automobiles; the Hoover committee voted down this proposal.

The highway officials urge the universal adoption for luminous signs of red to indicate danger or stop, yellow to indicate caution or slow, green to indicate look or attention. The association recommends the use of a light colored sign for the non luminous type, preferably lemon yellow.

Round signs are recommended for grade crossings, octagonal for danger or stop signs, a diamond for caution or slow signs, square for look or attention signs, directional or informational signs rectangular, and for road makers some shape different from those mentioned.

The look or attention sign should be developed so as to bring the attention of the driver of a vehicle to a general condition which he should know of, such as the existence of a school, amusement park, hospital, church, or other point where unexpected increase in vehicles or pedestrians may be expected. The caution sign should be used where it is necessary that the driver reduce speed on account of a condition existing inherently in the road itself, such as steep grade, sharp curve, reverse curve, narrow bridge, rough or loose condition of surface, road under construction, etc. The danger sign should be developed to impress the driver with the need of bringing his car in complete control and be prepared to operate his car to meet an emergency. The danger sign should be used for a stop sign where a full stop is for any reason required. The railroad sign, of course, will be confined to use at grade crossings and may or may not be combined with a second danger or stop sign.

This Fan Believes in Unification of Licensed Numbers

HOW many car owners, if their cars disappeared tomorrow, would be able to reel off their license numbers without thumbing the file marked "valuable papers?"

Not many, statistics would show, and among the few so highly gifted would be John B. Wright of Tucson, Ariz., just apointed U. S. attorney of Arizona by President Coolidge.

Wright would know his license number because it is identical with the number of his house, the number of his postoffice box, and his telephone number. He lives at 646 South Sixth avenue, and once you have that you know practically all there is to know numerically about the new U. S. attorney.

Gossip of the Auto Trade

ESTABLISHMENT of a direct Pierce-Arrow factory branch in Chicago, completed last week by Myron E. Forbes, president of Pierce-Arrow, and A. A. Crumley, the new Chicago chief, marks the opening of a new era of prosperity for the concern in Chicago, in the opinion of Henry Paulman, for twenty-three years Chicago distributor. In retiring from active merchandising both Mr. Paulman and Joseph V. Lawrence, his associate in the old established firm, predict immediate success for the expanded sales plans worked out for the Chicago territory.

May orders, just closed at the Franklin factory in Syracuse, call for 35 per cent more cars than the normal monthly capacity of the plant, according to factory announcement. Each month's orders since announcement of the new style Franklin cars are said to have exceeded the normal output.

With a production record of 24,300 Overland and Willys-Knight cars during March, the company has established a new production peak. Field reports show a gain in retail sales for the month of some 33 per cent over March, 1924.

"Motor Security" is the name of a new publication which will make its debut this week. It is sponsored by the Motor Car Securities corporation, 2328 Michigan avenue, and will be devoted to motor topics and news of the trade. R. B. Johnson is editor.

Recent reports from the Ajax motor plant in Racine indicate that machinery installation for the new Nash subsidiary is progressing rapidly and that the new car may be expected early this spring.

Cheerful Report.

Automobile tourists who have recently reached Nebraska from Salt Lake City say the Lincoln highway is in better condition than they have found it at any time for several years past. They report it a very easy three and a half day drive from Salt Lake City to Grand Island. The snow is almost entirely gone except in a few high spots in western Wyoming, the ground is generally well dried out but retains sufficient moisture to compact it and allow of very fast and comfortable driving.

The Lincoln from Grand Island to Omaha is also now in splendid condition. Except for occasional storms in Iowa, which sometimes cause delays of a day, the highway is now in first class condition for driving, all the way from the Atlantic seaboard to Salt Lake City.

AHEAD OF WORLD.

Motor vehicle registration in the United States has increased a little over tenfold during the last ten years. The increase in Canada during the same period is 9.6; Spain, 6.1; Belgium, 5.7; Italy, 5.6; Holland, 5.2; Denmark, 5.0; France, 4.4; Germany, 3.8; Great Britain, 2.6.

Drivers Crowd to Center of Road on Narrow Pavements

U. S. Bureau Vindicates Truck Pilots in Report.

DOES the average motor car driver keep to the right of the road as far as possible or crowd over to the middle? The United States bureau of public roads finds that the answer to the question is affected by the width of the road, curves, grades, slope of road surface, and condition of the surface adjacent to the pavement.

This conclusion is based on observations of the habits of drivers on highways of various kinds, widths, and locations. Points were selected for observation and the width of the pavement was marked off with white paint into one-foot sections so that the position of passing vehicles could be observed.

In most cases the cars were not passing other vehicles at the instant of observation. The investigation, therefore, indicates the road position preferred by the average driver. Few automobile drivers prefer a position closer to the edge of pavement than 2½ feet and on meeting other cars the average driver will sacrifice clearance rather than drive closer to the edge than he instinctively feels to be safe.

Truck drivers who, as a class, are sometimes accused of being road hogs are found by the bureau to be not guilty. Most of them were observed to drive a foot closer to the edge of the pavement than drivers of passenger cars and under all circumstances they adhered more closely to the side of the road.

Eighteen feet is found to be the minimum width of roadway which will permit passenger vehicles and trucks driven in the preferential positions to pass in safety and with a reasonable amount of clearance. This will allow a distance of 2.7 feet between the outer wheel and the edge of the road for automobiles and 1.3 feet for trucks with 1.9 feet clearance between vehicles.

Observations on curves showed that there is a general tendency to shift to the inside of the curve, particularly by the traffic moving on the outside. Improper banking of the road surface, poor shoulders and steep embankments on the outside of the curve all tend to make drivers crowd to the inside. White lines in the center of the road were found to be very effective in keeping traffic in its proper channel.

A report on the investigation has been issued by the bureau and it is felt that the data will be helpful to engineers in deciding on road widths and other problems of road design.

Another Vet Enters Lists for Gasoline Derby in Indiana

EARL COOPER, one of the ancient tribe of automobile racing drivers who three years ago returned to the speed paths to draw rapidity diagrams of a veteran showing cocky youngsters old tricks in winning ways, has entered a speed creation in the thirteenth international 500 mile race to be held at the Indianapolis motor speedway May 30.

Cooper, who was second in the 500 mile event at Indianapolis last May, is given credit by the experts for having driven the cleverest 500 mile tour ever made over the Hoosier course—or any course in the world for that matter.

The veteran was nosed out at the finish by the daring Joe Boyer, who came from behind to win. Coper was forced to change two tires in the last fifty miles of the event in which it appeared he would surely be returned victor. There are those who say that the tire changes cost him the race—a bit of bad luck heretofore accredited only to a De Palma. There are others who force the opinion that Cooper would have ridden home on comfortable rubber had it not been for the chasing the late Joe Boyer, one of the most spectacular drivers of all time, gave Cooper in the last half of the most exciting long distance race ever held.

Gotham Provides Crack Camp for Motor Tourists

NEW YORK.—Situated at the Boston Post road and Baychester avenue, thirty minutes by motor from the heart of the metropolis, New York City at last has a tourists' camp ground.

"Camp New York," easily reached from the eastern terminus of the Lincoln highway at Times square, by following 42d street to 5th avenue, thence north on the avenue to 125th street, thence east to the Boston Post road and out, is not a municipal camp. The city dads of Manhattan have not yet recognized, as have most of the other large cities on the Lincoln highway, the need for suitable municipal provision for the accommodation of motor campers.

The camp contains forty-two acres and is laid out on high rolling ground, where the outlook is superb, the higher spots commanding a view of Long Island sound.

While it is a pay camp, the charges being $1 per car per day or $5 per week, tourists who have stopped there say that every precaution has been taken to provide for the safety and comfort of campers and that the charges are very moderate for camping privileges in such a location.

City police protection has been provided and other features comprise a dancing pavilion, tourists' information bureau, children's playground, general store, hot and cold showers, telephone service, restaurant, and the provision of tent platforms or complete tent bungalows if desired.

Camp New York has accommodations for 1,000 cars and is expected during the season, which opens May 1, to always harbor a daily average of 2,000 people. A rapid transit station right on the property assures prompt connection with the heart of the city, if for any reason campers do not care to take their cars into town.

Look It Over.

When a driver of one car has an occasion to drive a car of another model he should look over it carefully to see how its controls differ from the one he customarily drives. The strange car may have a different gearshift and destructive results will be experienced if the car is engaged in low speed when it is intended to proceed backward. The correct position of the foot accelerator should be known so that there will be no possibility of stepping on it when, thinking it is the foot brake, to stop the car. Find out where the starter pedal is located, the horn button, light switches, choke, etc. Sometimes there is a difference in the gearshift handle and emergency brake lever on different makes of cars.

COMPLETE CARS.

Automobile shows held throughout the country the last season have established the fact that buyers prefer the completely equipped car.

Speed Financing.

Less than an hour was all the time necessary to dispose of the $85,000,000 block of preferred Dodge Brothers, Inc., stock that was marketed by the recent purchasers—Dillon, Read & Co., New York bankers. The banking house retains control of Dodge through its ownership of half a million shares of class B common stock, which alone has voting power in the new alignment of capital. The new owners have announced that the present policies of the company, which have proven so successful in the past, will continue, and that no displacement of officials, dealers, or distributors will be made.

CAR EVERY YEAR.

If the present rate of automobile manufacturing continues in another ten or twelve years the output will be sufficient to supply every family a new car every year. Roughly speaking, the production has doubled every four years during the last decade.

LOW IMPORTATION.

To every 300 cars that this country exports for sale only one car is imported, according to latest figures of the department of commerce. Last year exports numbered 178,780 and imports 604.

Burst of Speed Main Requirement in American Car

Mental Mechanics of U. S. Driver Explained by Expert.

MOST persons, if asked whether they would enjoy riding on an absolutely smooth road, would say that it would be ideal. It might be very pleasant for awhile, so far as the purely physical effect was concerned, but it would became very monotonous and devoid of those elements of adventure, uncertainty and change that are the very soul of pleasure.

In the opinion of H. L. Horning, president of the Society of Automotive Engineers, the physical pleasure of riding is in mild exercise and the sensation of moving through space but the mental pleasure is in the changing scenes, the relief from customary sights and thoughts and from the extreme boredom of living with oneself.

Nothwithstanding the sensitivity of the instruments with which nature has endowed the human body, judgment of riding qualities is as varied and strange as the individuals themselves, said Horning in addressing the Cleveland section of the society, and may change from day to day, with the weather, the state of one's finances and his degree of domestic tranquillity, and is more critical when the car is not paid for, particularly when the last payment is due.

Specialists who deal with physical and mental impressions, either delicate or rising to the seriousness of a real injury, have given the very appropriate name "insult" to them, said the speaker. These specialists tell us that two impressions spring from every insult, one purely physical and the other mental. Thus, with riding qualities, we are always dealing with both physical and mental impressions, which influence the ever-changing decisions regarding performance.

The perceptions that cause annoyance, fatigue or apprehension are all connected with the amount of fuss a car is making. In the cars of later days the amplitude of vibration has been greatly reduced and the speed increased, but the bureau of standards has found that vibrations of the seat of only 0.001 of an inch can be disagreeable, and Horning said that he personally had determined that the most pleasant riding is done at an engine speed of not much more than 1,000 r.p.m., as the fatigue grows rapidly at higher speeds. It is the number of impulses sent to the brain that tire.

To enjoy a car the passenger needs to have in mind some favorable preconception or ideal, said the speaker, and once a defect or disagreeable incident occurs with a car, the user becomes supersensitive to that one thing. Nine-tenths of the average complaints about a product arise from this mental state.

He closed by saying that Americans pay a high price for the pleasureable sensation of acceleration and that he had estimated that at least 22 per cent of the fuel consumed is due to toting around an ability to accelerate and the liberal use of that ability. On this point he remarked:

"The English like acceleration on second gear, with the illusion that results from the noise of the gears and the bumpiness of the car, which accentuate the impression of great doings. The Americans take it on high, and this leads to our extreme rear axle ratios. We are sacrificing smooth engine operation on the average for great acceleration and hill climbing ability."

Average Motorist Spends 24 Days a Year in His Car

THE average motorist spends twenty-four days and four hours each year in his automobile, according to data submitted by Pyke Johnson, Washington representative of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, to the Hoover safety committee.

In arriving at this calculation, which he believes to be approximately correct, Johnson figured this way:

First read the speedometer to get the total miles you travel: Then divide by twenty. Assuming your average speed while using the car is twenty miles an hour, this gives you the number of hours you have been in your car. Divide this figure by twenty-four and you have the total days you have operated your car.

"Stop" Bill Lost.

An effort to amend the California vehicle act to compel all motorists to come to a full stop, look and listen before entering upon a railroad grade crossing was blocked in the legislature.

When the bill came up in committee it was opposed by the California State Automobile association and by other members of the legislative committee of the motor vehicle conference, the organization which fostered the present California vehicle act.

In opposing the so-called "stop, look and listen" bill at the committee hearing it was declared that if it became a law it would impose upon motorists drastic and unreasonable restrictions which were not now necessary in the interests of public safety.

TAKE 'EM WITH YOU.

Because pliers are the most useful tool around the car, they should be kept in some convenient location. In an emergency they will do the work of a variety of wrenches, hammer, and screwdriver.

STUTZ SIXES

The Stutz Six Sportbrohm

"Where Are the Cars of Yester-Year?"

WE paraphrase old Francis Villon's immortal poetic query as to the roses and maids of Paris, to bring to your mind a vital question which you should ask before purchasing any car.

Today the virtues of a new car are limited only by the superlatives of the advertiser's vocabulary—and new cars look much alike on the salesroom floor and in demonstration.

But the cars of yester-year? Ah, there's the story for you to consider.

Stutz is an old and honored name in the history of the automobile. Long ago the first Stutz car—"made good in a day." Yet a count of Stutz cars actually registered since January 1, 1925, compared to the total production figures shows that—

MORE THAN FOUR OUT OF EVERY FIVE STUTZ CARS EVER BUILT ARE STILL IN SERVICE!

Back of this the Stutz factory parts records show that Stutz owners are paying one-third the average yearly cost for like cars on parts replacements.

Back of this stand the actual records of Stutz cars in the hands of owners—wonderful records of Stutz cars even after 275,000 miles of service—as shown in our significant booklet —"What Stutz Owners Wired." Where are the cars of other makes that stood in beauty beside these Stutz cars of 1918 and 1919—the cars of yester-year?

Back of this stands our offer to give you TWO Stutz demonstrations. One in a beautiful, new Stutz Six, Series 694 or 695, to show the wonderful ease of riding and driving, the beautiful appearance, the appointments and conveniences, and many other features. The other in a Stutz car with 50,000 miles of service behind it, to show you the unequalled stamina and ability—the unquestioned evidence of today's performance and value of the Stutz car of yester-year.

Before you buy any automobile, learn this story of the greatest value your automobile dollar can buy—not through what we claim in our advertising, but by the actual, plain facts awaiting you here and now!

BY WHITCOMB WILLIAMS.

DETROIT, Mich., April 18.—[Special.]—Announcements from dealers throughout the country are to the effect that the annual seasonal sales impulse has started with a bang. Buyers are evincing greater interest, which means that sales are increasing rapidly. Some of the manufacturers are behind in orders and are putting on night forces in an effort to keep abreast of the demand for their goods.

From automobile executives generally come the reports that the spring season of 1925 undoubtedly finds the automotive industry in the most healthy condition it has ever enjoyed. Competition has made the road pretty rough for some of the small producers, but what is their loss is some of the stronger concerns' gain. Never before have prices and costs been so low, and the greatest car value per dollar that the industry has ever known is being offered to the public.

Manufacturers have made no effort during the first quarter of 1925 to produce faster than sales warranted, with the healthy result that the first warm days of spring found dealers far from overloaded with stocks of new cars.

That a new record for a single month will be hung up for April now seems certain. Increased schedules are being maintained, and factory reports indicate that further increases may be expected before the end of the month. Schedules are well above those of March, which showed a representative total.

An unlooked for demand is reported from the west, where the trade is showing material improvement.

Truck companies are also experiencing a successful period. M. L. Pulcher, president of the Federal Motor Truck company, announces that his company more than doubled its sales in the first quarter this year as compared with the first quarter of 1924.

With the stepping up of car production, tire concerns report a corresponding increase, and the increased demand for balloon tires shows their steadily growing popularity with motorists.

At a conference in Washington this week attended by many leading manufacturers in the automobile industry Secretary Mellon was told that an automatic reduction of 5 per cent of the wholesale prices of all new passenger cars will follow immediately when congress repeals the present discriminatory war excise motor levies.

Pointing to the fact that all passenger cars are sold on a basis of nationally advertised prices, plus the war tax, the motor executives said that in asking for a reduction they did so because of their belief that the motor vehicle should be made as cheap an instrument of transportation as it is possible to sell and still maintain the quality which has made the American car a standard product the world over.

Should congress repeal the levies at the next session, an average price reduction amounting to $31 a car and running much higher on the medium and higher priced models would take immediate effect.

The conference, according to the automobile executives, reflected the carefully canvassed judgment of the motor manufacturers of the United States, who have consistently opposed retention of the motor levies as dual and unfair taxation.

The automobile companies represented at the conference were Cadillac, Reo, White, Autocar, Dodge, Federal Truck, Alfred Reeves, general manager, and Pyke Johnson, Washington representative of the chamber of commerce.

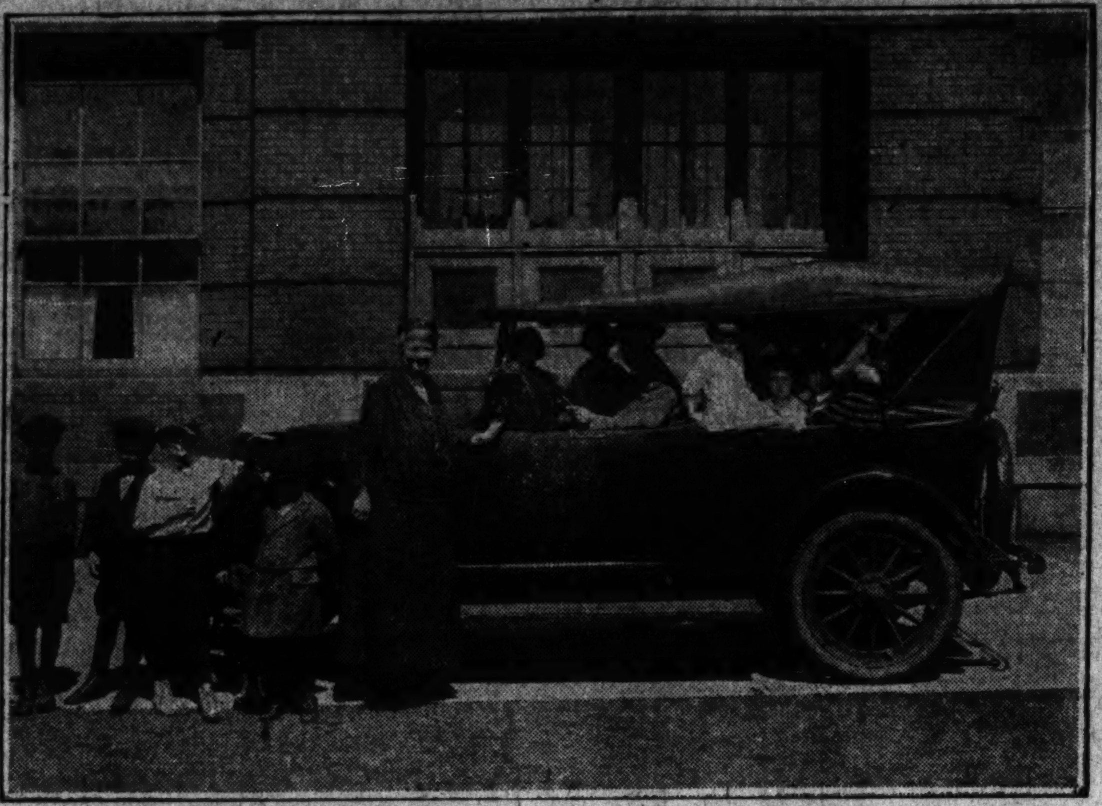
First recognition of the position of the industry was granted by the last congress at the last session, when the tax on tires, parts, and accessories, stamped by manufacturers and users as a "tax on misfortune," was cut in half, and the lower priced motor truck was entirely exempted. Congressional leaders at that time recognized the tax as unfair, but said that revenue needs would not permit of further reduction. Now that further reductions appear probable the manufacturers told the secretary they hoped that the future needs of the owners of approximately 18,000,000 cars operating in the United States would be given consideration.

In voicing their opposition to a continuation of the excise taxes the motor group called the secretary's attention to the fact that rural communities own one-third of the vehicles and the farmers' representatives were among the many who asked for a reduction of these levies at the last session.

Special taxes now paid by motorists amount to more than $500,000,000 annually.

SPRING'S BEST MOTOR CARGO



Officials of the Chicago Motor club are coöperating with the Girls' Week movement in Chicago—April 18-26—by organizing a great spring tour of the boulevards for little girls on Saturday, April 25. Chicago car owners are asked to supply cars and drivers for the tour and to notify Frank E. Jack of the Motor club, who will arrange the joy ride. He is shown here with Miss Genevieve Melody, principal of the Park Manor school, and a typical girl cargo. [Photo from Howe & Arthur.]

DANGEROUS HOUR.

Great care should be exercised when driving in dusk or twilight because that is the tricky period when there is neither enough daylight nor enough artificial light to make objects distinguishable at ordinary distances. It helps to light the lights even before their glow is actually needed.

Unsafe Car Is Scored as Cause of Traffic Deaths

"WHEN the average motorist pays more attention to the operating condition of his car and less to how fast he can go in it there will be fewer traffic accidents to mar the pleasure of motoring," George Earl-Wallis of Chicago told the closing session of the traffic instruction course of the Syracuse Safety council.

"Analysis of one day's accidents in any of our cities will show numerous mishaps which could have been prevented had the drivers involved been driving safe cars. The unsafe car should be barred from the streets and highways just as we are now seeking to bar the unfit driver. There is little choice between the two for both are the frequent cause of fatal accidents.

"The man who drives on a crowded street with worthless brakes or who slides and skids along without chains is just as open to criticism as the person who drives while intoxicated.

"We used to consider automobile accessories in the luxury class, but safe driving in present day traffic is determined by such things as proper head lights, shock absorbing bumpers, rear view mirrors, windshield wipers, speedometers, stoplights and the like. When we accuse the driver of carelessness in causing an accident it is often, not the lack of safe driving, but the failure of the car to function properly in an emergency."

THE BALANCE.

A fool is born every minute, but auto accidents even things up.—Nashville Banner.

Supercharger Seen as Prime Factor in High Speed Motor

MORE power can be obtained from an automobile or airplane engine by forcing larger charges of gas into the cylinders, and superchargers have been developed to accomplish this on racing cars and planes.

Speaking of the experimental work done on superchargers for aviation engines before a meeting of the Dayton, O., section of the Society of Automotive Engineers, E. T. Jones, chief of the power plant section of the engineering division of the army air service, said that the gear driven type of supercharger will be useful for flying at 10,000 to 15,000 feet, but that the exhaust driven or turbine type will be most effective for extremely high altitudes.

Superchargers will be used more and more on racing automobiles, he believed, because the requirement is for maximum power output at high speed from a limited piston displacement. They cannot be used, however, to increase the torque or power output throughout the entire speed range on passenger and commercial cars, because the compression pressure on the gas mixture causes detonation of the charges unless the compression ratio of the engine is reduced, and such a reduction affects the fuel economy.

An increase of 5 per cent in power output by use of the supercharger results in an increase of 10 per cent in fuel consumption, he said, but there is a possibility of designing a supercharger that will not cause a rise of compression pressure except at the higher engine speeds.

FARM AND GARDEN

Lawn and Garden Must Be Planned Before Planting

It's Best to Study Property from the Landscaper's Point of View.

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

UNPLANNED planting around new suburban homes too often results in an overdose of flowers on the front lawn, making the home look like a rustic rose tangled Hollywood cottage dolled up for a movie scene. Where planting is neglected, as it is around many thousands of homes that pop up like mushrooms every year in this country, the house sticks above the ground with the bare, lonesome look of a lone shanty on a Kansas prairie.

A few dollars spent for trees, shrubs, and flowers would add a third to the appearance and value of the average new home, if a few principles in landscape designing were followed. There is little chance for successful planting if the house is near the sidewalk and jammed up against other houses like tents in an army camp. Houses built alike and packed along the street like young herrings in a sardine can are places to live in, but from a landscape architect's point of view they can never be made into real homes.

Plan It First.

Around the average sized house built on a lot with a fifty foot frontage and 150 foot depth there is plenty of room for an attractive layout. Before planting a single bush or flower plan the whole lawn. Divide it into the three main areas—public, private, and service.

From a landscaper's point of view, the front lawn must be treated as a public area, the same as the parkway. The owner must see his front lawn as others see it, if he has to walk all the way across the street to get the proper perspective. Don't stick a hydrangea here and bridal wreath there; plant to add to the attractiveness of the house, not to get a few extremely conspicuous bushes that will be tawdry decoration.

Set a few trees on the parkway in front of the house back away from the sidewalk that leads out from the front door. Then work back toward the house. Give the front of the lawn a narrow border of privet ibota hedge, extending it back toward the house along the sides of the lawn from the corners on each side. In pruning, the hedge may be trimmed square at the corners and at the ends butting up against the walk. Another plan is to set Japanese barberry in the corners and at the end of the walk.

Good sized shrubs may be set around the front corners of the house and back to the screen of hedge or shrubbery that separates the public area or front part of the lawn from the private area or back yard. Japanese barberry or privet hedge set between the front lawn and the service area, which includes the driveway leading back to the garage, makes a good screening.

It is a good plan to set shubbery all around the foundation and to mark off the boundaries of the private area.

The two trees on the parkway in front and two or three trees in the back yard frame the house and provide sufficient shade. All of the public area plantings, including trees and shrubbery, should be in harmony with the landscaping on neighboring lawns. Use shrubbery on the front lawn that will have decorative value the whole year through, either by a showing of blossoms and foliage or berries and bright colored bark.

Getting Proper Outline.

Study each bush and become familiar with its size when it is full grown. By knowing the size of the shrubs they may be set in their proper places to make an attractive outline around the house. Set shrubs and trees so that the skyline will harmonize with the house. Trees on the parkway should be at least thirty feet apart, conforming to the planting distance between other trees along the street. There is no ordinance in Chicago compelling uniform planting of trees along the parkways, but neighbors on the same street are often able to coöperate.

On a lot 150 feet long there is usually plenty of room for a small home vegetable and flower garden on the private area. The back lawn should be treated as an outdoor living room. The natural garden is more popular than the formal plan, especially if the owner has time to work in his garden. It is best to plant a solid border of shrubs around the private area; flowering shrubs are preferred. Fences and walls are also used.

The back yard is the place to have flowers, both annuals and perennials, instead of the front lawn. They may be grown in the border just in front of the shrubs, which furnish an ideal dark colored background for the bright blossoms of annuals.

If conditions are not favorable for the growing of flowers and vegetables, formal plans are perhaps more desirable in the back yard; but the naturalistic layout in the private area is much more interesting.

Grow different varieties of flowers so there will be blooms from early summer until late in the fall. Here is the way one Chicago gardener makes an effective bank of flowers along the back of his private area: Next to the fence he sets a row of dahlia bulbs, in front of that a solid row of yellow and a solid row of red gladioli, and then two rows of zinnias, all colors, and a row of pansies with their variety of colors. In front he plants an edging of alyssum.

Along one side of his garage he has a row of hollyhocks and a row of marigolds in front. On the other side of the garage, under the window over his workbench, he has a long window box of petunias.

STERILIZING SOIL

USING LIVE STEAM TO KILL PARASITES IN HOTBEDS.—Vegetable gardening students at Purdue university, Lafayette, Ind., are shown here studying a new method of sterilizing plant bed soils, developed by H. D. Brown of the Hoosier station. Live steam—note steam escaping around sash—forced through two 90 foot lines of four inch drain tiles furnish heat for the sterilization. The soil is heated to 160 degrees for two hours to kill plant parasites that live in the soil. This methods controls garden pests that spread from plant beds.

Gardening Is Big Part of Cleanup Campaign

Gardening has become an established part of Chicago's cleanup week campaign, which begins tomorrow. Squads with brooms, brushes and hoes are already to start early in the morning to clean up, paint up, and plant up the city from one end to the other.

It was predicted a few years ago that the enthusiasm over home gardening which developed during the war would soon end and the city's back yards and vacant lots would again become a tangled mass of weeds, rusty wire and papers. The planting feature of cleanup week has aided greatly in preventing the prediction from coming true. Thousands of back yards and vacant lots have been transformed into flower and vegetable gardens each year and are kept clean by gardeners of all kinds, from the novice to the professional.

Figures of last year's campaign show that 30,000 high school students, working under the joint auspices of the Chicago Association of Commerce and the Chicago board of education, coöperating with clubs and business organizations, planted nearly 50,000 vegetable and flower gardens, or 20,000 more than the year before. All of this interest was stimulated through the cleanup campaign, and does not include the gardens that are run year after year by veteran growers and grownup amateurs.

If high school students continue their interest in back yard and vacant lot gardening plots, there will be many thousands added to the city's list of gardeners each year, and eventually the idea of gardening will become so popular that it will be difficult to find ground to meet the demand of vegetable and flower growers.

DAIRYMEN'S JOTTINGS

Dr. W. B. Nevens of the state college of agriculture tells a story of an Illinois dairyman who was paid at the rate of $8 an hour for the extra time he spent weighing the feed of his cows. Most farmers would consider $8 an hour a mighty big wage. This farmer, according to the story, spent about a half hour a day at the scales, and saved around $4 worth of feed daily. He has a herd of forty cows and about thirty head of young stock. The grain mixture was cut from 5,100 pounds a week to 3,600 pounds a week without shrinking the milk production of the cows.

"There is a tendency in many herds toward underfeeding, rather than overfeeding, but the facts in this case, together with the result of scientific investigation, show that overfeeding may be fully as wasteful as underfeeding," Dr. Nevens says.

Whiting and Fred, investigators at the Wisconsin station, have boiled down all the information a farmer needs to know about inoculation of legumes in circular No. 183, which they call "Inoculated Legumes Are Nitrogen Fixing Factors." They cover the subjects of cross-inoculation of legumes; the importance of sowing inoculated seed; cultural methods of inoculation and how to get cultures, as well as various other phases of the subject.

Use Live Steam to Sterilize Seed Bed Soil

LIVE steam has been found to be one of the most effective agents in sterilizing soil to destroy diseases that are packed on plants from hot beds where the seedlings are started to the field where the crop is grown. Entomologists and gardeners have known for years that steam would kill such garden and flower pests as nematodes, Fusarium wilt, and many of the so-called damping off diseases living in the soil from year to year, but no engineer has ever been able to produce steam cheap enough that it could be used in a wholesale way to treat soil in the open field.

A lot of work has been done on figuring out ways to destroy the disease producing organisms in seed beds where transplanting seedlings are produced. Healthy plants may be produced in sterilized soil in seed beds where only a small amount of soil has to be steamed, and then if the soil in the field is free from the disease the parasites are effectively controlled.

Greenhouse managers who do not sterilize their soils in some way are taking a chance of infesting plants with the parasites that live in the soil. A few unhealthy plants soon spread the disease over large areas when they are set in the permanent growing place in the fields. The control of these soil diseases through the sterilization of the seed bed soil is highly important.

Must Go Below Roots.

Soil experts at Purdue university say that since the pests frequently are found quite deep in the soil it is necessary to sterilize to a depth of at least two feet, in order to go below the roots of young seedlings. To prevent recontamination of sterilized areas, it is necessary to sterilize each bed as a unit, and, if possible, all beds as nearly the same time as is feasible.

Greenhouse heating plants can be easily connected up with the sterilizing equipment of the seed beds. At the Hoosier agricultural college the seed bed soil is sterilized by passing live steam through four inch drain tiles buried from ten to twelve inches under the surface of the soil. The steam is forced through the soil until the temperature throughout the bed is raised to at least 160 degrees Fahrenheit for two hours.

In tests it was found that by placing two lengths of tile, eighteen inches from each side, in seed beds six feet wide, it is possible to raise the temperature to 210 degrees Fahrenheit in about six hours' time, provided plenty of steam is available.

Cover with Sashes.

To prevent excessive escaping of steam, to keep the surface of the soil from cooling, and to sterilize the structural parts of the hotbed, the bed is kept covered with sashes that fit tightly.

Pots, tools, and other equipment used in handling the plants may carry the parasites and must be sterilized, too. This may be done easily by placing them inside the hotbed during the entire process of sterilization.

Sterilization also kills weed seed. Of course, the sterilizing of the soil is done before any vegetable or flower seeds are planted in the beds.

This method of sterilizing soil has proved satisfactory in controlling greenhouse soil pests and weeds in tomato plant beds.

GARDEN NOTES

Here are some of the flowers that form the chief materials for gardeners who have an all season succession of blossoms in their gardens: Daffodils, tulips, iris, peonies, delphiniums, climbing roses, hollihocks, phlox, dahlias, perennial asters, and chrysanthemums.

If you plant annual flowers and include Shirley poppy, it will be among the earliest, if not the earliest, to bloom.

Gardeners who rent their plots want fertilizers that will give quick returns. They should use acid phosphate, which supplies phosphorus to the plants. It is made by treating raw rock phosphate with sulphuric acid. The phosphorus in acid phosphate is more readily available than it is in raw rock phosphate, and the renter gets his money back immediately in terms of vegetables without having to wait several seasons. Sprinkling wood ashes over the garden will enrich it, too.

Stringless refugee wax or profusion wax is an excellent wax podded bean to include in this season's plantings. Henderson's bush lima is a good lima bean to plant.

Allied Florists to Hold Exhibit Here

The Allied Florists' association announces that its members are making elaborate plans to give a unique flower show at McVicker's theater during the week of April 20. The good qualities of flowers will be emphasized for the first time, the announcement says, through a stage show.

Choose seeds as you choose ingredients for a fine cake

HER friends said she was too fussy when she made a cake. But she made a cake with the same care she made a garden. She was exceedingly particular about what she put into it. And the results always made her friends envious. She had the most marvelous cake—the most beautiful garden.

If you want a beautiful, paying garden you must be particular about the seeds you plant. For seeds, like butter and eggs, must be above suspicion.

Good seeds are never an accident. They are the product only of long and careful development. They are selected seeds, clean and tested for vitality. Such are Ferry's Seeds.

But the most important thing about Ferry's Seeds is that they are purebred. Their history shows that they are direct descendants from selected parent plants. We watch them while they are growing. We weed out undesirables—choosing the finest for harvest. And then we test the seeds at our experimental garden to see that they will be reproducing true to type.

Year in and year out, we maintain this vigilance.

Think of it as you plan your garden. It will give you the same faith in Ferry's purebred Seeds to do their part, that you have in the sun, rain and soil. You can buy Ferry's "at the store around the corner" from the familiar Ferry Box.

PLAN NINE STORY FLAT BUILDING ON SHORE DRIVE

18 Story Hotel to Be Built Next Door Later On.

BY AL CHASE.

Work is to start within two weeks on another big flat building across from the South Shore Country club, on the South Shore drive. It'll be called the Country Club apartments and according to the architects, Hall, Lawrence, Rippel & Ratcliffe, will represent an investment in land and building of $1,500,000.

Edward I. Bloom and Joseph Larson have had plans drawn for a nine story structure with a tower to reach a couple of stories or so higher. In this tower there'll be a 30x50 ballroom, lounge, etc.

Golf Course for Tenants.

In the main building will be 192 kitchenette apartments of one, two and three rooms each. There'll be card rooms and parlors for the tenants. Twelve rooms on the first floor will be for tenants' maids.

The 160x150 lot is at 6930-42 South Shore drive and the building will be 160 x140. Adjoining the Country Club apartments site on the south and extending to 70th street, is a 150x150 bit of vacant which is owned by Mr. Bloom and Mr. Larson. They intend to install a nine hole miniature golf course for the exclusive use of the tenants of their new apartment building.

Plan 18 Story Hotel.

Later on this property is to be improved with an eighteen story hotel to be operated independently of the Country Club apartment building. No definite date regarding its erection has yet been set.

The architects' plans for the new Country Club apartment building call for a lobby 30x30, with a large wood burning fireplace. The exterior will be of light buff brick with polychrome terra cotta trim. It will be of concrete, fireproof construction. Completion date has been placed at Jan. 1, 1926.

The site of the apartments and the vacant adjoining on the south, extending to 70th street, was announced two years ago as the location for a $4,000,000 hotel to be known as the Southgate. It was to contain 2,400 rooms and was to be erected by a syndicate. For some reason the project never got beyond the announcement stage.

Plan $400,000 Addition to Quigley Seminary

A $400,000 building permit has been taken out by the Catholic bishop of Chicago and work has started on a three story addition to the Quigley Preparatory seminary on Rush street, between Pearson and Chestnut. The new section will close up the present "U" shaped open court and connect the two wings. It will extend to the sidewalk line.

Architect Joe McCarthy's plans call for a kitchen, locker rooms, etc. in the basement of the new part, with a tunnel under the court connecting the locker rooms with the swimming pool in the old section.

There'll be twelve class rooms, four in each of the three floors. The present French gothic type of architecture will be carried out in the new section. Completion date is set for next September.

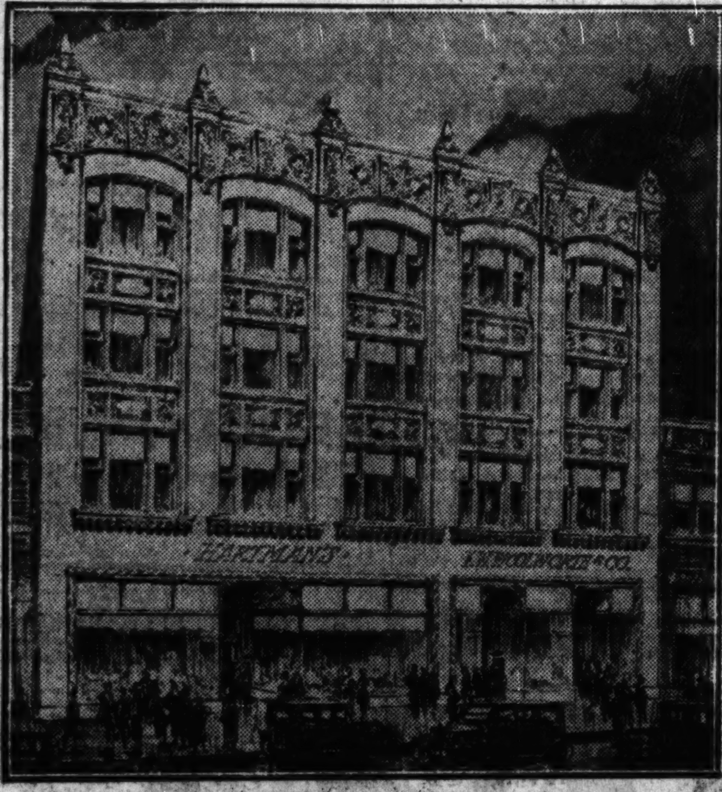
On Lincoln Avenue



Work is to start at once on the above $200,000 four story building at 3043 Lincoln avenue, from plans by Alfred S. Alschuler. The owner, Philip Lesman of Philip Lesman & Sons, has leased the south twenty-nine feet to Woolworth for fifteen years at a term rental of $107,500. The balance of the seventy-five feet frontage on the first floor and the entire 75x125 on each of the three upper floors has been leased to Hartman's for twenty-five years at a term rental of approximately $475,000. Completion date is set for Oct. 1.

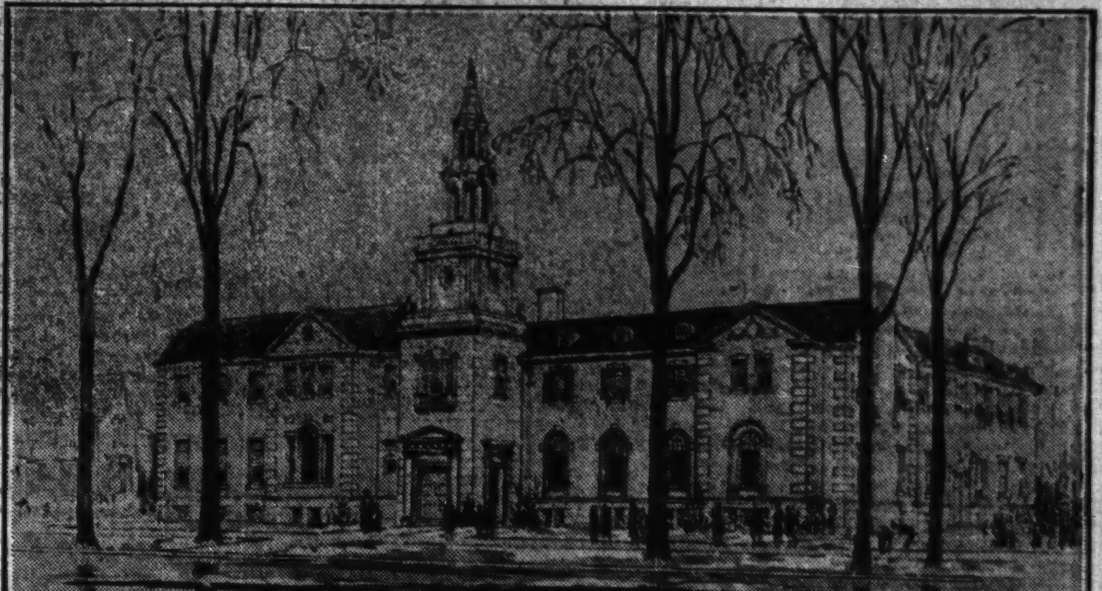
Evanston's New Community Center



This is the community center annex to the First Congregational church of Evanston, to be erected at 1425 Hinman avenue, in the block south of the church. It will house all the social, educational, and athletic activities of the church. The church, a picture and description of which were given by Dr. Norton in last Thursday's Tribune, and the above building together will cost a total of $500,000, according to the architects, Tallmadge & Watson.

Like the new church, the community center will be in the New England colonial type of architecture, an attractive style which Chicago architects, with the exception of St. Paul's Universalist church on the Midway, a chapel at Mundelein, Ill., and perhaps one or two others, have ignored.

LINCOLN STATUE AT LAST TO BE SHOWN PUBLIC

Work to Start Soon on Grant Park Setting.

A contract was closed yesterday with the R. C. Wieboldt company for the erection of the long contemplated Lincoln monument in Grant park from plans prepared by McKim, Mead & White, New York architects.

The South Park commissioners have approved the location, which is to be in Grant park, 225 feet east of the Illinois Central tracks and north of Van Buren street extended.

The setting for the monument will be a semicircular seat 153 feet in diameter, in the center of which will be located a monolithic pedestal of pink granite supporting the bronze statue. The pedestal will be on a raised platform with white granite steps leading to it.

Work to Start Next Month.

At the ends will be two columns of white marble fifty feet high, surmounted by a tripod carved from solid marble. Work will be started at the site early in May, and will be completed before the end of the year.

This is a project which has taken many years for realization. The late John Crerar, who died in 1889, under the terms of his will created and endowed a trust for the purpose of erecting a statue of Abraham Lincoln in Chicago.

Kept from Public View.

In October, 1897, the trustees commissioned the late Augustus St. Gaudens to "design, model and erect a colossal statue of Abraham Lincoln." St. Gaudens chose Stanford White to design the setting of the monument. The statue was completed by St. Gaudens shortly before his death and was his last great work.

Although completed, this great statue has been allowed to be kept in storage for three decades. For some unexplainable reason no one thought it advisable to let the public see this St. Gaudens masterpiece even with a temporary setting, so it has rested peacefully in a storage shed in one of the south parks.

SUBDIVISION FIRM BUILDS PARKWAY ACROSS ITS LAND

To promote the immediate building of good homes throughout the entire tract at 147th street station of the I. C., owned by John R. Robertson & Co., every fifth lot has been made a preferred building site. The realty firm guarantees purchasers that there'll be a home built on each of these preferred lots. Part is zoned for single family residences, part for flats, and 147th street for business.

The property lies along both banks of the Little Calumet and the owners are laying out more than a mile of boulevard through their land. This drive will be part of an interstate parkway linking Miller, Ind., with the city limits at 130th and Ashland, a distance of twenty miles. Other realty dealers are joining with Robertson & Co. in promoting this boulevard through their properties. The Robertson subdivision is called "Robertson's Riverside" and has half a mile of frontage on the Little Calumet river.

A complete artesian water system piped to every lot has been put in, and sewer, sidewalks, gas, and electricity are being installed. A good sized park has been laid out and a boat landing will be built.

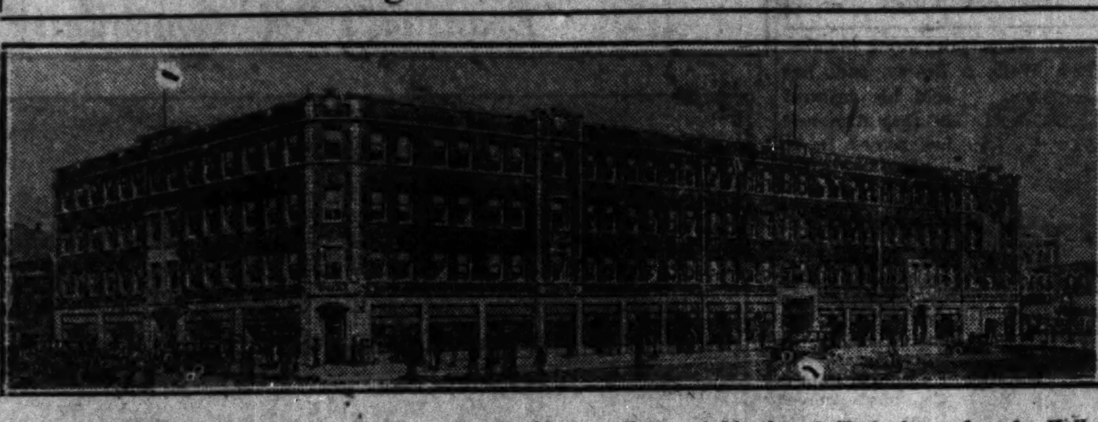
Real Estate Association Holds Its First Banquet

Several hundred attended the first annual banquet of the Chicago Real Estate association at the Morrison hotel. James Q. Dunn, president, presided. Mayor Dever was unable to be present and Ald. Guy Guernsey spoke for him. John A. Carroll and Herbert E. Becker also spoke. Dancing followed the addresses.

Walgreen to Open Store at Lawrence and Western

The Walgreen company has leased the two stores at the southwest corner of Lawrence and Western avenues, 40x70, for ten years at a term rental reported to be $90,000. The two stores will be remodeled and occupied by the drug company about the middle of May. Nick Brahos is lessor. Lovett & Warren were brokers.

Building at Clark-Foster-Ashland



Edward Hagelin is erecting the above Hagelin block at Foster, Ashland, and Clark, from plans by Hall, Lawrence, Rippel & Ratcliffe, with Samuel Klein consulting structural engineer. It'll have sixteen shops, sixteen bowling alleys, a billiard hall, offices, a "builders' exchange" for Swedish contractors, and forty-three flats. Completion date is set at Oct. 1.

New Home of Acacia Country Club

Architect John Hulla designed the above building for the Acacia Country club and work started April 14. It will cost approximately $50,000 and will be of fireproof construction. The exterior will be of gray stucco, with red roof. It'll have a 30x35 dining room, with a 16x32 screened porch for warm weather dining; a men's grill, a 30x50 lounge, with large fireplace, a women's and men's locker rooms, etc.

The club has 120 acres about two miles south of Western Springs and is bounded on the north by Plainfield road, on the west by Wolf road, and on the south by Joliet road. An eighteen hole course has been in use for some time. W. L. Bourland of La Grange is president. Mr. Hulla says the above building will be completed by July 1. Most of the members of the Acacia are Masons living on the west side and in western suburbs.

Building Items

Fred A. Anderson & Sons have bought from John C. Cannon, former collector of internal revenue, and Dr. George H. Candler the two residences at 4521-27 North Paulina, 100x165, for a reported $40,000, and will erect a $230,000 thirty-six flat building, with three and four rooms each. Carl W. Westerlind will be architect. It'll be completed about Sept. 15. Skidmore & Forslund and E. N. Weart & Co. were brokers in the site purchase.

Fred A. Anderson has recently taken his two sons, Vincent N. and Warren F., into business with him, and his firm is now known as Fred A. Anderson & Sons.

A syndicate, composed of Frank P. McGinn, Daniel Benninghoven, Stanley H. Knight, and Theodore F. Kilburg, has started work on a thirty flat building at 6815-17 Lakewood avenue from plans by Anthony H. Quitsow. The land and building will represent an investment of $225,000, according to Mr. McGinn. The three, four, and five room apartments will be ready Oct. 1.

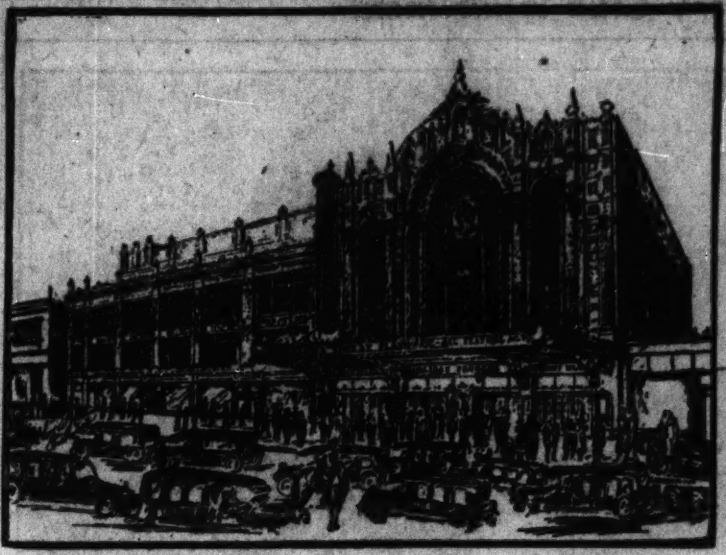
Cinema for Sheridan Road, Near Devon



On Dec. 2, 1923, we printed a picture of the proposed playhouse to be erected by Louis L. and Meyer S. Marks on the east side of Sheridan road, 250 feet north of Devon. Since then the owners have changed architects and Alex L. Levy and William J. Klein have designed the above structure. The original idea of having the east walls of the playhouse, overlooking the campus of Loyola university, of the same material as the Sheridan road elevation, is to be carried out by the owners, a praiseworthy and generous bit of courtesy to neighbors which might well be followed by some of the other film magnates who think only of the front elevation and let other walls go hang so far as ornamentation is concerned.

The new Marks Bros.' cinema will have the usual features of the modern big cinema, such as gorgeous lobbies, domes, and stairways, elevated platform for orchestra, cooling system, etc., etc. The terra cotta exterior will be flood lighted in colors, made familiar in the McJunkin building at Wilson and Broadway, but for some reason ignored by Chicago film theater owners, at least so far as we know.

The Marks Bros. are modest about the seating capacity, saying they don't care to boast, but we understand it'll be larger than the loop's biggest movie. The theater will front 200 feet on Sheridan road and will be 208 feet deep at the south end and 150 at the north. The playhouse has not yet been named.

John R. Thompson Leases Jackson Blvd. Building

Mr. Thompson will remodel the present five story building and occupy the first floor with a restaurant. The lease calls for a new building within twenty years. J. W. Dooley & Co. were brokers.

HEAVY SELLING BREAKS PRICE OF MAY WHEAT

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Heavy selling of May wheat by several houses with eastern connections, aggressive on that side on Wednesday, was largely responsible for a sharp break shortly before the close, the price dropping 5c under the early high. The finish was well toward the bottom with a net loss of 4¼c. Deferred futures were off 3@3½c. Corn showed independent strength and closed ⅝c higher to ¼c lower. Oats were ⅛c to ¼c lower, and rye 1⅝@2c lower.

Liquidation was on in the May delivery of all grains last week, and had considerable influence on the deferred deliveries. At the last wheat was 4⅛@14⅞c lower, corn off 3¼@4⅞c, oats ⅝@1¼c, and rye 5⅝@11⅛c as compared with the previous week. Provisions developed an easier undertone and lard lost 52½@60c, ribs 15@40c, and bellies 15@70c for the week.

Export Demand Remains Slow.

The wheat market was decidedly unsettled, and subject to sharp bulges and breaks throughout the day. Technical position had been weakened by the upturn on Friday and when the heavy selling started the support was limited, the best buying being by shorts and on resting orders. Winnipeg May showed more strength than Chicago and closed 6⅝c over our market. Buenos Aires was ¼c higher at the last with Liverpool 2⅝@3⅛d higher.

Cables from abroad suggested that while many of the northern European countries would come into the market for supplies shortly, there was a bad situation developing in Italy. No sales were reported at the seaboard. No. 2 hard winter f. o. b. Montreal sold at 12c over Chicago May, presumably representing grain that has been held there all winter.

Messages from the southwest claimed wheat in Oklahoma and Kansas showed improvement as the result of recent rains, but there is a lack of subsoil moisture and more rain would be beneficial. The northwest received good rains over night. Spring wheat seeding is under way in Saskatchewan.

Corn Gets Good Support.

Corn market is showing independent strength and acted decidedly tight at times when commission house buying appeared. Some stop loss orders were uncovered on the way up, the reaction toward the last being in sympathy with wheat. Shipping sales were 125,000 bu, with the spot basis little changed. Oats reflected the action of wheat. Domestic demand was good with shipping sales of 200,000 bu.

Exporters After Rye.

Exporters were after cash rye in the northwest and it was understood that 400,000 bu sold from Duluth to Montreal, with reports that bids equal to 1½c over Chicago May had been made, or 1c better than on Friday. Futures reacted quickly toward the last in sympathy with wheat.

Scattered liquidation was on in provisions and while shorts were good buyers the close was at net losses of 15c on lard, 12½@22½c on ribs, while bellies were unchanged to 45c lower. Packing of hogs at Chicago for the season to date aggregates 756,000, against 1,149,000 last year. Prices follow:

CASH·GRAIN N·E·W'S

Little wheat, oats and barley were reported sold for export at the seaboard Saturday with probably 200,000 bu rye.

Chicago handlers sold 18,000 bu wheat, 120,000 bu corn, 200,000 bu oats and 8,000 bu barley to the domestic trade, with 100,000 bu corn and 75,000 bu rye sold to go to store.

Offerings of cash wheat at leading markets remain small. No sales of consequence were reported here. St. Louis prices generally were unchanged while Kansas City was 1c higher to 3c lower and Omaha unchanged to 1c higher.

Demand for cash corn was fairly good with the basis unchanged here. Illinois corn is of somewhat heavier weight than the Iowa and generally commands a premium over grain from the latter state. No. 3 grades were 2½c under to 4c over May. No. 4 grades 3@5c under and No. 5 grades 5@7c under. Outside markets were ½@4c higher, with Milwaukee leading.

No. 3 white oats on track declined ½c as compared with May and sold at ½@2c over the May, while No. 2 white was 5c over.

Official receipts of grain at Chicago Saturday: Wheat, 14 cars; corn, 59 cars; oats, 50 cars; rye, 3 cars; barley, 7 cars.

COTTON MARKETS

Cotton in Chicago closed 2 to 13 points higher with new crop futures easy. Other markets were unsettled. New Orleans was 4 to 17 points higher on the near deliveries and 1 point lower on the distant. New York was mostly 2 to 8 points higher. A bull factor was the absence of rain in Texas with prospects of dry weather over Sunday. Spreading between May and July was a feature of the trading, the volume being liberal for Saturday, with a general evening up.

Trade reports were rather better on the whole and reflected a better situation in the dry goods market. Exports for the season to date aggregate 7,294,605 bales, against 4,876,200 bales last year. Prices in all markets follow:

WORLD'S·GRAIN MARKET·NEWS

Dr. J. W. T. Duvel, in charge of the grain futures administration, has asked all clearing house members of the Chicago Board of Trade for a full statement showing purchases and sales of wheat futures, daily by futures, for all accounts for which purchases or sales were made on any one day of 100,000 bushels or more. Statements are to cover trades from Jan. 2 to April 18. The "net long" or the "net short" position of each account, either at the close of the market on Dec. 1, 1924, or at the close of the market on April 18, 1925, is asked for. Quantities only are desired. These statements are desired in the investigation by the grain futures administration of the department of agriculture on orders from Secretary Jardine for investigation of the wheat market. The department of justice is working in connection with the agricultural department and a thorough investigation of wheat fluctuations is being made.

Grain traders say that they are not looking for any permanency in values until the elevator interests get through turning over their hedges from May to July. Bulges are not expected to hold. After the May is out of the way the trade is inclined to look for a better market, with more stability to values.

A Board of Trade membership sold Saturday at $6,000 net to the buyer.

There was the same character of selling of May wheat late yesterday that featured the big break a few days ago. It was led by Pynchon and Bennett. They also sold July, but the May received most pressure and was the weakest. There was heavy selling of July early by Stein-Alstrin. Trade sentiment is mixed with a disposition to sell on all bulges.

Traders who watch the operations in corn said that there were a number of local operators who were on the bull side and bid the market up frequently, while whenever the selling ceased there was a decline.

The Millers' National federation, which has been in session in Chicago for several days, is said to have enacted more constructive work that will benefit the flour milling trade than at any meeting in recent years. It is proposed to limit flour sales to sixty days' delivery and a uniform style of contract was adopted.

"The Argentine corn crop is officially estimated at 187,307,000 bu, or only 68 per cent of last year's crop," says S. P. Arnot of Clement, Curtis & Co. "Assuming home requirements to be the same as last year, this would leave for export only slightly above 50 per cent as much as a year ago. Our corn crop was 617,000,000 bu short of last year, with 282,000,000 bu of this shortage in the surplus states. Hogs are $12.75, against $7.50 a year ago. In view of these facts it would seem illogical to take a bearish position on the corn market simply because the price is higher than it was this time last year."

F. S. Lewis & Co. open their new office in the Austin building, opposite the Board of Trade on Jackson boulevard, on Monday.

E. E. Tanner has been admitted to partnership in the firm of Vance & Co. Dr. E. B. Patzig is now in charge of the grain and cotton departments of Charles Sincere Co.

RAILROAD NOTES

New schedules which the Union Pacific has proposed making increases in the rates on grain from Kansas points to St. Joseph, Mo., were suspended by the interstate commerce commission to await an investigation. The average increase in the rates which the railroad sought to put into effect April 20 amounted to 1 cent per hundred pounds on wheat and from half a cent to 1½ cents on corn.

The Baltimore & Ohio has arranged with the Pennsylvania for the use of the latter's passenger terminal in New York City for another year, ending Sept. 1, 1926. The five year agreement under which the Baltimore & Ohio has been using the terminal expires next Sept. 1.

Freight cars in need of repairs on April 1 totaled 156,417, or 8.1 per cent of the number on the lines, a decrease of 2,502 since March 15. Railroad equipment orders for the week totaled twenty locomotives, 210 freight and ten milk cars. The Southern Pacific has ordered seventy-two coaches from the Pullman company and 210 baggage cars distributed among American Car and Foundry, Standard Steel Car and Bethlehem Steel for delivery beginning in September.

There were 5,892 cars handled by the Chicago Great Western railroad during the week ended April 11, compared with 5,815 cars handled during the corresponding week last year. The Seaboard Air Line during the first fifteen days of the present month handled 97,263 cars, compared with 82,580 cars handled during the corresponding period last year, an increase of 17.8 per cent.

Change Grades and Prices for Smackover Crude Oil

Shreveport, La., April 18.—Reclassification of the grades of Smackover, Ark., crude oil and reductions in some prices and increases in other grades were announced today by the Standard Oil company and the Louisiana Oil Refining corporation. The two companies have separate schedules. The Standard abolished the grade of 28 degrees and above.

The Standard's new schedule follows: 27 degrees and above, $1.30; 26 to 26.9, $1.25, raised 5c; 25 to 25.9, $1.20, raised 10c; 24 to 24.9, $1.10, a new grade; and below 24 as stated.

The Louisiana's new schedule follows: 28 and above, $1.45; 27 to 27.9, $1.30, cut 5c; 26 to 26.9, $1.25, unchanged; 25 to 25.9, $1.20, increased 10c; 24 to 24.9, $1.10, increased 10c; below 24, 40c, cut 20c. A comparison of these schedules reveals that the Louisiana is paying 15 cents more per barrel for light oil, 27 and above.

GERMANY WINS STRONGER PLACE WITH CHEMISTRY

BY SCRUTATOR.

Germany's dominant position in the chemical industries before the war, which resulted in so many technical advantages in the conflict, still is impressed on the mind of the world's peoples. Every now and then some good sensation monger tells of mysterious agencies of destruction being concocted by the mysterious chemists on the other side of the Rhine. In a measure the old terror was bosh, because most of the German technical triumphs were the result of patient pursuit of clews discovered elsewhere, and an industrialization of the discoveries made possible by a fostering government.

The German chemical trade today discloses that Germany both gained and lost by the war. Exports have shrunk, but so have imports. The world has learned to make many things that used to be made in Germany almost exclusively, but Germany during the conflict emancipated itself from former dependence on natural chemical supplies in other countries. Despite the loss of so much valuable mineral territory and the crippling of many heavy industries, from which by-products formerly were secured that supplied many chemical industries, it is probable that Germany is more self-sufficient in a chemical way than before the war, if not so dominant in some export specialties.

Germany has lost over half of its former export trade in dye stuffs as the result of the upbuilding of dye industries in the United States, Britain and France.

But Germany has almost ceased to import any Chilean nitrate, because the air fixation plants using the Haber-Bosch process, a French modification of which is now coming into use in this country, have saved Germany $40,000,000 a year, compared with the money paid for imported nitrates before the war.

The calcium carbide industry, mostly developed to meet war emergencies and fertilizer demand, has been turned to the production of acetic acid, synthetic alcohol and acetone. As a result Germany has almost quit buying acetate of lime from us—one of the by-products of scientifically made charcoal and distillation of waste wood in the lumbering industry.

Germany greatly has reduced its purchases of phosphate rock from the United States, substituting certain phosphatic by-products of the steel industry on an increasing scale, but the production of those has been hampered by the crippling of the German steel industry by allied annexations, occupations, etc.

Potash remains the German high card in the international chemical trade, despite the competition of the potash deposits annexed by France in Alsace-Lorraine. Trade Commissioner William T. Daugherty expresses the belief that the German potash industry will expand rapidly in the future. Certainly the American potash production, at present, gives no prospect of a cessation of imports by us. Geological survey reports only 43,719 tons produced in the United States in 1924. But as a partial offset to our dependence on Europe for potash, is to be noted an increasing dependence of Germany on American sulphur. This is the only chemical of consequence that Germany is importing in excess of pre-war figures.

Offerings of hogs met slow clearance on the week-end session at the lowest price level in about seven weeks. The day's top and average prices at $12.80 and $12.60, respectively, standing lowest since March 2. Top stands $1.80 below year's high day a month ago, with average off $1.70 in the same length of time. Fresh arrivals yesterday at 7,000 included 3,400 "directs." Market moved slowly at steady to 10c lower prices, compared with the low close previous day, medium and weighty hogs again reflecting the most decline. Sales of 240@300 lb averages in many instances revealed losses of 25@30c since early Friday. Prevailing quotations are unevenly 10c@50c lower than a week ago, packing and mixed grades showing the least decline. Yesterday's top and average prices were only 20c apart, within 5c of the narrowest "spread" since last summer.

Hog Receipts Declining.

With the exception of the two preceding weeks, last week's hogs receipts at 126,600 are smallest since the second week of last October, being 3,600 larger than previous week, 20,800 smaller than a year ago, and 16,200 below the five year average. Although the estimated weight of hogs last week stands heaviest since November at 235 lbs, it was within 1 lb of the lightest corresponding week since 1919, and 4 lbs under the five year average. Prices averaged $12.80 last week, lowest since the last week in February.

An abrupt let up in cattle receipts early last week boosted values fully 25@50c on active buying, but the market reacted in mid-week under stress of increasing supplies and practically all of the advance was erased. The week's top at $12.50 secured 1,045 lb yearlings, Tuesday, with 1,633 lb averages on the same day at $11.75, establishing a new high mark for the year for heavy. Better grades of cows and heifers held firm most of the week, eight head of 871 lb heifers reaching $11.65, a new top for the year. Calves slumped 25@50c. The week's average price of beef cattle at $10.40 was close to the highest of the year.

Lambs Sell Low.

Last week's declines of $1.25@1.50, coupled with the growing proportion of heavy and shorn stock, dropped the week's average cost of lambs to $13.40, a new low weekly average for the year, which stands $2.60 under the corresponding week in 1924. Aged sheep slumped 50@75c, the week's average cost reaching a new low for the year at $7.50. Native springers gained $1.00@2.00 under brisk competition, but weakened as demand subsided late in the week. Daily top wool lambs dropped from $15.50 Monday to $14.85 Friday, with shorn tumbling from $13.50 Monday to $12.15 Friday.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 17,000 cattle, 42,000 hogs, and 16,000 sheep, against 13,342 cattle, 42,861 hogs, and 21,158 sheep a week ago, and 18,036 cattle, 56,638 hogs, and 15,914 sheep the corresponding day a year ago. Next week's receipts are estimated at 55,000 cattle, 135,000 hogs, and 75,000 sheep, against 50,338 cattle, 169,257 hogs, and 67,763 sheep a year ago.

STOCK MARKET RISES SHARPLY; MOTORS IN LEAD

New York, April 18.—Constructive forces were at work in today's brief session of the stock market, the general list surging forward under the leadership of the motor shares, several of which attained new peak prices for the year. Another decline in wheat prices and reports of slackening activity in several lines of business by the weekly mercantile reviews apparently were disregarded.

Nearly half of the day's transactions, which in the aggregate were large for Saturday, occurred in a few affiliated issues. The advance affected mostly industrial stocks of various categories; and had the appearance of a professional demonstration. The "averages" of typical stocks changed only fractionally.

Motor and Steel Shares Rise.

Maxwell Motor issues were again the speculative favorites, the A stock touching [illegible] and closing at the top, and the B stock attaining a new peak at 89⅞ and then slipping back to 86⅝ for a small fractional gain on the day. Nash soared [illegible] points to a record high at 368½ and Mack Trucks was bid up 3½ points to a new peak at 152¾, slipping a point from the top on profit taking. Fisk Rubber common recorded a new 1925 maximum at 15.

United States Steel common crossed 118 and Bethlehem Steel showed a fractional gain at 42¼, after having sold as low as 41 on liquidation inspired by the filing of a government suit against the corporation for the recovery of between $11,[illegible] and $14,000,000 on wartime contracts. Baldwin rallied 2¼ points to 117¼, and American Can showed a net gain of 1⅜, at 174⅝.

Oils Also Show Strength.

Oils displayed a firmer tone despite the unfavorable statistical position of the industry. Failure of the expected cut in mid-continent crude to develop this week is believed to have promoted short covering in the Pan American, Marland, Pacific, and Standard Oil of New Jersey issues, all of which closed a point or so higher.

Some of the other outstanding strong spots in the industrial lists were the American Chicle issues, Bush Terminal, General Electric, Radio Corporation, Pierce Arrow preferred, Pullman, Savage Arms, Utah Securities, and Virginia Railway and Power, all of which closed 2 to 5 points higher.

A brisk demand for Delaware and Hudson, which sent that stock up 2½ points to 152, featured the railroad list. Frisco issues recorded substantial gains, but the other carriers showed only moderate improvement.

Bond Market Closes Strong.

Trading in the bond market ended with prices standing at the week's highest levels. Paris-Lyons-Mediterranean issues extended their gains 1 to 2 points and most of the French republic and municipal liens moved up a point or so. The United States Treasury 4's pushed through their previous high price, but the rest of the government list was irregular. Demand for railroad liens included International Great Northern adjustment 6s, Pere Marquette refunding 5s, Norfolk and Western convertible 6s, and Chicago and Terre Haute income 5s.

A deficit of $14,596,130 in the reserves of the New York clearing house banks is shown in today's weekly statement, in contrast with the surplus of $26,644,269 reported a week ago. Loans, discounts, and investments increased $61,841,000, reflecting greater demands for stock market operations, demand deposits increased $[illegible], and time deposits were larger by $1,735,000.

Trading in the foreign exchange was dull with price movements irregular. Demand sterling held fairly steady around $4.78⅝, but French francs reacted early 4 points to 5.21 cents on profit taking. Norwegian kroner jumped 8 points to 16.55 cents, a new high record for the year.

FINANCIAL NOTES

Reports that Italy will be the next European country to receive a large American loan, which have been linked with the recent visit of Thomas W. Lamont of J. P. Morgan & Co. to Rome, persist in Wall street. While the Morgan firm is expected to handle the financing, if Italy decides to borrow here, an independent banking group is reported to have analyzed the situation and considered the possibility of a $50,000,000 loan.

A new subsidiary of the United States Steel corporation, known as the Universal Exploration company, has been organized. The new company will survey for mine ores. [illegible] the properties and raw products needed by the corporation, which are chiefly bought now in the open market. Headquarters will be in St. Louis.

Consistently good earnings since the first of the year are being shown by the St. Louis-San Francisco railroad, gross having gained more than 5 per cent over the corresponding period of 1924. Net operating income for the first two months increased about 10 per cent.

The American Smelting and Refining company reduced the price of lead from [illegible] to 7.85c per pound.

Hale Holden, president of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy, sees possibilities of larger earnings in 1925 than last year, owing to favorable conditions in the northwest. Agricultural conditions were satisfactory, he said; miscellaneous commodities were moving in substantial volume with encouraging gains in the volume of agricultural implements and manufacturing commodities.

Come on-Drive the Great Line Eight Yourself

Come on—drive The Great Line Eight yourself.

Every man in the Jordan organization—

Every owner of The Great Line Eight—

Everyone in America who has driven The Great Line Eight knows something which you do not know.

They want you to know it, too.

They want you to have the feeling—the thrill—the fascinating sensation—the exhilarating experience which goes with driving The Great Line Eight.

You can do it at any hour of any day you choose.

It is simple enough.

This is all you have to do.

And this is what will happen.

Telephone the Jordan representative.

He'll designate the hour—

And send a man to pick you up.

Forget the salesman who brings the car.

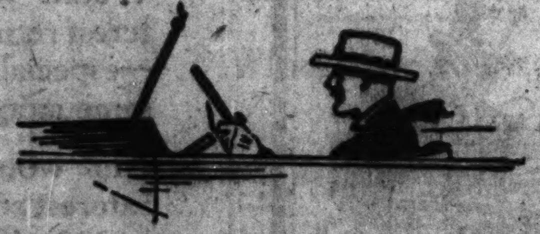
He will be just as tongue-tied as you like.

But he will answer questions.

Look at the automobile before you step in.

Decide whether you have ever seen a better looking motor car.

Step into the front seat.



Put your hands on the wheel—your foot on the accelerator—and go anywhere you want to.

Choose any route you like.

Try it in the crowded traffic at your busiest corner.

Try it at two miles an hour in high.

Step on it in the traffic press.

Take it out to the boulevard.

Look out for the traffic cop.

You will be going faster than you think before you know it.

Use your judgment until you get out of the city limits.

You will go happily along until you come to a stretch of open road.

Look out for the traffic cop again.

You will be going faster than you know before you know it.

Take it to the prize hill.

Remember the cars that you have driven before.

Give the car a chance.

Remember that it is not geared especially for hill climbing or especially for high speed.

It is geared for day in and day out pleasing operation, in crowded traffic on the open road and over the hills.

Remember that it is built for reasonable, pleasant, every day satisfactory operation, and to stay out of the service department.

But step on it if you like.

Drive it around to your home.

Let your wife step in at the wheel.

Drive it as far as she likes.

And watch the side streets—

If a milk wagon appears suddenly step on those hydraulic four wheel brakes and see what happens.

It's the safest car on the road.

Listen to the motor.

See whether you can hear the axle.

By all means if you have been accustomed to driving high priced automobiles listen to the second speed.

Drive it from two to forty-five miles an hour in second speed.

And be sure to listen carefully.

Then take it to any sales room where any other car is exhibited.

MOTOR SALES COMPANY

Compare its appearance with any.

Compare every detail of its finish.

Compare it especially with any eight cylinder automobile built in the world.

Notice the simplicity of the motor.

After this there are only two things left to do.

Compare it in price with any car in the eight cylinder class.

You will find it sells for $1000 to $2000 less.

Then ask the Jordan representative for the names of five or ten Jordan owners.

Call them on the telephone and see what they say.

Then make up your mind what you want to do.

You certainly won't buy a car that sells for more.

You won't be satisfied with anything that sells for less.

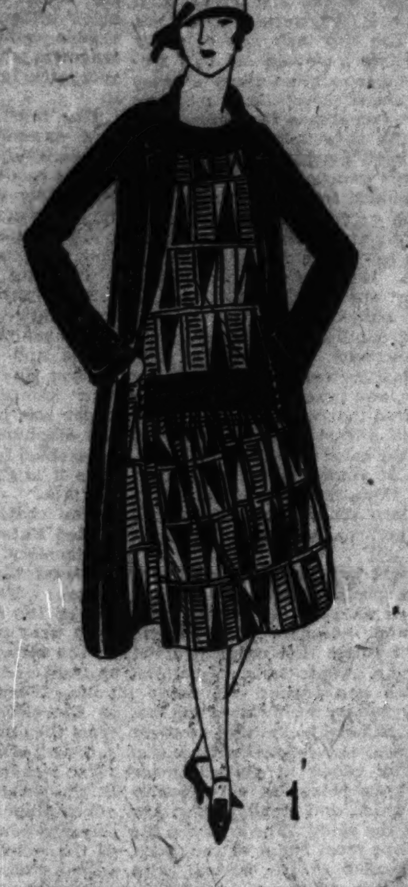
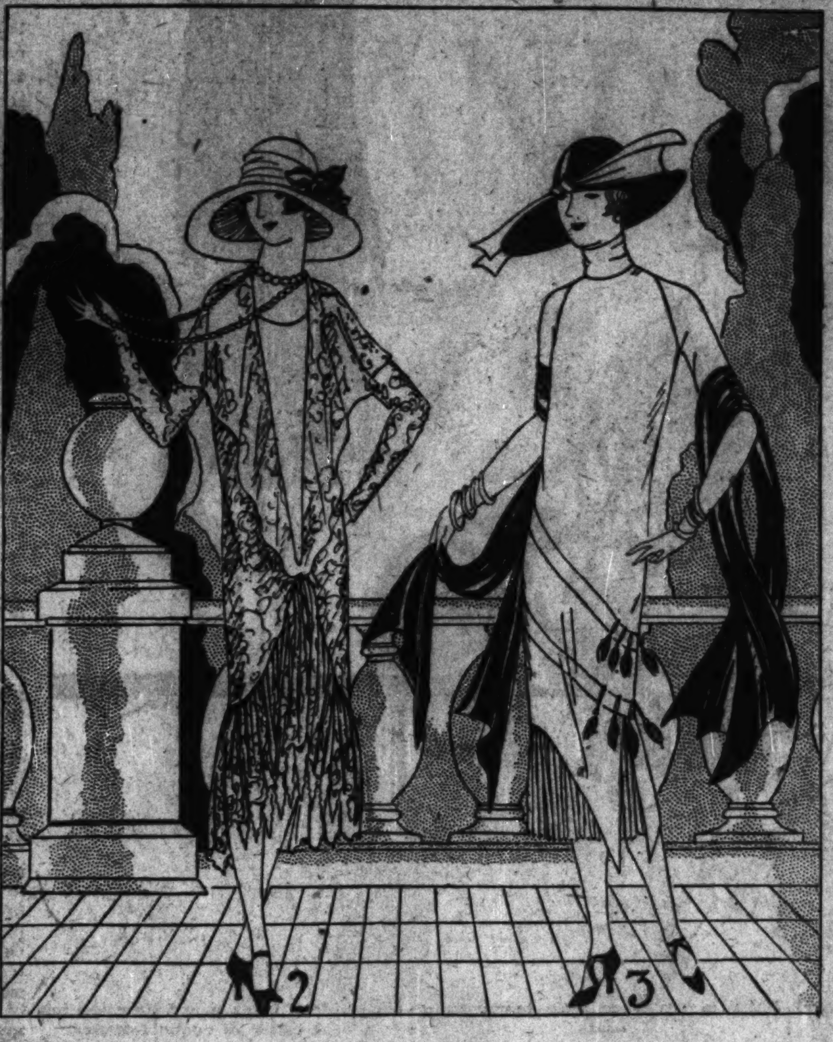
ALL TYPES OF SLEEVES ARE INVITED TO AFTERNOON AFFAIRS

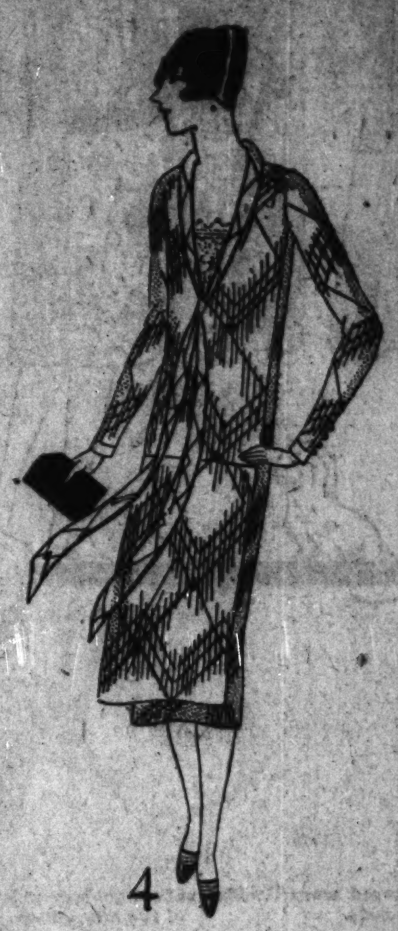
by Corinne Lowe



An ensemble costume for our less formal afternoon is presented here in a tailored black Ottoman coat lined with the cubist pattern black and white crepe utilized for the frock. As a return of courtesies the frock is belted and collared in the black Ottoman.



In the Philippe & Gaston creation at the left a blonde chiffon foundation is allowed to assert itself publicly through the opening of blonde lace revers and also through the upward drape of a lace skirt that reveals petal-like points of the chiffon. Next, Drecoll shows you in a gray crepe afternoon frock that long, graceful panels attached to elbow sleeves are an effective postscript to any fashion text. These panels are of black chiffon. The underskirt is plaited and the tassels accenting bias band are of matching gray silk.



Adapted from the celebrated hand painted model of Renee is this gray satin model zigzagged in the strokes of shaded gray and vivid red paint.

NEW YORK.—(Special Correspondence.)—A few weeks ago I wrote about brushing up our styles. I spoke of the tremendous vogue of hand painted fabrics and the degree to which the woman of expensive fashion is substituting such hand decorated materials for the more generalized printed ones. And this week I am showing at the right a sketch of an adaptation of the celebrated model, "Zigzag," which was created by Mme. Renee and which the celebrated couturieuse herself wore at her spring opening.

This frock is achieved of gray satin painted in a range of gray tones streaked effectively with vivid red. Of course, any untinted illustration of this gown is powerless to suggest the novelty and brilliancy of the effect. For, unfortunately, the line itself is, after the true Renee manner, exceedingly simple. With its fitted sleeves, its front panel marking off a waist line and achieving the result of an apron front, its unobstrusive buttons, and bands of plain fabric on the sleeves—here surely there is nothing much, as the English say, "to write home about."

Yet in this combination of tailored simplicity with ornate material we find one of the salient points of this spring's afternoon frocks. Time and again one sees formal daytime frocks of chiffon or crepe in all the ravishing tones now so much stressed—pervenche or, as it is in English form, periwinkle blue, bois de rose, willow green, amber, pomegranate red—and they are made in the same artless way, with the same long fitted sleeves that characterize this hand painted Renee model. As a matter of fact, many of the new afternoon frocks are a compromise between the elaborate creation which the French call la robe habillee and the little utility model which the French denominate la petite robe. It is only by the color or elaboration of the material that such gowns effect this compromise.

We might say, paraphrasing Longfellow, "model with reluctant sleeves, standing where the brook and river meet." For these half-and-half costumes so often express not only reluctance but absolute aversion to moulting the long sleeves of the utility frock. The sleeves to which they cling with such passionate fidelity are often just like those pictured in this famous Renee model—that is to say, long and fitted. But after all, just so long as it be a sleeve, the designers are not particular. For the great dressmakers have stopped creating for the Venus di Milo. They have suddenly realized that the most of us have arms and they have taken measures accordingly.

Now the frock which we have sketched at the left—it and the many similar ones distinguished by an alliance of striking color and tailored simplicity—is a valuable citizen in any woman's wardrobe. Suppose you work out this same model in some high or pastel tint of crepe or chiffon—for it is not, of course, bound down to its hand painted satin. Very well, then. You have something which is perfectly proper for most afternoon affairs. The matinee box party, the bridge, the luncheon, the the dansant—all may be served by a model of this variety in either its original painted satin or in one of the tinted fabrics I have suggested.

Indeed, if you are a debutante—or perhaps just a debutante's age—you could wear a frock like this to the most formal of afternoon affairs and feel that you weren't one bit eccentric. This month certainly I have seen many dear young things stepping from their limousines in some flowery crepe or chiffon bobbed to their knees and often topped by a smart fur jacquette. This combination has become, in fact, quite a debutante uniform.

The older woman requires naturally some more formal supplement to her afternoon wardrobe. For the large wedding and the big reception—for affairs such as these she must revert to the classic French robe habillee. We have sketched in the center two French models which indicate satisfactorily some of the more recent tendencies in such formal daytime wear. At the right of this panel is a Drecoll frock of gray crepe de chine with elbow sleeves, to the top of which are shirred long panels of black georgette. The intent of these flying sections of contrasting chiffon is obvious. To the straight line of the frock they contribute an infinite grace and charm.

Such panels are one of the forms by which the French designer of this spring has taken arms against sleeve monotony. You find long, floating pieces that sometimes dip to the hem of the skirt, and even lower, attached to both elbow and short sleeves, and you find them in variety—some slashed, some perfectly plain, and others with saw-toothed edge—and always you find them at their chore of giving a certain air of feminine exuberance to the straight silhouette.

But not only are sleeves invited to be present at our afternoon affairs; chokers are also eligible. These standing collars are by no means the rule in a season responsible for so many V and round necked afternoon gowns, but when they do occur they are usually effective, and certainly the woman with shortcomings of throat will welcome the longcomings in collars.

You will see that this frock has groups of four tassels—of gray silk—to accent the slanting bias bands of the skirt. These are by no means an accidental note in the theme of our fashion opus. Tassels are used constantly this spring and on all types of frocks. For example, I saw the other day a willow green crepe sports frock traversed from neckline to hem with groups of fine tucks. The all-over effect of these tucks was broken by only one detail—a narrow front panel down which swished a full length row of pert little self-colored tassels. With equal force I remembered another imported afternoon model—also a Drecoll—that utilized one enormous black silk tassel for the front of its skirt.

As you will see from the Philippe & Gaston model at the left of this Drecoll, it is hard, even through such a medium as lace, to get away from the severely fitted sleeve. This frock is made of blonde lace over a foundation of blonde chiffon, and the upward draping of the flounce to meet the lace revers is especially noteworthy. It shows, you see, how conclusively we have got away from just sewing on a flounce and calling it fashion. It shows also in the projection of the revers over the narrow sleeves that, though we can't overcome our passion for the fitted sleeve, our impulse is always to correct any former impression of severity. That fichu-like fold over the arm makes all the difference between a trying sleeve and a becoming one.

Yes, this is a spring of color. Even so, one can't deny that there are numerous stunning black models that have survived the thaw. Then, too, there are those other hardy perennials of the mode—beige, blonde, and amber. All of these tones are encountered constantly in present day apres midi costumes. Lace in these blonde or beige shades is, I should say, quite as good as ever.

There is little, if any, ebb in the vogue of lace, whether that medium be regarded as the composition or the mere trimming of an afternoon frock. A great many cream laces are employed constantly by the Paris artistes in connection with frocks of dark crepe. Thus, a noteworthy Martial and Armand model uses this cream lace as a turn down collar, puffed undersleeves, and front inset for its black crepe satin.

When it comes to the puffed undersleeve, I feel I must recapitulate a few points I have already made concerning sleeves. These puffs are omnipresent on afternoon frocks and always they differentiate this season's dress from that of last winter. The puff may be exceedingly diminutive or range the greater part of the arm. An example of the scope of its operations is afforded by one Philippe & Gaston model which invests the arms with an enormous bulb of white organdy banded in the navy rep composing this afternoon costume. The sleeves proper end above the elbow in pointed scallops, and these points are repeated in a large collar of true Van Dyck inspiration.

Aside from the puffed undersleeve and the tailored model and the one to which long panels are attached, do not forget that there are also peasant types and bell shaped flounces and real pagoda effects; also that the short cap sleeve is sometimes employed without undersleeve. In fact, one can do almost anything in this line provided one does something. The one point where tolerance stops is the absolutely sleeveless gown.

Here in this province as elsewhere we find a return to that old sentiment about displaying a waist line. Even the unbelted gown usually suggests a boundary. Thus that Philippe & Gaston lace frock on our page gets the idea across through the meeting of revers and flounce.

One last word about afternoon materials—if you think crepe—just plain crepe without fuss or feathers or hand painting—is a poor old debilitated mode, you will have to revise your thought. Crepe is now using up only the second of its nine lives. It's as fashionable as it ever was, and particularly may this be said of flat crepe.

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

ENSEMBLES FOR EVERY HOUR

By Bettina Bedwell.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—Solitary garments have ceased to exist, practically speaking, in Paris styles. Cloaks, suits, and dresses are all lumped together into ensembles, so that you feel as undressed in a simple gown, without its accompanying wrap, as the modern flapper does without her rouge and lipstick. The ensemble idea has invaded every department of dress, even the intimate negligée and pajamas, and the end is not yet. Paris couturiers are doubling and tripling ensembles, in the manner I told you about a week or so ago, in addition to which they have started in making what they call the ensemble robe, a dress that puts up such a good front it appears to be both a gown and a wrap.

Most of the great Paris couturiers are making them. They are really double fronted dresses, which have an outer or coat front and an inner dress front. Jenny, particularly, is featuring these ensemble frocks, such as you see in our second offering. Not even the expert can tell by looking at them that they are not what they seem, for they appear to be charming dresses and harmonizing coats, and the deception is never disclosed outside the boudoir.

The ensemble gown shown here is of blonde kasha combined with a figured silk, which shows a flower covered trellis on a champagne colored ground. The mere man who sat beside me when this particular model passed remarked that it had front doors, opening on to a porch covered with climbing roses. The coat front swings open, revealing its lining, which is cut in one with the dress front, the latter held neatly in place by a wide red suede belt that fastens with a silver buckle. This belt appears on the outside in back, passing through slits at the sides. There is a jabot of the figured crêpe de chine that is allowed to ripple over the revers of the coat when it is attached at its one button hip closing. These false front garments usually are arranged with such jabots, which are sometimes attached to the sides of the coat part.

Another alteration in the ensemble idea that has taken hold of fashionable Parisiennes is the addition of culottes, or short trousers, to the sports ensemble. These trousers are always made of the same material as the dress and are firmly attached to the skirt at the waistline. They certainly are practical additions to the plain sports skirt, which in their company can be allowed to swing open from the girdle, thus allowing enough freedom for a Lenglen leap in tennis, or any similar grand stride.

Our first offering shows a sports ensemble having such culottes, and it demonstrated its usefulness strikingly when I saw it in action on the tennis courts at Cannes. The coat and dress of this ensemble are made of dull blue tweed, and the lining of the coat is a deeper blue crepe de chine. The small collar of the frock is a bias band of this deeper blue crepe, which may be tied at the side front in a single knot, or left untied as you see it here. The two inch belt of silver chain mesh is a novelty of this season, and you see a great many of these belts on smart sports and morning costumes. Sometimes the same mesh makes patch pockets and collars and cuffs. I have even seen it used for narrow skirt panels.

The ensemble for our intimate garments such as negligees and pajamas is not exactly an innovation, for de luxe ensembles have been in our midst for some time. However, this is the first season that the ensemble has become practically obligatory, as it is in other realms of clothes. Nowadays you feel the necessity of a coat for your pajamas just as much as you do for your dress, and practically all of them are presented that way. You may want to exercise a certain amount of restraint in the color and cut of pajamas, but when it comes to the coat that goes with them you can go as far as you like into the realm of futuristic patterns and daring color combinations.

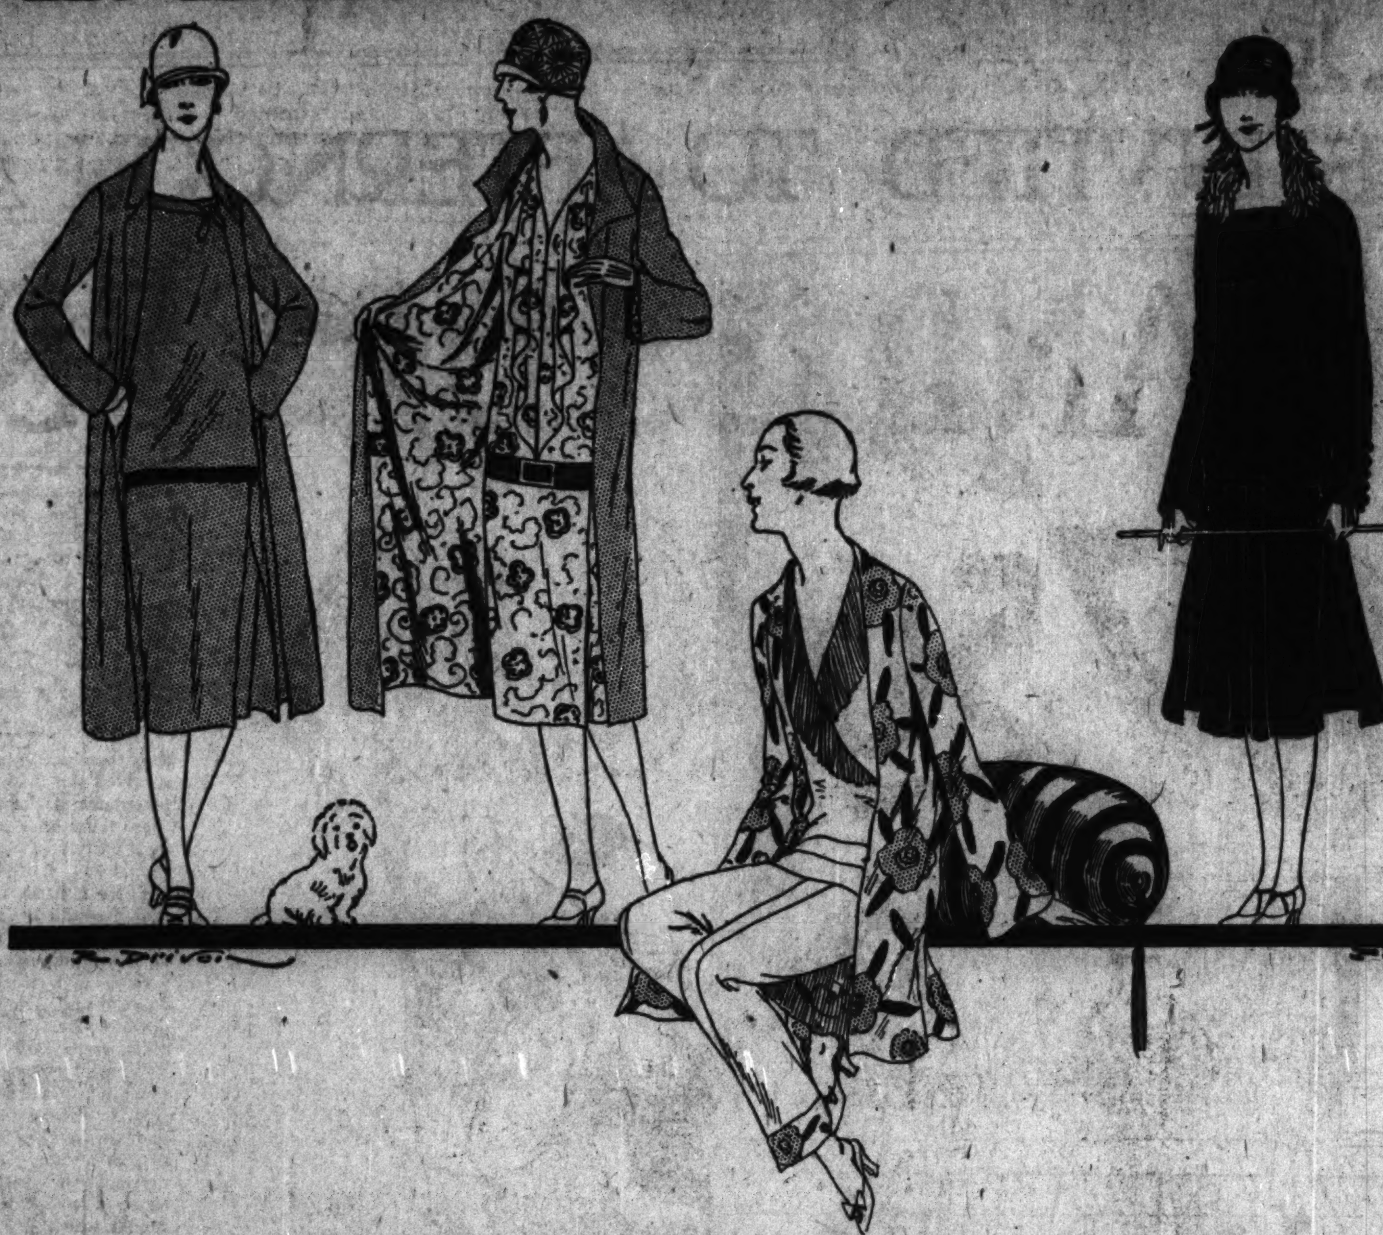
Paul Poiret has the silk for his pajama coats specially designed with bold motifs such as you see in our third offering, and he uses the extreme shades and colors that only an artist dare combine. With the coat pictured here, which has purple, red, mauve, and green flowers on a black ground, is worn a pajama jacket and trousers of nile green, the former with a surplice closing edged in plaited green chiffon. This jacket is cut circular from the waist, and stands out rather sharply at the sides. The trousers are copied in cut from those of the navy, and are banded at the bottom with wide strips of the silk which forms the coat. Such a striking and beautiful ensemble du boudoir is not intended to remain forever in close retirement, but is designed to be worn at the home tea or informal dinner, when only intimate friends are present.

Pajamas ensembles have largely replaced the teagown in popularity for such affairs, and they are so much in vogue that most of the Paris couturiers are trying their hand at designing them, a thing they would have scorned to do a season or two ago. Of course, there will always be women who prefer the floating grace and delicacy of the teagown, but that is a matter of taste and not of fashion, which at the moment prefers the pajamas. The ensemble command applies also to the teagown, which has its coat of chiffon, georgette, brocade, or lace to complete it.

Our fourth offering shows another new ensemble feature, which is the ensemble of crêpe georgette. The coat in this case is entirely a concession to the vogue of the ensemble, for it certainly does not function in the protective sense, with the exception of its collar of coque feathers.

Speaking of this collar, I want to tell you coque feather collars have almost entirely replaced collars of fur, which are verboten. Coque is used for bands and collars by every great maison du couture in Paris, houses that ignore fur altogether. Jean Patou has placed this warm collar on the diaphanous coat of this ensemble he created for Gaby Morlay, but otherwise it is guiltless of any pretense of warmth.

The coat, which flares in the accepted Patou manner, from the hips at the sides, is unlined. Its sleeves are trimmed with rows of crêpe covered buttons. The gown is reminiscent in cut of the aprons that small French boys wear when they are playing ball in the streets of Paris. It is plaited in front and back and set on to a deep yoke. There are also two box plaits at the sides. In this way it differs from the aprons of small boys, for they are plaited all around, but it has the same bishop sleeves that are attached at the wrist with buttoned bands. In effect this model is simple and extremely youthful. It is one of many of the same type that were presented at the February openings.



Sports ensemble of blue tweed worn over knee length trousers. | Double front ensemble dress is a feature of the new season. | Pajamas are worn with harmonizing coats. | Ensemble of black georgette crepe has a coat collar of coque feathers.

MOTHERS UP IN ARMS

by Doris Blake

Get-Together Movement Is Suggested to Take the Reins Out of Youthful Hands.

YOU, no doubt, have been reading the stories about the New Jersey town which is upset over the revelations brought to light at a fraternity dance; how mothers are scandalized to learn their children participated in drinking orgies; how hotel managements in other communities are refusing some of our school girls and boys the hospitality of their ballrooms, fearful of the consequence.

You may try to be kindly and generous about the pranks of youth, and discredit many of the rumors afloat about its sophisticated amusements. Still there is evidence a-plenty to start an investigation committee to work to try to straighten out the tangles by which some of the abandoned young of ours appear to be enmeshed.

Where do you think the investigators might begin the work? On the fraternities, the schools, the boys and girls, or follow the scent straight to the homes from which the youngsters emerge, and examine the parents on such vital queries as what they are doing to shape the destinies of those in their charge?

Look to the Home.

I am inclined to think the investigation would rest right there in the home. And the reformers could take up the work in the identical precinct in which the investigators left off. In other words, when you are trying to find out what's wrong with the youngsters, you must find out what is wrong with the home and the parents therein.

Of course, we must admit parents are up against a harder job keeping their children on the straight and narrow path these days than was the job of their parents or their parents' parents. Furthermore, we have to grant that even the best of parents have children in their midst who remain a problem in spite of their honest endeavors.

But, generally speaking, where youth abandons the rules of law abiding respectability and plain common decency, you find that shiftless child management and irresponsible parentage are at the root of the trouble.

Happily, mothers are awaking to the fact. Revelations of the goings-on of unbridled youngsters are bestirring a number of them to action. They are taking other mothers into their confidence on child behavior problems. They are planning a great get together movement which cannot help working out for the betterment of the boy and girl. They are working on the theory, most hopeful sign of all, that they have to set a good example themselves, or take the blame for the misdoings of their young.

From Mothers' Viewpoint.

"It isn't the young of today who deserve most of the censure," writes one of them, "for their attitude toward life and life's problems of morals, responsibilities, and so on, but their parents or other elders who either set a bad example or who are lax in trying to interest the young folk in better methods of 'getting a kick out of life.'

"One of the troubles we parents have to contend with is that the girls and boys are organized. Not consciously, perhaps, but at least effectively. When Mary comes home and asks to go to a party or dance or the movies, she adds 'All the girls are going.' Which, of course, is true, for before the evening is over every other girl in the same group has said the same thing, and we poor mothers, fearing to seem different, consent to the request, though knowing it should not be given.

"Now we parents could use the same sort of coöperating that the young folk use, and thereby help ourselves and them. Suppose we were to call Jane's mother and Sarah's mother and all the other mothers and say, 'I really do not approve of Mary's going to that dance this evening, but she says all the other girls are going. Are you going to let your daughter go?' If we would do that, it is dollars to doughnuts that mother at the other end of the telephone line would lean against the door jamb and say in a voice weak with surprise and gratitude that she did not want her Jane to go, but feared to oppose her when all the others were going."

"It is quite true, for I've tried it. I have found out that they are just as anxious to have their girls do the right thing as I am. I have found, too, from actual experience that our concerted stand has put the skids under a lot of nonsense.

Parents in Conference.

"It has always made me tired," continues Mary's mother, "to see a parent try to lay the blame of her children's misdoings on the neighbors' bad boys and girls. If I sit down and say, 'I don't know what to do with Mary! All the other parents allow their girls to do such foolish things, or wear such expensive clothes, or dress so inappropriately, and run wild, so how can I keep Mary in?' I am blaming my daughter's misdeeds on the other parents.

"If I had good sense I'd surely know I am not the only parent in the world who is concerned about her daughter. I ought to know other mothers are getting as many gray hairs over it as I am, and a little sensible chat with some of them would help things a lot. Believe me, the girls chat the thing over. Why, my 10 year old stands on the front porch before she comes in, and a few moments later approaches me with, 'Mother, Alice wants me to come over!'

"Of course she does, but who suggested it?

"If we mothers could get together on this thing as the youngsters do, we'd have the situation in our own hands.

"I can't understand, with our adult powers of reasoning, why we let them run us. If we tried to give them something to do, with a bit of human sympathy and understanding back of it, we'd have the girls on our side. That is, if we have any reason to believe that they have a heritage of common sense from us.

Putting Herself in Their Place.

"There, that sounds like preaching—but I do feel certain that the the coöperation of the parents would get us somewhere and bring the children along with us.

"Heaven knows I was a rapid moving girl myself, and I've a lot of pep and initiative left even if I am 40 plus, and I know that my girls are a lot like the girl that I was some twenty-five or thirty years ago. But my mother had gumption or I'd have been a problem even in the good old days. So, I try to put myself in the place of my girls now, and I really haven't half as much trouble as most of the mothers in 'my set' have.

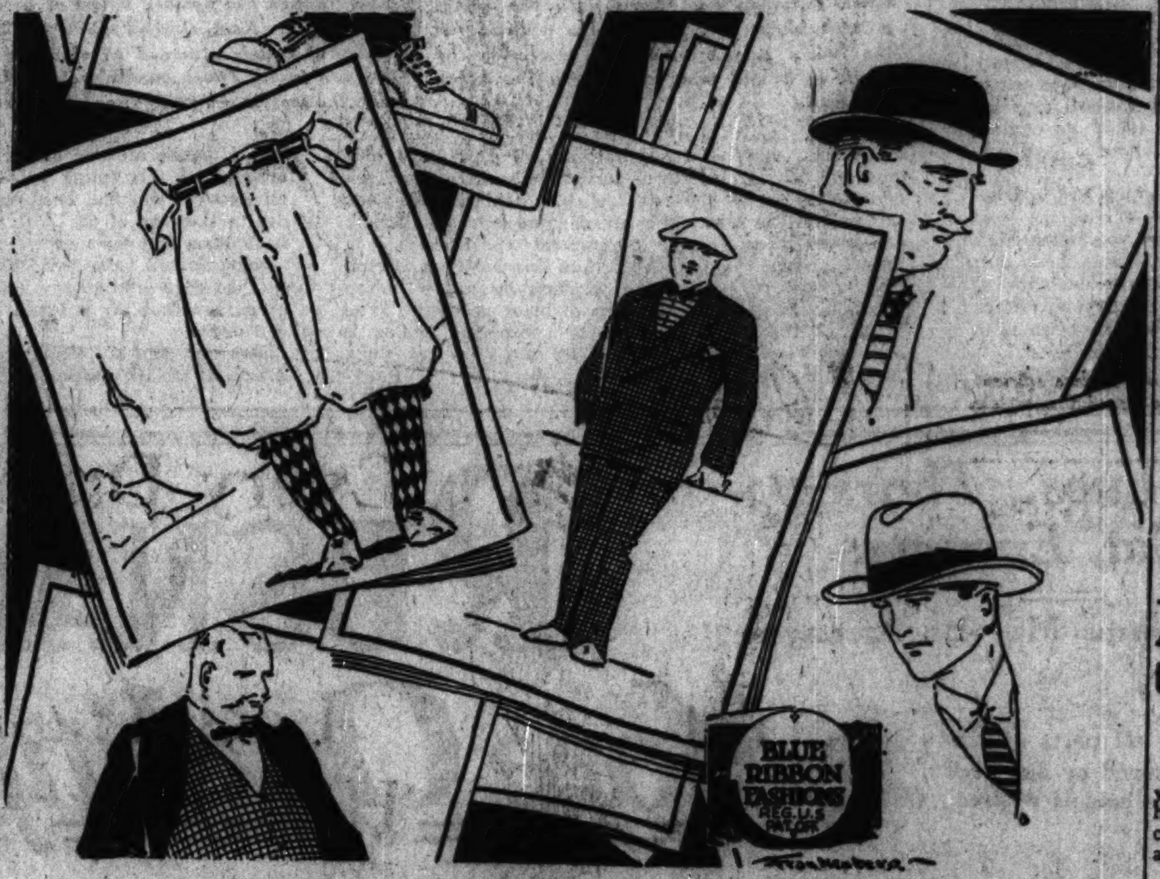
"Yes'm," I agree redundantly—it is we mothers who are to clean house.

"L. H. A."

What do the rest of you mothers think of this get-together idea? Don't you think it a good one?

MEN'S FASHIONS

BY A. T. GALLICO.



MISTAKES THAT SPEAK FOR THEMSELVES

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Style may be important, but there is something to do with men's clothes that is more important, and that is that the clothing be becoming to the man who wears it.

Don't let your desire to wear what is in the swim of fashion make you put on something that is entirely unfitted to your figure; for if you do the garment loses all of its charm and value as a bit of style.

Fashion comes and goes. In one day and out the next, almost. But one's particular style of looks does not change, except with age. You'll always be a well dressed man if you wear clothing that appears to be made for you and designed for you instead of for the next man.

Not, of course, that we urge any one to wear the same style of collar and suit that he may have worn twenty years ago. Equally important to wearing becoming clothes is the wearing of clothing that is inconspicuous. But there are many happy mediums between old fashioned clothes and those of the fleeting moment. Also there is always more than one style of each article of clothing which is fashionable.

Take, for instance, suits. Both single breasted and double breasted suits are in the fashion. Just because the double breasted model comes in for a good share of popularity from the smart dressers is no reason why a man should wear it when it does not look well on him. Just because it is smart on some men he must not try to make it look smart on him. The short, stocky, fat man will not look the same in a double breasted suit as the taller, more slender man. He should stick to the single breasted suit and look well, no matter how the tide of fashion runs.

In the same way, the stylish suit this year has a slightly longer coat than hitherto, with low set pockets and buttons, and low rolling lapels. The extremely short man, with short legs, will not find this fashionable coat becoming to him. He needs a shorter coat, with higher buttons and shorter lapels, so that he gets full advantage of what length of legs he has, and a higher line to the whole body. Such a coat is not out of style. The constant shifting of fashion back and forth between shorter and longer coats, long and short lapels is so elastic that every man can find a coat or suit which becomes him.

Take top coats—there are many of the smart ones with overplaids and overchecks, some of which stand out distinctly as a pattern. This is a fashionable coat. But our same friend the fat man or the extremely large man will do well to shun such a coat, for it will make him look bigger. A coat of plain fabric is just as correct, and in the long run just as stylish, and it will suit him far better.

As for hats, this spring will see a leaning towards a wide brimmed, decidedly curled brimmed felt hat. It is a large hat, with considerable sweep to it. This is becoming to a man of average size or more. But on a small headed, small featured man it will be less becoming than a smaller, less sweeping hat. The hat mentioned is fashionable, but it would not look so on the wrong man.

The tendency in collars is to the style low in the front, and slightly higher in the back. But the man with the extremely long thin neck will need a collar with more height in the front than the average, to offset the expanse of neck.

My artist friend has offered some suggestions in the illustration today as to some of the fashionable bits of dress which should be avoided by some men. The legs in the fancy golf hose speak for themselves. Fashionable hose, but not just the most becoming.

Then there's the corpulent man who should not have succumbed to the fashionable tattersall vest. There's the large man with the low, small derby which looks well on some, but not on him.

The artist has also shown the bad effect of the curly brimmed hat mentioned above on the man with the small head.

Hairy Growths Removed Entire Roots and All

The vexed question of how to completely remove superfluous hair has been solved at last. By means of the new Phelactine process, the hairs entire, roots and all, come out before your very eyes—easily, harmlessly, "quick as a wink." Quite different from the depilatory, electrical and shaving methods. Phelactine is perfectly odorless, non-irritating, non-poisonous—a child could eat it without the least injury. It leaves the skin so soft, smooth, hairless, no one would tell you ever had a moustache or other hairy growth. Procure a stick of Phelactine from your druggist, follow the simple instructions, and you will certainly be astonished and delighted.

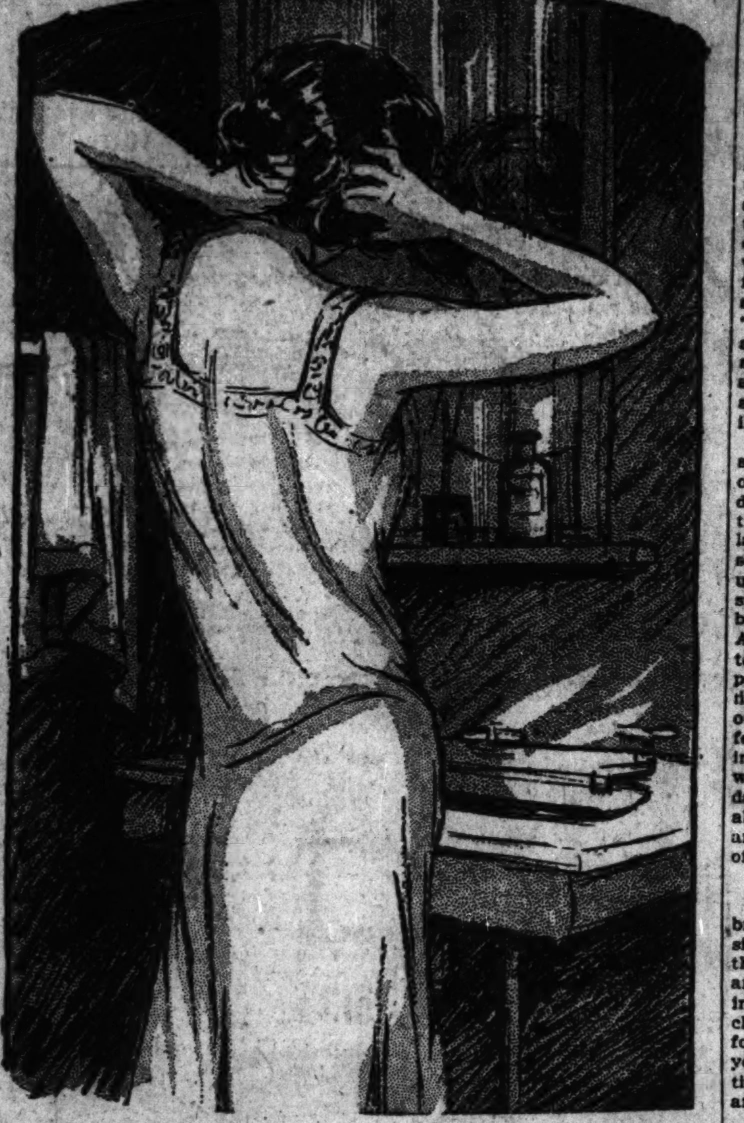
THE IMPORTANCE OF CLEAN HAIR

Mark This Well: No Woman Has That Well Groomed Look Who's Given to Infrequent Shampoos.

by Antoinette Donnelly



NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Whether you are for shingle blessedness or agin it, you have to admit one point in its favor. It has drawn the eyes of the world toward coiffures. Never before has hair been talked about so much. No monologue, dialogue, or catalogue but introduces the subject. It has almost—but not quite—run reducing out of parlor conversation.

The result is that hair is no longer just something to tuck up under your hat or your boudoir cap. Long or short—it has become something to exhibit with concern for your neighbor's approval. Any movement that can work this general improvement is deserving of a few votes of thanks.

It has done a charitable deed for the woman who struggled tearfully before with a small handful of hair. Now instead of trying to make it stretch to the crown and unfold into a Japanese fan, all the lucky one has to do is to roll it into a neat little chignon at the nape of her neck, and look a good imitation of the fashion drawing.

It has set the heavier headed to finding sleek ways of disposing of her glory so that the nice contour of her cranium shall not be lost under a disorderly mop.

That Well Groomed Look.

More important than the mere fashion items, however, is the result shown in the general care of the hair—short, long or medium.

The reform is akin to the evolution of the woolen stockinged leg into a sheer hosed, trimly dressed ankle. And for the same reason—the battery of observant eyes turned in its direction. Or, like the silhouette, once a thing of pads and cushions of fat and high blood pressure, short breath and early demise; now a lovely thing of symmetry with the promise of youth extended a decade or two.

The thing that happened to the figure and the ankle of yesterday is now in the process of happening to hair and heads for the greater glory of tomorrow.

Women have their hair washed more often. They brush it more. They arrange it more prettily around the face, and they use the hand mirror more often to study the back effect. You don't see so many stray wisps hanging off the back, or over the ears. Women are learning as they never learned before that the face and the coiffure were never intended to be a warring couple, but a picture of perfect and ideal companionship, one contributing as much beauty as possible to the other.

One Best Bet.

The happy result does not end above the neck either, for out of this study is coming a sense of line, which sense, by the way, is really the secret of the much advertised chic of the French woman.

We're getting there, and I think bobbed hair, not because it is bobbed, but because it set women to studying their heads, launched us neatly over the first milestone on the road.

Now, if there are any backsliders in our midst, what will happen to them is much what happened to the woman who would not give up her five thousand calories a day. She is not going to be invited into any future beauty contests. I don't mean she must be shingled to be numbered among the glorified gals of America, but she is going to have that look about her that indicates she has been looking to her head with the determination of extracting every last grain of assistance therefrom.

Whether hair is red, raven, or Scandinavian blond, whether Boticelli bobbed or Titian long, the best bet for getting it into the distinguished service class is to keep it clean, to keep it free from excessive oiliness, from dandruff or from that sunbleached look of the undernourished scalp.

No Excuse for Neglect.

A woman with that negative tone to her hair sometimes described as mouse color and sometimes light brown told me recently that she had not had her hair washed in three months. It looked it, which is the equivalent of remarking it looked awful. Her kind of hair needs frequent washings, as its lights and glints need forcing out. After its three months water fast it looked about as live and attractive as a floor mop. She explained she would have it done oftener only she is afraid of what may be contained in a shampoo you get in a beauty parlor.

If she feels that way about the beauty parlor, what is to prevent her washing her hair at home, then going to the beauty shop and having it waved? I don't think there is ground for her suspicions about harmful ingredients in a shampoo, provided she patronizes a reliable shop. But there are any number of women who prefer to shampoo their hair themselves because they feel they can scour their scalps with more vigor than others will do it for them.

In any event, there is no excuse for presenting a messy looking head of hair on that account. Shampooing the hair at home is not a hard job, unless one has a great abundance, when the drying becomes more the problem than the actual washing.

Preparing the Shampoo.

The way to go about a good shampoo is this: After letting down the hair, or letting it out if it is of the bobbed variety, part it in sections and give it a most thorough brushing. Thus you get out some of the dust and grime and all of the dead hairs. Brush for five minutes.

Have prepared a shampoo made of castile or any other mild, pure soap. Be generous with it. You need a lot to get the hair clean, especially if it is oily in character. Take a quart of boiling water and shave the soap into it. Let this remain on the stove until thoroughly dissolved, then set aside to cool. Occasionally you may add a pinch of borax to the liquid.

When your hair is thoroughly brushed, fill the wash basin with water—fairly hot. Wet the hair first, front and back and all over. Then pour the soap liquid on it—generously—and scrub the scalp until you feel it tingling. You may even take a small brush and scrub the scalp with it, parting the hair in sections to get at the roots. Pour away that water and a second time repeat the soap application and scrub some more. Use clear water for the third immersion of the head in the bowl. Swish the hair around well until you get the soap out. If you are going to make a practice of the home shampoo, buy a spray for the rinsing. It is not expensive and you can with so much more ease repeat the rinsings until every last particle of soap is out of the hair.

Rinsing the Trick.

The great trick of a shampoo is to turn on enough water to get the soap all out. You need not be afraid to use too much of this clear water on the head. Gradually turn on the cold water in the spray until you can stand the final minute or two of real cold water. The reaction on the scalp is as invigorating as the morning cold spray and gives a tremendous amount of help to fresh circulation of the blood under the scalp, which, after all is said and done, is the secret of live, abundant, shining hair.

Have at hand a couple of towels, three for a good job of drying, and proceed to rub the scalp and hair dry. Hair dried by hand and towel has a sheen and softness that artificial heat destroys.

Have your brush clean. Don't spoil all the good work already done by using a soiled one. As the hair is finishing drying, use the brush; rest a couple of minutes, and then brush again.

Particular women keep two hairbrushes on hand, an excellent idea; alternating in their use and always requiring that the brush that touches the hair be clean. There seems to be an unfounded superstition that hair brushes cannot be washed often. They can and should be, and should be dried resting on the bristles, not on the back.

HELEN: USING MEANS TO PREVENT perspiration in the arm pits, hands, and feet is not injurious to the general health. That is an erroneous impression. An excellent remedy is a 25 per cent solution of aluminum chloride in distilled water. Dab gently on the parts every other day, or every third day, until three applications have been made. Allow the lotion to dry thoroughly before clothing is permitted to touch the skin. One application a week will prevent a recurrence.

CURLY: YOUR HAIR ISN'T curly, but you would like it to be? Well, try the following formula: Take one ounce of gum arabic, half an ounce of moist sugar, and dissolve them in three-quarters of a pint of water. When dissolved, add two ounces of rose water and shake thoroughly. Bottle and use when required. Dampen the hair with fluid before curling.

BETTY D.: A GOOD DEPILATORY to be applied to the arms may be made from the following formula: Sulphid of barium, 2 drams; oxide of zinc, 3 drams; starch, 3 drams. Mix these well and keep tightly corked. When you go to apply this depilatory, add sufficient water to make a paste. Then spread over the part and allow it to remain on for a couple of minutes. Wash off, and apply cold cream, as there will be resulting irritation. You can tell when the paste has been on long enough by a slight burning sensation.

T. H. M'N: BAD BREATH MAY be due to any one of a number of conditions. Disturbances of the digestive tract is perhaps the most common. Then there is bad teeth, inflammation of the lining of the nose, sinus trouble. In your case it would be wise to have your nose and throat examined by a specialist.

E. T. J.: TO MAKE THE HANDS more shapely, massage them every night with a good skin food or pure olive oil. Let the movement be downward toward the finger tips, with intermediate light strokes across the back of the hand. Leave on as much of the cream or oil as you can and wear gloves during the night. The massage is especially helpful in treating enlarged joints. Then, too, it is essential to keep the nails manicured. This you can do yourself if you will give about five minutes of your time to it, each day. Send stamped, addressed envelope for instructions on manicuring.

Better Than Calomel

Thousands Have Discovered Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are a Harmless Substitute

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—the substitute for calomel—are a mild but sure laxative, and their effect on the liver is almost instantaneous. These little olive colored tablets are the result of Dr. Edwards' determination not to treat liver and bowel complaints with calomel.

The pleasant little tablets do the good that calomel does, but have no bad after effects. They don't injure the teeth like strong liquids or calomel. They take hold of the trouble and quickly correct it. Why cure the liver at the expense of the teeth? Calomel sometimes plays havoc with the gums. So do strong liquids. It is best not to take calomel. Let Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets take its place.

Headaches, "dullness" and that lazy feeling come from constipation and a disordered liver. Take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets when you feel "logy" and "heavy." They "clear" clouded brain and "perk up" the spirits. 15c and 30c.

WHAT FISH WE USE.

OUR present knowledge and use of fish is threatened with what would formerly have been considered utter topsyturvydom. In other words, the knowledge and use of fish by large numbers of persons today begins and diminishes in the following order: Canned fish, cured fish, fresh fish, or perhaps we should say untreated or uncooked fish. The knowledge of the latter is slight indeed, and therefore trade in "fresh" fish becomes more and more a precarious business. In ancient states there used to be stricter laws about fish as a food than concerning any other. When we try to make similar laws we stifle some industry.

Of course, the fact is that we have so multiplied conditions affecting all our food supplies that we can with difficulty control anything, even though we have also multiplied our laws. In ancient Greece, 'tis said, no seller of fish was allowed to sit down until he had sold his entire stock. Consider the number of persons who would be affected by any such edict today. Any similar edict would add another to the many reasons now working to prevent us ultimately from having any fish at all to eat, unless we catch them ourselves. The ancient enactments affected but a few who found the fish industry a profitable one, and there were probably more of these in the old days about fish and its treatment than about any other food, that is, after the ancient states had become assemblages of traders.

For One Day a Week.

Much water has gone under the bridge—it is a monster bridge, too—since the fishing industry was one of the most powerful in the world, and amply bolstered up by another exceedingly powerful influence, namely, the church. Fish was then a prescribed food one day a week through all the year, and was also eaten much of the time during all the forty weekdays, and the intervening Sundays in Lent.

In eating fish during Lent we may picture behind us a vast background of life, such as inspired song and picture, and was closely interwoven with morals and religion.

From whatever point of view we start to discuss fish, we really need a book to do so effectively. But to get right down to the specific expectations of those who consider fish as something for one of the meals of a day let us speak of some of the fish products we can generally see at this season, and those which are the easiest to obtain, if we have prescribed fish for ourselves.

Smoked White Fish.

Though smoked herring are always procurable without trouble, we can also today get small smoked white fish, and its exceedingly near but large relative the Canadian tullibee, lightly cured with smoke. They are not so strong as the herring and can be used without filling the house with an odor. They do not keep as long as the herring, and show their age by mold. If a dishonest dealer should wipe off this mold as an evidence of decay, there are other evidences by which it can be tested, if a glance does not tell the story. Lift it by the tail. It may drop to pieces.

Broiled Smoked White Fish.

Wipe a smoked white fish or tullibee, place under the broiler, and if it is a small fish, cook it five minutes to a side in a hot broiling oven, allowing a longer time for larger fish. Take up, remove skin, take off fillets carefully, butter them and serve with lemon. Since the flesh is as moist as needs be, much more than that of smoked sea herring there is no need of adding fat before the broiling. The cooked, skinned, and buttered fish may be served in a border of boiled rice. In this case it may be garnished with hard cooked egg yolk put over it through a ricer. Or this fish may be flaked and used as an appetizer.

Boiled Smoked White Fish.

Wipe the fish or wash and wipe and drop it into boiling seasoned water and cook for twenty minutes. To season the water, or prepare it for the fish, add celery tops, the tops of scallions or green onions sliced carrot, and similar seasonings like green sweet pepper, a little parsley, etc. Serve with some piquant sauce, or use for a fish salad, or mash to a paste with seasonings and use for sandwich fillings.

Buying Finnan Haddie.

Finnan haddie should be kept in a cold place from first to last. Do not buy that which has been exposed on a counter in a warm store. It will soon have a bad or sickening odor and do not leave it in the paper when you get it home, but keep under a cover and cool. To test this fish for its condition look at the backbone and flesh about it. In buying finnan haddie, if the fish is not dry around the back bone do not take it. As it grows wet it soon grows slimy.

Broiled Finnan Haddie.

Haddie does not need soaking to freshen it but to soften it, if it is dry. When it is moist, put in hot oven for a few minutes, after which the skin may easily be peeled off. If it is dry wash it quickly, soak it for half an hour in cold water, pour this off and then pour over it water just off the boil, and let it stand for fifteen minutes. Remove the skin, or if you choose, leave it on, put on a greased broiler, dot generously with butter and broil until a nice brown. Twenty minutes will be none too long if the fish is thick. Serve on a hot platter, adding a little butter or pour hot cream over it. Served conventionally it is garnished with parsley and accompanied by baked potatoes. Do not make the servings large. Better let the eater come again.

Haddie Relish.

Prepare the fish as for broiling, and flake it. If the fish is moist, it needs only be washed, and then to stand five minutes in water just off the boiling. Then shred the fish and cook it gently in butter. This may be added to a white sauce to make creamed finnan haddie.

Creamed Finnan Haddie.

Pare and scrape and wash a thick pound piece of the haddie, and put it skin down into cold water to cover well. Put on stove, bring slowly to a boil, and cook gently for twenty minutes. Remove from fire, drain and shred, rejecting any hard edges. A sauce of pure cream, thickened with egg yolk, of course, gives superior effects, but an excellent sauce may be made as follows:

Gently simmer, without allowing them to color, two tablespoons of chopped onions and two tablespoons of chopped green pepper in two tablespoons of butter. Cover the pan, and cook over a minimum fire. Then add two level tablespoons of flour, and blend the flour with the fat, after which add one cup of milk and stir constantly until it thickens, adding salt to taste without forgetting there is some in the fish, and a grate or two of nutmeg or a little paprika.

Put the shredded fish into this and gently cook from five to ten minutes. Serve on toast. It is quite the fashion to sprinkle some paprika somewhere on a serving of anything in a sauce like this. A little at one side is always permissible.

Broiled Red Herring.

Heat the herring, strip off the skin, split the fish open, put into a deep plate, pour over it a half cup of boiling hot milk, cover with another plate, and set where it is warm for one hour. Strain off the milk, wipe the fish, rub the split side with butter, and broil until nicely browned. When done, put on a hot dish and add a squeeze of lemon juice.

Herring Appetizers.

Prepare boneless herring in small strips, brush with lemon juice and melted butter, and heat thoroughly.

Herring Sandwiches.

Wash and scald boneless herring in boiling water from three to five minutes. Heat this up in bacon or other fat until well softened, but do not cook until stiff. Eat on a cracker or as a sandwich filling. For a finer filling break up or crumb the fish so cooked, rub with a little butter to a sort of paste, add a few drops of onion juice and just a suspicion of cayenne pepper. The flavor of the herring is really refined by the onion juice.

Soaking Salt Mackerel.

Salt mackerel should be washed and soaked until the flesh has softened, although poor stuff will never soften. A good quality of fish does not require much soaking. Sometimes it may be best to wash the fish thoroughly, cover it with cold water and bring this to a boiling point—to freshen it. For full preparation of mackerel for cooking, cut off the head and fins, wash with care to rub off any grains of salt and scrape off any black skin or other refuse. Then soak—for a few hours if liked rather salt, or longer for complete softening of the fish. Rinse and wipe dry before baking or broiling.

Broiled Salt Mackerel.

Have the mackerel cleaned, soaked, rinsed, and wiped dry and scored, then rub with olive oil or butter and cook under the broiler. If well soaked, it will puff up and cook like fresh fish, but it cannot do so unless well soaked, since every fiber is well loaded with salt. The time of cooking depends on how near the fiber the broiler is, as well as upon the thickness of the fish. Six or eight minutes to a side ought to be long enough for the ordinary sort of salt mackerel, or rather that which is of good quality, and excellent when cooked in this fashion. One of the best accompaniments is plain boiled potatoes with melted butter or melted butter and chopped parsley.

Salt Mackerel Baked in Milk.

Probably one of the best ways of cooking salt mackerel is to bake it in rich milk or cream or with milk and part cream. The milk softens the stiffened fish more than does water, but even fresh fish is made superior in a similar way. All waste and unsightly parts should be cut away from soaked salt mackerel before putting it to bake. Also remove the backbone, put into a tin plate or a baking tin of the right size, the skin side down, and cover with the milk or cream.

Bake until a brown crust forms on the milk or for about twenty-five minutes in a rather hot oven. But instead of baking the fish in the oven it may be poached in the milk on top of the stove, although this requires far more attention. It must be frequently basted to keep it covered with the milk. It is also a good plan to baste it while it is cooking in the oven.

Head in Flames.

I, a business woman of mature years, after dining alone in a restaurant, stopped at the counter to pay my check, when suddenly it seemed as if all the men in the place were running excitedly toward me. Not until my hat, also my transformation, had been snatched from my head did I realize I was the center of attraction. I had backed into the cigar lighter and my head was in flames.

A man picked up the transformation and as he handed it to me said with a smile: "You are a much better looking woman without it."

I assured him that after that I wouldn't replace it if it were not necessary to do so in order to wear home what remained of the hat.

E. W.

Said It Herself.

My sister and I spent one summer in a small village. There we met a woman who continually used the word "compulsonary" for "compulsory." This amused us greatly, and we got into the habit of using that word for fun.

I attended a club meeting after returning to the city and was called on to give a short talk. As I proceeded I happened to glance over where my sister was sitting, and from the expression of her face knew something was wrong. I finished rather lamely, and afterwards she told me I had used the word "compulsonary." It was too late then to correct myself, but when I think of all those in that audience who may believe I knew no better, I shudder. Never again will I mimic another who uses a word incorrectly. A. M. T.

Taken In.

I was new in the city and wanted to buy a straw hat. After looking around for some time for a store my eye caught sight of a show case lined with straw hats. I immediately walked in the building, without a thought of looking at the sign overhead.

Amid a number of people, I walked up the counter and asked one of the clerks how much the hats were.

He said, "One dollar."

Even though a greenhorn in the city, that sounded cheap.

I started to pull out my pocketbook and said, "All right, I'll take one."

He informed me I was in a dry cleaning establishment. The clerks smiled, the bystanders laughed, and I rushed out. B. O.

Covered with Paint.

My porch chairs, with woven cane seats and backs, I had newly painted a beautiful green, with top coat of varnish as protection to the paint.

My family had been using them for a week, when one fatal day an exceedingly stout friend, dressed in immaculate white, came in for a chat, and of course occupied one of those chairs.

When ready to leave, to my embarrassment, she was fast in the varnish, from which after a struggle she managed to free herself.

Her white skirt and waist were as perfectly ringed with green as though stamped with machinery.

But my most embarrassing moment came when the ludicrous situation suddenly overcame me and I shrieked with uncontrollable laughter.

You'll Get Rid of Blackheads Sure

There is one simple, safe and sure way that never fails to get rid of blackheads, that is to dissolve them.

To do this get two ounces of Calonite powder from any drug store—sprinkle a little on a hot, wet cloth—rub over the blackheads briskly—wash the parts and you will be surprised how the blackheads have disappeared. Big blackheads, little blackheads, no matter where they are, simply dissolve and disappear. Blackheads are a mixture of dust and dirt and secretions that form in the pores of the skin. The Calonite powder and the water dissolve the blackheads so they wash right out, leaving the pores free and clean and in their natural condition.

If your druggist does not have Calonite, send $1.00 to the Research Laboratories, 780 Thompson Building, Chicago, and a package will be sent you by mail.

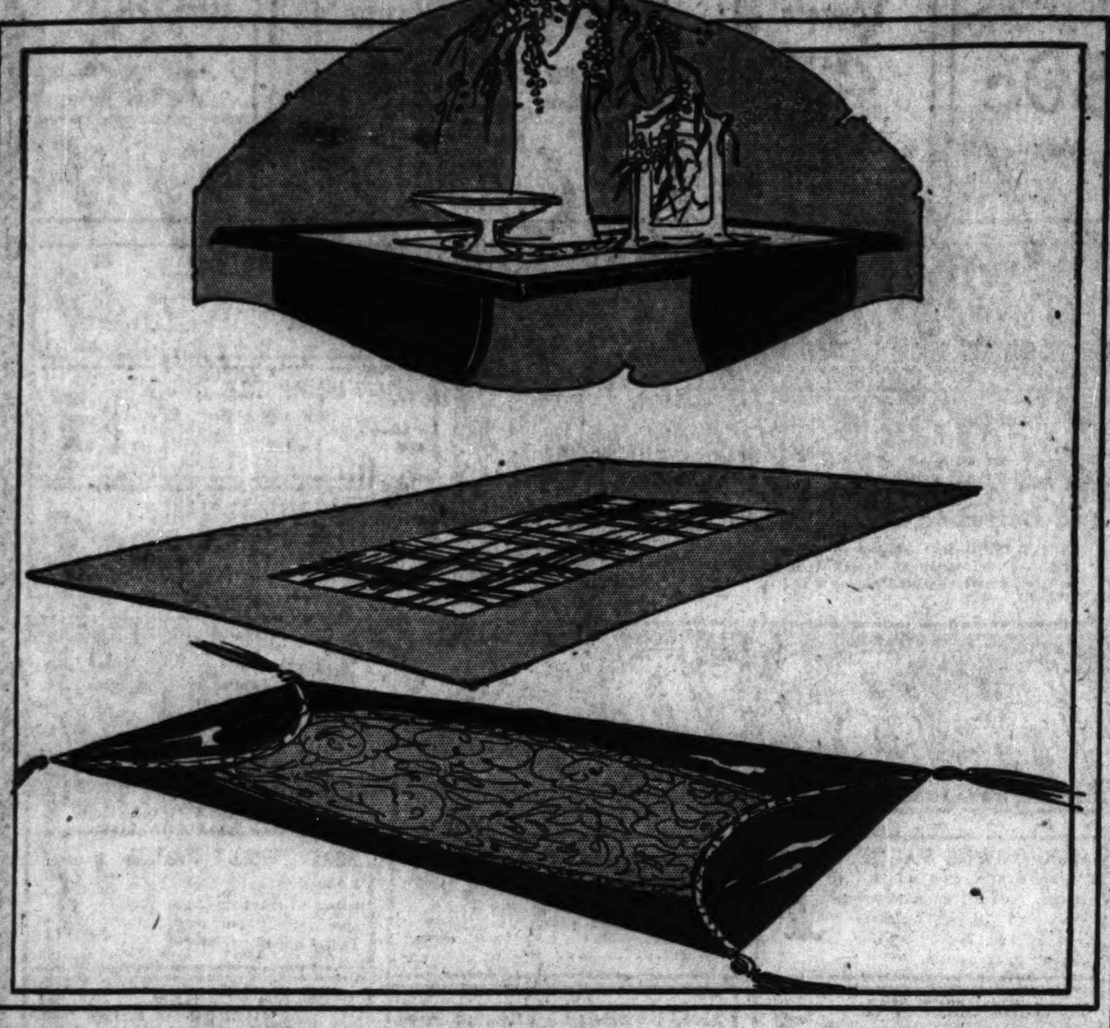
Practical and Fancy Needlework

By CLOTILDE



What is your sewing problem? Do you have trouble in following a pattern? Do you find difficulty in making a skirt hang evenly or making a sleeve that doesn't twist? If there is anything you would like to know about these or other problems of needlework write to Clotilde, The Tribune, Chicago, inclosing a stamped, addressed envelope if a personal reply is desired.

TABLE SCARFS OF SILK.

SOME of the prettiest scarfs or covers for living room tables are made of several strips of ribbon sewed together and set in a narrow or wide hem—as the case may be—of a plain colored satin.

One recently seen was probably large enough to cover about two-thirds of the top of the table. The ribbon used was one inch wide, and the colors—one of the soft shades of blue, tan, and green pastel shades. The ribbons measured eighteen inches in length, and there were three lengths of each—twelve in all—and they alternated. A four inch hem of black satin was set on, and the corners of the hem perfectly mitered.

The satin should be cut nine inches wide, and it will be nice if you have a long enough piece to go entirely around the ribbon. If it has to be pieced, it may be done at the corners. In starting to baste the satin on so as to have the seam come to the wrong side, leave enough of the satin beyond the corner to make the mitered corner, and as the following corners are reached the satin will have to be folded across the middle four inches above the seam and the upper half of the hem laid in place to form the corner. Do this all the way around, and finish the last corner so it matches the others. Turn to the wrong side of the cover and lay the under side of the hem, letting the satin that is folded under at the corners lay in the opposite direction from those on top. That will prevent a noticeable thickness.

Do not turn in the raw edge of the hem on the under side, but baste it down all around, and then cut a lining of the satin and baste and hem down all around—letting it come just underneath the seam on the right side and over the hem edge. Taffeta, satin or velvet ribbon could be used for this sort of a top, and there are many wonderful color combinations.

Maybe you have a handsome piece of satin damask, wool tapestry or brocaded satin. If you have it could be used beautifully for one of these tops. Sometimes one sees them finished with a handsome gold or silver edging and maybe a small matching tassel at each corner. A puffing of taffeta in a contrasting color makes an attractive finish; and this puffing can be from one to two or three inches wide—depending largely on the size of the finished article.

Answers to Sewing Queries.

Mrs G. H.: I imagine from your note that your dress pattern cut practically straight in the skirt. If you feel you must have more width in the skirt you can cut your material straight out from below the underarm seam on both back and front two or three inches and slash the material in towards front and back about two inches. The lower edges are gathered and brought back so that the seam under the arm is unbroken, and the gathers are evenly adjusted and seamed to the upper slashed parts.

Or, if you simply need a little more room at the feet, gore the side seams of the skirt part out a little towards the bottom, of course beginning at the waist line and making a straight line from there to the bottom—widening it one or two inches on each seam.

For women who cannot decide

THE new, unique and exclusive washing principle of the Maytag Gyrafoam is so far ahead in speed, thoroughness and pounds-of-dry-clothes-washed-per-minute that you would not believe it possible—so we suggest that you disregard all claims and do this one thing:

Test the Maytag in your own home, in your own way, in comparison with any or all other washers, and if it does not SELL ITSELF to you "heart and soul," don't keep it.

More housewives buy Maytags than any other washer—and they buy them because the Maytag SELLS ITSELF to them right in their own homes.

Call any authorized Maytag dealer. There is no obligation whatever.

Look for the Simmons Label

There is a Simmons mattress to fit every taste and pocketbook

Do you rest easier on a mattress soft as down? Or does firm cushioning invite deep sleep for you? Do you want the finest mattress made? Or is low price a necessity?

To give you comfort of the type you want, Simmons builds eight different styles of mattresses.

The Simmons Purple Label cradles you in luxury on a bed of 810 small sensitive springs and fine curled hair. Silky kapok, imported from Java, make a light and lofty Simmons mattress. Deep layers of felted cotton fill other styles with lasting comfort. And there are still other grades even lower in price for those who want them.

Every Simmons mattress, even the least expensive, is built of clean, new materials. Whatever you pay, you get the best that can be produced at that price. Simmons passes on to you scores of factory economies made possible by the world's largest output of sleep equipment.

You can't be too careful in avoiding the dangers of filth and contagion that lurk in second-hand fillings. Be sure a Simmons label marks the mattress you choose.

Your merchant will deliver it to you in a dust-proof carton. Write for the "Restful Bedrooms" booklet to The Simmons Company, 666 Lake Shore Drive, Chicago.

2412—Woman's and misses' suspender skirt. Sizes 16 years and 36, 38, 40, and 42 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 1⅞ yards of 40 inch material for the dress and 2⅛ yards of 40 inch material for the guimpe.

2398—Woman's and misses' jumper 10, 12, and 14 years. Size 12 requires 2¼ yards of 40 inch material for the dress and 1½ yards of 40 inch material for the guimpe.

2389—Woman's and misses' jumper dress. Sizes 16 years and 36, 38, 40 and 42 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 2⅞ yards of 40 inch plaid material, with 2¼ yards of 40 inch plain material.

HOW TO USE THE PATTERNS

HEAVY linen or cotton would be suitable for the three piece suspender skirt—pattern No. 2412.

A solid color, with the edge of the hem in the front piped in a contrasting color, would be pretty, and the piping could be used where the suspends join the skirt, and the side edges of the suspenders could be finished with the piping. The material should be thoroughly shrunken before being cut, and if a color is used, it should be set at the time the shrinking is done.

Direction on the pattern envelop show how to cut and put the pattern together, so there should be no trouble, but one should always apply her own measures to the pattern before using it; for while the bust measure will be right, sometimes the length and hip measures vary in different figures.

There is one back gore, and the front gore is divided and buttoned, making three gores. Allow for a 4 or 5 inch hem in cutting, and if the material is rather heavy, it will be best to bind the seams together, and then lay them towards the front and stitch from the right side, making this stitching come about one-quarter on an inch from the first stitching. This gives a tailored appearance and looks well.

After the suspender edges are piped, a lining should be hemmed in place if you wish the dress to be well finished.

Any of the sheer materials in white will be suitable for the blouse, but this, too, should be shrunken before being cut. This blouse is cut with a plain back and a plain front. A plait is set onto the blouse in the middle front and the blouse buttons together through this plait. A round collar finishes the blouse at the neck, and the long, one piece sleeves are finished at the wrists with turned back cuffs. The pattern is perforated at the bottom for a hem and through this is run an elastic that keeps the blouse in place. Pockets are inserted in the skirt at the top where the suspender straps are set on, and the width at the bottom, for size 36 is about 1⅛ yards.

Pattern No. 2398 is for a jumper dress worn with a separate guimpe. These dresses are fine for small girls and if several guimpes are made to go with it the dress will be serviceable. Flannel in stripes or a plain color will make up prettily, and so will cashmere, challis, or any other of the soft, light weight woolens. The dress is cut with drop shoulders and in the front it is cut in a deep "U" that is both pretty and easy to get into and out of. There are patch pockets and a wide belt.

The little guimpe should be made of voile or batiste and it won't be a bad idea to make one with long sleeves, and maybe two with the pretty short ones. The guimpe is slashed down from the neck in the front and the slashed edges and the neck are bound. The short sleeves are pretty, being finished with several shirrings above the hem—making a pretty frill.

An elastic is run through a hem at the bottom of the blouse.

Pattern No. 2389 is for a pretty jumper dress, made to be worn with a separate blouse or guimpe. If one has three or four pretty blouses and one of these jumper dresses to wear with them, the combination will be most useful and smart looking as well. This dress is cut in two pieces—front and back—and each side of the front of the skirt there are insets—and these would be pretty cut from a contrasting color. Patch pockets are set on at the top of these insets and bound or finished with a piping across the top. The same finish should be used on all the waist edges.

The blouse opens down the front, and at the neck the fronts are underfaced and rolled with convertible collar. The sleeves are gathered and set into wristbands, and through the hem around the bottom of the blouse an elastic is run. This will hold the blouse in place when fastened.

Real Love Letters

The Tribune will pay $1 for every love letter published. So, if you can write a good one, or if you have one in your private or family possession you would like to enter the contest, send it to Love Letter Editor, The Tribune, Chicago. As no letters will be returned send copies of the ones you wish to keep.

THROUGH THE VOID.

The following is a copy of a real love letter written by a broken hearted man of 34 years on the death of his bride of 17 years, to whom he was passionately devoted:

DEAREST: "But the moon never beams without bringing me dreams of my darling, my darling, my life and my bride." Dear little child wife, the dreaded realization that you are gone is beginning to fall upon me like the pall of everlasting night. My aching heart calls out for you in the hours of night, but you do not hear earthly voices now. Who is there now that will care as you cared, will love as you loved, or will smile as you smiled, when I told you I loved you—or the story the love light in your eyes told when I tried to tell myself that you were but a child and I had no right to take you for my own. Your eyes told me love knew no age differences.

My heart tells me now that God will not separate us for long. I feel in time He will say He is ready for me to come to you. The light in the fire before which we sat so often burns low. You are not gone; before me your dear form stands as of old. You tell me not to mourn; that you would now be supremely happy if I were only there. Now you hold out your hands to me and plead with me to leave this dreary existence and come to you. I must not keep you waiting, loved one, but God knows best, and He will call me soon. My darling June, I am again alone. You have gone from our fire but never from my heart.

Your Heartbroken JACK.

ISN'T IT ODD?

By William Atherton Du Puy

ISN'T it odd that all the barnyard chickens in the world should have descended from one wild breed, the jungle hen of India? Yet it is a fact that this wild chicken, looking for all the world like our bantam of today, still struts, scratches, and crows in the Indian forests just as its children do about the chicken houses of all the world. There is no other bird on earth that has comb, wattles, voice, habits like it.

Most of the domestic animals were tamed before written history began. They came down to us from our barbarian ancestors. The chicken is one of the newest of the domestications. The Greeks, after they had learned to write, mentioned its introduction. They called it "the Persian bird." It came out of the east. The Chinese mentioned it much earlier. They said it came out of the west, which is India.

There is no doubt that the chicken was tamed in India and spread both ways.

It is interesting to trace the differences that have resulted from its centuries of life among orientals and occidentals. Here in the United States the chickens of the Mediterranean and of China have met. They can be compared in any market.

The most typical Mediterranean type is the brown leghorn. It is a small, active chicken given to the laying of many eggs. The Mediterranean peoples have thought more of the egg than of the chicken as a flesh producer. They have bred for eggs. The leghorn is the champion layer of the world.

Sixty or seventy years ago vessels from the orient began to bring to America those huge fowls that came to be known by such names as Brahmas and Shanghais. From these introductions breeds were established. They were not great egg layers, but were incomparable as meat producers. Also, they were clumsy, required more feeding, would starve to death where the active Mediterranean would thrive.

These birds of a common parentage had traveled east and west from the jungle of their origin, had lived for thousands of years under varying influences, had become specialized types. Finally they had met in a new land on the other side of the earth, there to compete with each other, there to merge into new breeds that sought to combine the virtues of each.

Bright Sayings of Children

The Tribune will pay $1 for each childish saying printed. The story told must never have been printed in any magazine or paper. It is not possible to acknowledge or return unavailable contributions. Write on one side of the paper. Address bright sayings to Aunty Bee, The Tribune, Chicago.

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

I had told Bobby I would punish him if he went into more puddles.

I happened to look out the window next day and saw a bedraggled Bobby coming from the side puddle. As he came near the door he looked ruefully at his muddy clothes and dragged himself in. I looked at him but did not say a word. He registered surprise. I kept on with my work and he walked around me. Still I said nothing.

Finally he said: "O, well, start, mother, and let's get our troubles over. I know I'se in for it." C. R.

Jimmy found it hard to get up in the morning. He would stretch and stretch. One morning his mother got quite out of patience with him.

"Come, don't be so slow. You must get up at once."

"O, but, muzzer, I'se dot to stwetch my limbers first." M. C.

My nephew, while at my home for the week end, was having his hands and face washed by his mother on Saturday morning.

She must have started to wash his neck when he cried, "Don't wash my neck today, mother, I'm not going to school." E. K.

Every time Ted was sent out freshly bathed and dressed he returned filthy and covered with an assortment of bumps and bruises.

"Ted," his mother asked him one day, "how does it happen that you always get these injuries right after I've cleaned you up so nice?"

"'Cause," Ted replied, triumphantly, "when you take all the dirt off, you take off all my perfection, too." R. M.

Billie returned home after spending a trying day with his older cousin Phil.

Daddy asked him if he had a good time.

He replied, "I don't think I'll ever get lonesome to see him again." C. J. M.

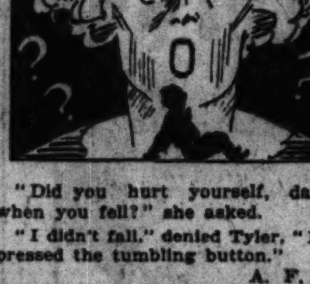
There is a little boy in our block who lives quite a distance from his school, so when I happen to see him on my way down town I pick him up and get him there in a jiffy.

One morning when I picked him up he was all out of breath with hurrying, and as he climbed in he remarked, "Gee, I'm glad for a ride 'cause I was 'fraid my legs would make me late." J. A. O.

The twins had heard their father say the neighbors were total strangers. The next day they went to call and announced: "We is the twins. Now you know us, we hopes you don't feel lonesome no more." C. R.

Jacqueline Sue moved into the neighborhood, and Billy could neither remember nor pronounce her name, so one day he said to her, "Couldn't your mother think of a single other name?" J. W.

It was always difficult for Tyler to admit anything just happened to him. One day he fell off the sofa. Auntie sprang toward him.



"Did you hurt yourself, darling, when you fell?" she asked.

"I didn't fall," denied Tyler, "I just pressed the tumbling button." A. F. M.

You just KNOW they're Well
You, too, can have this vigorous, robust, healthy perfection
You just know they're NOT Well
There is no reason for you to look or feel this way

CONSTIPATION means PREMATURE OLD AGE

Inflammation, abscess, gangrene, appendicitis, autointoxication, numberless deadly diseases and shortened life, all come from constipation. Fasting is injurious. Food is an aid to bowel action. Cathartic pills, "salts," mineral waters and a long list of "drugs" are decidedly bad and an aggravation. Allowing the bowels to become clogged is worse.

Dr. Caldwell's
SYRUP PEPSIN
The Family Laxative

—promptly relieves constipation. It is different from pills or purgatives. It does not gripe, pain or purge. It acts easily in a natural way, just as Dr. Caldwell intended when he prescribed it years ago. For 30 years it has relieved America's suffering. A liquid combination of Egyptian senna, pepsin and pleasing aromatics. One dose relieves and as Nature asserts its action the doses may be gradually decreased.

WHEN CONSTIPATED TAKE
DR. CALDWELL'S SYRUP PEPSIN

Pleasant To Take
Gently Compels Health

Last year 10,000,000 bottles were used, which shows people recognize its value. As effective for babies as old people, for adults as children. Syrup Pepsin quickly brings relief to the most severe cases of constipation and the doses may be gradually reduced.

It is sold everywhere medicine is sold—and guaranteed. Try it at our risk. Your druggist will return your money if it fails to do as promised.

FASHIONS IN SUN ROOMS.

SUCH fascinating sets of furniture—intricate weaves of reed and beguiling color combinations—are being shown now, that we can hardly wait for the warm days to come when we may open wide all of the windows of our sun porches in joyous greeting to summer time. Even though we can't use them just at present, we may begin to plan how to make them most inviting, and have them quite in readiness when those happy days will actually be here.

Reed furniture is singularly suitable for use in sunrooms. This season, glossy enameled sets seem to find greatest favor. These are being shown in a wide variety of colors, to fit in with any decorative scheme.

Particularly lovely is a sunroom which is being created by an eastern decorator. The walls and floor are Caën stone, laid up in an irregular pattern, with cream colored mortar. There are ecru gauze glass curtains and lambrequins of velvet in wide stripes of fuchsia and peacock blue, with narrow ones in shades of ecru and hairlines of black. Draperies which hang at the ends of each group of windows are of heavy, burgundy taffeta, lined with ecru sateen. On the floor there is a lustrous black chenille rug. Furniture is natural reed, finished with high gloss and edged with a woven trim in fuchsia, peacock blue, and black. Boxed cushions of velvet, matching the lambrequins and piped in black, are fitted to the davenport and large, comfortable armchairs. There are natural colored parchment shades on the lamps.

Copper color finds favor in another striking room. The reed furniture is done in a copper finish. In contrast to this are cushions of jade green and black damask. Lemon yellow china silk curtains are hung from copper rods by means of small, jade green rings, so that they may be drawn back and forth across the windows as desired.

An ivory set, with Indian red trims, has cushions of cretonne. The design, in Indian red, greens, mauve, gold black, and white, is backgrounded against an almond tan foundation. This same goods is used for draperies at the windows, over gold colored voile glass curtains. The furniture is comfortably arranged. There is an end table beside a luxurious chaise longue. A cunning little desk with its accompanying chair is placed before one group of windows. Drawn up close to the end of the davenport is a delightful tea wagon, supporting a decorative set of old English china.

Designed for some one who wants to procure an unusual effect is a bright scarlet set, trimmed in black. Walls in this room are a light French gray, and woodwork is olive green. Casement curtains are made of white calico, with tiny black polka dots and are finished with red glazed chintz ruchings. Black leather piped with olive green, is used for the boxed cushions. Accessory cushions are of black taffeta piped with red. There are black fur rugs on the floor.

Woven in an interesting new pattern of small squares is a set in sand color, with border trims in alternating blue and green squares. This square meshed weaving produces a most pleasing effect. Cushions made especially for this set are of hand blocked linen in blue, green, and mauve, on an ivory ground Mauve voile glass curtains throw a soft light over the room. The hems and borders of these are trimmed with worsted stitching, in blue and green forming squares to correspond with those woven in the furniture.

Soft, artichoke green has been chosen for the reed furniture in a pleasant, upstairs sunroom. The pieces are trimmed with a deeper shade of green, and gold. Fitted lambrequins at each group of windows are made of reed, about five and a half inches deep. They match the furniture. This is a novel effect which has just been put on the market. These lambrequins may be ordered to go with any set of reed furniture, making the window treatment and room's furnishings quite united. From beneath the reed lambrequins, in this particular room, hang curtains of soft, gold colored silk gauze Draperies, as well as boxed cushions, are of striped sunfast, in green, gold black, and gray. There is a boxed cover of the same for the day bed. Altogether, this makes a most agreeable, cool sun room.

Decidedly Spanish in its color effect is a room in which a glossy black set is used. Cushions are of heavy red sateen, piped in black. Buttercup yellow casement silk is used for draw curtains at the windows. There are natural parchment shades, banded in black and red, with a fine line of leaf green. A fiber rug shows large alternating squares of black and ecru.

In the room illustrated today all of the woodwork is painted leaf green, including the low bookshelves. The cost of having bookshelves of this sort made is little, and they do add a great deal, both to the comfort and decorative quality of a room. The walls are calcimined a light, pearl gray, and the furniture is French gray, with trims of rose. Flowered chintz, with rose the predominating color, is used for upholstery, and cushions. There is a mulberry rug. Deep rose colored sunfast, ruffled in silver gray, curtains the windows.

For a sunroom adjoining a bedroom there is a set in ivory with turquoise green trims. The walls are light ecru and the woodwork old ivory. A tobacco brown rug is used. Boxed cushions on the kidney shaped davenport, chaise longue, and chairs are of light caramel brown taffeta. There are ecru gauze glass curtains and draperies of coral taffeta, banded in turquoise green. A coral colored desk set decorates the open desk. Lamp shades are of ecru georgette over coral silk, finished in turquoise. The whole thing is as delightfully dainty as the adjoining bedroom.

A FRIEND IN NEED

by Sally Joy Brown

I want to be the medium through which the friend in deed and the friend in need may be brought together. It may be you have some discarded article which has not outgrown its usefulness that will make some less fortunate one happy and you would gladly give if it you knew how to go about it. Write to me and I shall happy to be of service to you. Please write on one side of the paper.

When information is wanted by mail, a stamped, addressed envelop should accompany the request. Please do not send article to The Tribune but write for the address of the applicant and send direct.

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

THE CALL OF SPRING.

WHEN the warm weather of last week brought out the green grass and we saw the birds returning to the trees, we knew spring was here at last. Spring means gardening and housecleaning. And it also brings a wonderful opportunity to help others—perhaps our best chance of the entire year.

Undoubtedly you've been checking over your home right now in preparation either for moving or spring housecleaning, and you've found a lot of things you propose to discard. In all of them you have a world of power to do good for others—simply by letting me place them, instead of throwing them away.

In furniture, for example, how many homes there are, where one or more articles of furniture in good condition will be discarded, to make room for something better! Rugs, chairs, beds, draperies, curtains—thousands of such articles are being discarded in Chicago this spring, and every one would be a godsend to some poor family. And then there's clothing. The need for clothing is immense this year—and there are few families in comfortable circumstances which are not discarding some clothing for grownups or children that still is good for lots of service.

And many an article, too, will help to brighten life for invalids and shut-ins. Old books and magazines, phonographs and records, crochet books, cuttings of cloth for making quilts—many a shut-in will spend happy days or weeks if you will give such articles.

One way or another, we'll all have articles to give this spring—and I can place every article where it will do more good than you can imagine. So think over what you'll have—remember the need—and let me know tomorrow what you'll give!

Asks for Greek History.

"I am desirous of obtaining an old Greek history, or any books which contain pictures concerning Homer's 'Iliad' and 'Odyssey.' I will gladly pay the postage on any such books.
"M. J. B."

Through the ages these epics have held their fascination and retained their appeael undiminished. Can some one held our friend to satisfy her desire by offering an extra copy?

Illness Their Handicap.

"My husband has been ill for nearly fourteen months, and is in the hospital at the present time. I am not strong and am unable to work more than a few hours a day. We have two girls, 8 and 10 years old. I wonder if any of your readers can donate some clothing or makeovers for them? I am handy at sewing and can cut down anything that is too big for them. Perhaps I can help someone else through your column someday. MRS. E. U."

We hope some of you can send some clothing to this mother. She has had a struggle to make ends meet, and your kindness will help her considerably.

Offer of Notebooks.

"I have a number of loose leaf notebooks of different sizes to give to some one who wants them. They are just the thing for boys or girls in school.
"M. S."

Do you want one of these notebooks? They are practically new and in excellent condition.

China Paints to Give.

"I have nearly twenty bottles of assorted dry colors for use in china painting, which I will be glad to give to any one who cares to pay the postage.
"A. V."

This is an unusual offer and one that will certainly bring real pleasure to the recipient of the gift.

Would Appreciate Anything.

"The kindness you showed in sending me clothing for the baby is not forgotten, although the baby was born dead and they are not in use. I am coming to your wonderful column again for clothing for the rest of us. My husband wears size 40, and his clothes are so shabby that he cannot find work. The little girls, 5 and 4 years and 10 months, need everything, and I wear size 38. We will appreciate any kind of help you have to give, for it is not clothing alone but everything that we need. MRS. G. W."

Not clothing alone, but everything is needed! If everything is needed, surely you can give something.

Radio Would Help.

"May we ask for a radio for a family? The husband has been a victim of tuberculosis for over a year. During that time he has not been able to work and the doctors do not give much encouragement for his recovery. The wife goes out to work each day leaving her husband at home alone. This old couple has no recreation whatsoever, and would appreciate something that would help them pass the time happily. M. D. Y.

Can't you see how much the gift of a radio would mean here? Something to help the husband forget, during the long day hours that are now so silent, something to relax the wife when she comes home from her day of work?

Offers Law Course.

"I have an almost complete set of Sprague's Correspondence School of Law course, and wonder if any of your readers would care to have it. I shall be glad to send to the one interested.
"B. Q."

This is a fine opportunity for some student of law or for any one who is interested to learn and know about lawmaking and enforcement.

Doris Blake's Answers TO LOVE PROBLEMS

Show Friendly Spirit.

"Dear Miss Blake: Not long ago a young fellow worked across the street from my home. I saw him quite often and whenever I did, he always told me how much he cared for me and was always making appointments. Since then he has left this place to work some place else. Now when I pass him on the street, or if I see him in a show, he won't recognize me. When he passes me he puts his head down or turns away. I cannot understand this. When he meets girl friends of mine he tells them I deserted him. But I haven't. He has the idea I deserted him because I never ran after him. I always treated him coolly. Will you please tell me why he doesn't recognize me? CONSTANT READER."

You cannot expect the young man to keep running after you, dear, if you do not offer him any encouragement. Your coolness made him feel his attentions were not desired. It is not necessary that you run after the boys, but you must show a friendly spirit if you wish to make and keep friends. The popular girls are those who are amiable, dear.

Hide Your Feelings.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a young lady, 21, and have gone out several times with a young man, 28. He seems as though he cares for me and I also have taken a liking to him. But certain times he does things to make me sore. I work with the lad and he often passes remarks to me that he is going to take my girl friend out just in order to get me jealous. Please give me your advice. DIMPLES."

If you did not let him see that his teasing bothered you he would not continue it, I am sure. It is because he can get a "rise" out of you that he enjoys doing it, Dimples. Don't you think you could learn to hide your feelings a little better? Next time he suggests taking your friend out, tell him you admire his taste, and sing her praises to him.

VEGEX

RICHEST KNOWN FOOD IN VITAMIN B
Indispensable to Normal Nutrition at all Ages

VEGEX
VITAMIN YEAST

Vitamins— A Life Necessity

Life could not go on without vitamins. They are the driving force which vitalizes foods. Without them, foods are so much roughage,—de-vitalized and inert, their nourishing qualities dormant, but ready to be energized by the vitamin sparks.

The newer knowledge of nutrition demonstrates that there are three vitamins of great importance—A, B and C. You get the A Vitamin in milk, butter, cod-liver oil. The C Vitamin is abundant in the juice of citrus fruits. The valuable Vitamin B is the one most frequently lost in the food path between the field and your table. It is left at the mill, discarded in the hulling and polishing process and destroyed in the refining plant.

VEGEX

is the richest known source of Vitamin B. Concentrated from grain-grown yeast, it retains the Vitamin B to enrich the diet of young and old. In addition, VEGEX gives to nutrition assimilable iron and iodine.

The taste is delicious—the benefits to proper nutrition are sure—try VEGEX as directed and make it a staple food of your dietary.

Reflections on Journalism

By H. L. Mencken.

WHEN I was a young reporter, in the declining years of the last century, the only existing textbook of journalism that had any practical value was the "Steps Into Journalism" of Edwin L. Shuman, then literary editor of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE. The more ancient journalists of the time disdained it, as they did, indeed, all other books. But we younger fellows gave it hard study, and took to heart its doctrine, and presently the sniffish ancients were working for us.

H. L. MENCKEN.
[Edward Thayer Monroe Photo.]

Today the ambitious novice has a whole shelf of books to aid him—nay, almost a library. There are at least a dozen general textbooks as good as Shuman's, and four or five that are vastly better. In addition, there are scores of treatises on definite branches of the craft: editorial writing, copy reading, making up, the work of the city editor, and so on; and useful handbooks of such auxiliary sciences as photo engraving and the law of libel. Many such books, of course, are hack jobs, done by blowsy pedagogues. But among them are also some extremely competent volumes by first rate newspaper men, and the youngster who gives a diligent year to them will emerge with far more sound and useful professional knowledge than his predecessor of the last generation could get out of five years in a city room.

The old time city room, in truth, was a poor school, and I say so with melancholy who graduated from it and still look back upon it with great affection. It was full of pleasant fellows, but the majority of them were bad journalists, for what they mistook for professional knowledge was simply a huge accumulation of useless facts. They had the minds of railway mail clerks. To the fundamental problems of their craft they apparently gave no thought; or, if they did, it was furtively and diffidently. Such grave questions were for editorial writers, managing editors, business managers, owners, and other such superior fauna. Thus there was little professional spirit in the city room, despite its exalted esprit de corps. The boys were not like fellow doctors or fellow lawyers; they were more like fellow Elks.

Reporter Changes for the Better.

I believe that the new schools of journalism have changed all that. Many of them, to be sure, are still in a primitive stage, and some are still staffed by obvious incompetents, but in the best of them there are very good teachers, and these teachers are turning out graduates with a lively sense of the essential dignity of journalism, and a determination to safeguard it, as far as possible, in their practice of it. For a while, perhaps, they will have hard sledding, for old timers still reign in most American newspaper offices, and of all bunkers there is none more bunkerous than the ancient journalist. But soon or later the youngsters will get on top. When they do so there will be an immense improvement in American journalism.

Already, indeed, the signs of it are visible. It runs in

THE CAST.

Mildred	Claire Windsor
Lyman	William Haines
James	Edward Connelly
Dorothy	Lucille Ricksen
Bob	Robert Agnew
Rena	Emily Fitzroy

Arthur	Bert Roach

By Mae Tinee.

GOOD MORNING!

This picture should prove a good little dose of spring medicine for some parents. It's a bit of light on the subject of why some children leave home—or want to—or OUGHT to want to.

Any observing child will tell you that there are parents and parents. There are one's own parents, who are what the Lord hath given unto one. Then there are the parents of the girl next door, who don't seem to pay much attention to her. Anyway, she doesn't go to the nicest sort of parties and somebody's always saying something or other about her.

CLAIRE WINDSOR
playing the stellar rôle in "The Denial."

There's a big family around the corner and all of them seem to have a peach of a time together. The boy across the street and his mother are awfully good pals.

One does feel sorry, however, for Mildred and her brother. Mrs. Huckins IS such a grouch! Mildred just can't call her soul her own, and her brother has to lie and say he's going to temperance meeting in order to have an hour or so with the boys. Mr. Huckins is nice—but browbeaten. Poor Mildred!

Words That Make Mother Remember.

Claire Windsor is the poor Mildred of the story. She plays the parts of a woman of forty-five and of the girl that woman once was.

When you meet her, she is grave, gray, and charming—and most determined that her daughter shall not marry the boy she loves.

"I cannot give my consent," she says.

The girl goes away like a whirlwind, but the dust of her parting words settles heavily over the mother's mind: "How would you have felt if YOUR mother had refused to let YOU marry the man YOU loved!"

Mildred leans a weary head against the back of her chair, and with closed eyes thinks back over the past—"If YOUR mother had——"

Her mother HAD!

Had, by her domineering, made home the unhappiest place in the world for herself, her brother, and her father.

Had driven the boy into evil ways and caused the father to end his life.

Orchestra Ends Its 34th Season

By Edward Moore.

AFTER this week is over, and until next October, Friday afternoons and Saturday nights will be, though regretfully, devoted to other uses than listening to orchestral music. For Mr. Stock and the Chicago Symphony orchestra will then conclude the thirty-fourth season of concerts as far as Chicago is concerned. They themselves have a spring tour and an Evanston festival still to contemplate, but those are events with which Orchestra hall is not concerned.

FREDERICK STOCK,
Conductor of Chicago Symphony orchestra.
[De Gueldre Photo.]

It has been a fairly eventful season, with plenty of Beethoven, lots of Brahms, considerable Tschaikowsky, and a large quantity of Wagner as a foundation, and probably more new music than any other orchestra in the country has played for a superstructure. Not that every novelty in Mr. Stock's possession by a considerable number has been brought out. There are tales of how for hours at a time the orchestra has tried over new music in rehearsals, only to find it advisable, like Paolo and Francesca, in that book to read no more that day or any other day.

Still, there have been some exciting times among the novelties, and the most exciting were those concerned with the name of Igor Stravinsky. Mr. Stock conducted "The Rite of Spring" in the concerts of Nov. 7 and 8, Stravinsky himself came to direct four of his own works Feb. 20 and 21, and the fluttering in the dove cotes has hardly died down yet. That it should have stirred up so much discussion, that it should have been the cause of so much active dislike, is a fairly certain sign that it had something, as we say in our set.

People have been proving ever since by logic, invective, and long division that Stravinsky's music was not music at all, merely a clever and somewhat unfair assault on the nerves. But at the end of the season one is likely to forget the arguments and remember the immensely stimulating effect of its performances. In fact, the chief effect of the arguments has been to provoke a mild wonder as to just what reactions people get out of listening to music.

Talk of a Stock Scholarship.

One of the by-products of the season has been some conversation regarding a scholarship in commemoration of Mr. Stock's twenty years' service as conductor, the idea being the annual selection of some outstanding young musician, not necessarily confined to the same branch of the art, and his financial backing for further study or public appearance.

Mr. Stock regards the plan as a few months premature, since it will be next January before he has actually completed his twenty years of conducting. That, however, as he admits, is almost a technicality. His greatest desire is that some means can be worked out for the future of the orchestra's wood wind department. For this to function properly, a course of European study is essential. He would like to see some talented young American flutists, clarinetists, oboists, bassoonists given European training and then held in reserve for the orchestra for such times as their services become necessary. All of which confirms what has

NEW THEATER MARK OF GUILD SUCCESS

By Burns Mantle

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—With the help of Calvin Coolidge, who pushed a button in Washington as a signal for the curtain to rise, the Theater guild opened its new home in 52d street on Monday night.

They call it the Guild theater, and it is both the handsomest and most distinguished of the local houses; not as grand as the Century, nor as big as several, but of splendid lines and a different type of architecture.

HELEN HAYES
in revival of Shaw's "Cæsar and Cleopatra."
(Nickolas Muray Photo)

Entering at the street level, you descend a half floor to the foyer and coat rooms and the entrance to the orchestra floor. There are lounge rooms almost the size of the auditorium, and invitations in the program for everybody to get out between acts and mingle and smoke, which nearly everybody at a guild play does.

The first bill is a revival of Bernard Shaw's "Cæsar and Cleopatra." It has not been done here since Sir Johnstone and Gertrude Forbes-Robertson were playing their farewell tour in 1913. And by then Sir Johnstone was something past middle age and not a particularly convincing, though always an eloquent, Cæsar.

Now we have the stalwart Lionel Atwill playing the rôle, and doing it well. And young Helen Hayes, the chief of the saucy debutantes of the drama, is the kitten queen of the Nile at 16. She, too, is excellent. A little stage conscious, as usual, at first, and overanxious, but particularly good in the scene with her women and in the dinner scene following.

Great Progress in Six Years.

It is something to have achieved in six years—this fine theater and the reputation back of it. It was in December, 1910, that the guild was started, conversationally, and five months later before its first performance was given.

Three weeks later it had $19 left in its treasury and a load of leaden hearts under its rented costumes. Failure was grinning in the corner of the old Garrick.

But that night they played "John Ferguson," and the next day they were surprised not only to find nice laudatory accounts in the papers, but people actually buying seats at the box office. It has been comparatively easy since then. There have been more successes than failures, and now there are something like 15,000 subscribers to the guild and all its enterprises. Which is as certain a guarantee of success as anything can be these days.

Good American Comedy.

Two of the boys who write for the theater, Paul Dickey and Mann Page, have hit upon an excellent idea for an American comedy that should be pleasantly amusing and helpfully satirical. It is a little disappointing in performance, but the idea is still good. "The Back Slapper," they call the play.

You know the hero. It is just possible you are the hero. There are a lot like him. He's the lad who is a great little fellow downtown with the boys and something of a brute at home. Sometimes his name is Babbitt and occasionally it is Smith. And now and again it ends in a sky or an ing or a tie.

He is an oily villain. The tones are velvet over the

This Thing and That Thing of the Theater

By Frederick Donaghey.

SIX new plays last week, counting one with songs in it, and hardly a second thought to divide among the six. The one with songs was, in kind, easily the best of the six: that is, it was better than any of the others, each of its sort. That it was is not a reason for astonishment: its collaborating librettists are two literates of the theater in this country, using the stage as a medium for the sane, intelligent, babbittless fun that is in them, and learning as the seasons roll by more and more of the craft. The Messrs. Kaufman and Connelly haven't yet put through anything quite as neat as "The College Widow" or "Father and the Boys"; but they have done well in four years with the job George Ade used to work at. . . .

MISS EVELYNE HUME.
She's the Follies girl in "Milgrim's Progress."

A friend amiably described them to me, what time I was seeking to sell their "To the Ladies!" to reluctant Chicagoans, as "a pair of comic paragraphers who've wandered into the wrong stall"; and he was right from his especial angle. But they have ideas and a rich sense of fun; and the technique is but a matter of experience when brains are employed. I hope that one of these days they'll go back to the piece shown here briefly last season as "The Deep-Tangled Wildwood," restore its true title of "West of Pittsburgh," and put it into play form. . . . Meanwhile, I recommend their "Be Yourself!" If it were my property, I should long ere this have devised, purchased, or pilfered two or three tunes for it: then I should have something as vendible as "No! No, Nanette!" There's nothing the matter with the music of "Be Yourself!" save that it is just so much music of six-for-a-quarter quality. . . . I've told you how good Miss Smith is, and Mr. Donahue. She seems to possess about ten times the talent Miss Marilyn Miller is supposed to possess, and, in dancing, doesn't bother to start until Miss Miller is all through.

Some Lines About Mr. Arlen.

When he talked with me of plays other than "The Green Hat" and of actors other than those in it, Mr. Arlen revealed himself as a keen, grown-up critic of the theater. (So that I sha'n't be misunderstood, it is best to explain that he didn't talk at all about "The Green Hat," as a play, nor about its actors, save as he expressed an explicable delight with the Detroit in-take and an explicable curiosity as to what the gate would be in Chicago. In this respect, he is an admirable and stimulating playright.) . . . . He said that he was eager to write more plays, and that he was working on one for Cyril Maude, to be named "These Charming People," but not a dramatization of anything in the volume of like-named shorts. "It is just a title," he explained, "to reflect the vogue of the book without meaning anything: a title you could safely put on pretty much any social comedy. I mean this one to be just fluff, of a sort, and am sub-titling it 'A Comedy About Nothing at All.'"

Also, he thought that the little tale of the tea-room girl from Rugby and the stolen ring should be about right as the

Odds-and-Ends of Stage-News

You may recall a handsome and shapely singing-actress named Miss Texas Guinan, who for a time advertised herself as "God's masterpiece" in the exploitation of a reducing nostrum. Well, she is referred to in today's New-York Times as "the most talked-of figure in the night-life of New-York," where she has of late been the reigning divinity of a cabaret, the El Fey.

"Abie's Irish Rose" in New-York will soon pass the long-run record held by "Lightnin'," which is credited with three years and 1,291 performances there. The fourth year of the former piece will start May 23. . . . This run has been continuous: that of "Lightnin'" was interrupted for three weeks by the strike of the actors' union in 1919, although the missed performances were made up with extra matinées in the course of the run. With "Abie's Irish Rose" at the top and "Lightnin'" second in the record, "The Bat" ranks third and "The Gold-Diggers" fourth: this as to New-York. The world's long-run record belongs to "Chu Chin Chow," which ran five years in London.

Somebody has revived "Kismet" in London, which finds that the piece no longer contains a kick. . . . Oscar Asche, who had the rôle of the resourceful and vengeful beggar in the original run there, is said to be in a rage because he was not asked to resume it.

Bert and Betty Wheeler, who were here earlier in the season in the seventeenth Ziegfeld Follies, are to be the stars of a piece named "The Brown Derby."

Robert Loraine, who came from London early in the season and took part in the quick New-York failure of "Tiger-Cats" vis-à-vis with Miss Katharine Cornell, is eager to put on "Conscience" over there, and asks Miss Lillian Foster to join him for the play. She acted it in New-York, and was warmly praised by the reporters.

Miss Laurette Taylor is to take the second act of "Pierrot the Prodigal" into the two-a-day next week. . . . It is said that the Keith management has persuaded her to give a monologue before the pantomime and a speech after it; and this would indicate, among other things, that the Keith management doesn't believe that its clientèle will care much for "Pierrot the Prodigal."

Miss Maud Allan, who was the theme of entire pages in the Sunday supplements not so long ago because she danced in her bare feet, is still at it in London and Paris, where they manage to stand for a great deal of such stuff. . . . She is said to be eager to try the American two-a-day with a band of her pupils.

Irving Berlin is named as the composer of not fewer than three scores for next season: one for the four Marx Brothers, who are to pass under the management of himself and Sam H. Harris; one for Miss Grace Moore, now in the fourth Music-Box Revue; and one for the fifth Music-Box Revue. . . . Miss Moore, her managers think, is ready to be made into a star. So far as I know, she has not sung in Chicago.

Sidney Blackmer is to perform next season in a play named "The Carolinian," based on a novel by Rafael Sabatini. . . . The actor is now in "Quarantine," which has been running a long time in New-York, where he does most of his acting. I've caught him at some of it; and, so, I'm quite willing, if "Quarantine" be eventually brought hither, to have somebody else in his rôle. . . . Miss Helen Hayes, who had the principal woman's part in the comedy for a time, has been succeeded by Miss Vivian Martin.

"Another factor in appreciated value is that the boys have since had their show in New York, where, it is stated, the critics took to calling each Marx by his praenomen, so well did they like 'I'll Say She Is' and what takes place therein. George Jean Nathan, who credits himself with knowing more than there is to known about the Hungarian and Esthonian drama, wrote that the show was worth $10 a seat; and it isn't often that HE goes into figures. Whatever it may be worth in money, it is one of the two or three best entertainments housed in the Apollo in the four years since the spacious retreat was opened, etc., etc., etc."

This Thing and That Thing of the Theater

basic matter for the piece he plans to call "The Cavalier of the Streets," and that he described a film or two in some of the other material in "These Charming People." . . . Whatever you may think of the play he has made from "The Green Hat," Mr. Arlen has a lot of drama in him. "The Green Hat," as a novel, heaves with drama, although not in the pages that translate most easily for the theater. In "These Charming People" is a tale called, I think, "When the Nightingale Sang in Berkeley Square"; and that tale could be placed on the stage and acted virtually as written: an hour's work by an intelligent stage-director would be sufficient for such change as might be found necessary. I said so to him, and, saying it, provided him with nothing in the line of fresh information. "Yes," he replied: "I think it is just right for the stage; and I hope that your Miss Ina Claire will act in it." . . .

As to the play of "The Green Hat," there it is. I care not for it; and it is popular, with nightly takings far in excess of any other songless play in town. . . . And I shall ever hold it in fond memory because of the comic and the motley audience it drew to its first Chicago performance: one of those I-simply-must-be-there assemblages that give to many a play, good or bad, an impious push into destruction. The handicapping by the entr'acte bookmakers was six-to-one that not more than one in every ten present had read "The Green Hat," and one-to-three that not more than two in every seven had ever read or ever could read anything. But it behaved pretty well for a Sunday gala, with but one unkindness noted—that of the book-reviewing chap who said that Mr. Arlen looked like Ben Hecht.

Mezzo-Prezzo.

Most of the theater-going last week was by persons bent on seeing "The Student-Prince," "Rose-Marie," or Fred Stone's show. . . . Five of the theaters were cut-rating by the device of selling two seats for the box-office price of one if the buyer were in possession of the necessary card or slip.

An earlier reference to this shabby plan for filling a theater provoked uncounted letters of inquiry as to where such cards or slips might be obtained; and that, of course, is none of my business. My objection to the plan is that it isn't honest with respect for the man who in ignorance pays the box-office price for what somebody else gets for half. . . . But there comes to my desk a form sent out by the Sistaire Theater Club, whose avowed purpose is to enable its members to buy theater-seats "at a saving of twenty percent to fifty percent of regular box-office prices, according to attraction and theater listed." Membership in the "club" entails the payment of a fee of fifty cents for "registration." My guess is that this is a tentative undertaking to launch something like the cut-rate ticket-office operated in New-York by Mr. Le Blang, who is said to have made millions in buying blocks of tickets for weak attractions at a rate permitting him to turn a definite profit on selling them at half the box-office rate.

Two Novelties for Manhattan.

These are the new plays of the new week in New-York:

"Aloma of the South Seas," by John B. Hymer and Leroy Clemons, with incidental music by Robert Hood Bowers. Miss Vivienne Osbourne, George Gaul, Miss Anne Morrison, and Frank Thomas are in the cast. . . . Mr. Hymer was Samuel Shipman's co-author of "East Is West"; and he has for years been a performer of his own sketches in the varieties.

"Three Doors," by Edward E. Rose: the players are not named in the bulletin on the piece furnished to THE TRIBUNE. . . . Mr. Rose has had his name in many playbills as author, dramatist, and adapter in the last thirty years. His job when the century was new was to make plays out of best-sellers for the late Charles Frohman. He turned to the kind of melodrama liked in the low-price theaters in the ante-film days, and wrote a success in "The Rosary." A piece of his, "The Rear Car," was acted two years ago in the Cort by Taylor Holmes and Miss Edna Hibbard, and was pretty bad. "Three Doors" is said to be a make-over of something by Arthur G. Lamb, whose "The Amber Fluid" was staged here last year by the managers of the Playhouse.

And Mr. Rose has renamed "The Rear Car" "Great Scott!" and is to have it acted this week in Brooklyn, in the hope that it will be good enough for New-York.

Odds-and-Ends.

It is reliably reported that the advance-sale in London for "No! No, Nanette!" is $250,000. . . . The "libraries," as the ticket-agencies are called there, have been induced to make special efforts by the management's paying a commission as high as seven and a half percent on all advance-selling: the customary fee there is five percent.

Mr. Barrett, who operates the Central Theater, states that he is making ready to produce late next month a Negro show named "Melody Land," by Will Hendrickson and DeKoven Thompson.

Miss Edith King, Miss Isabel Lowe, Clarence Derwent, and Curtis Cooksey are to be in "Flames," by Thomas W. Broadhurst. . . . He desired to have the play known as "The Right of the Seigneur," but yielded to the argument that few persons would know just what a seigneur might be.

The dramatization of "The Constant Nymph" is to be made by the author, Miss Margaret Kennedy. . . . The present idea seems to be that Miss Helen Hayes will have the rôle of Tessa.

Luigi Pirandello, whose "Six Characters in Search of an Author" was a little-theater sort of success in New-York, thinks so well of a short American piece, "Another Way Out," that he is going to stage it in Italy. . . . This skit, written by Lawrence Langer, was acted in Chicago some years ago by the Washington-Square Players. And, quite recently, a gasping little-theater movement out in Rogers Park was put to death when a mother of the community rose in rage and forbade her ambitious daughter to take part in the piece, which I recall as bully fun.

George MacFarlane, the baritone, is the star of a piece named "Broke," by Miss Zelda Sears, who has written songs for Mitzi.

SHE PLAYS ONE-THIRD OF THE TITLE-PARTS

MISS LOUISE BROWN

SHE comes along tonight as the Sally of "Sally, Irene, and Mary": she has had that part since the piece was new, back in 1922; and that's about all The Tribune knows of Miss Louise Brown. . . . For that matter, The Tribune doesn't appear to know much of Eddie Dowling, whose principal aide Miss Brown is, save that he has been in the two-a-day, that "Sally, Irene, and Mary" was at first a sketch he used, and that he is, when home, the husband of Miss Ray Dooley, a gamine of Ziegfeld's Follies.

New Theater Mark of Guild Success

By Burns Mantle

phone. But when he speaks to his stenographer or his wife or one of the kids, it is as likely to sound like the snap of a terrier or the growl of a police dog as anything else. You know him.

In the play Bob is the life of the old grads. Out of college six or eight years, he still attends all the fraternity reunions and sings the old songs with a stein's successor on the table, and the gin just made. He is certain to make congress. Everybody says so. He may go to the senate. Possibly to the White House. He is that popular.

Bob marries the sweetest girl because she, too, wants to enjoy life. And she does. For one act. After that she is disillusioned. Bob is still the hail fellow often met to the politicians, always talking about the dear little wife and the sanctity of the home. But at home he is as ugly as sin, and when he has a week-end to spare he spends it with—you'd never guess—the Mrs. Kennedy who won the bathing beach beauty contest the summer before she was married. And he never would have been found out, either, if he had not forgotten where he heard the smoky story he told Mr. Kennedy, who had told it to the missus and made her promise never to repeat it.

However, found out he is, and freely exposed. First, his patient little wife turns and rends him at a dinner that might have brought him the senatorial nomination. And, second, Kennedy traces the smoky story to its source. Finally Mrs. Kennedy, who had hoped to go on thinking of him as a king and herself as his willing little slave, dismisses him with a sigh.

"What a heck of a king you turned out to be," she sneers, as she starts back for the beach contests.

It is, as I say, a better idea than it is a play. First cousin to "The Show-Off," its authors have written and molded it to an obvious and conventional form. It is rhetorical and artificial, but it still holds a good portion of its audiences and probably has better popular values than I suspect.

Harry C. Browne, who succeeded James Kirkwood in "The Fool," is the bombastic one. Mary Fowler plays the wife and Lee Patrick amusingly overdoes the undulating dumb thing who wins the bathing beauty prize and stirs the national babbittry to its foundations.

"Ruint" Lacks Appeal.

Hatcher Hughes, who won last year's Pulitzer prize with "Hell-Bent for Heaven," is the author of another drama of the North Carolina mountains called "Ruint"—after the heroine.

"Ruint" is not as good as the prize winning play. As well written, even more flavorous as to dialect and characterization, but slow-paced and a little padded, it seemed to me, once the novelty and the quaintness had disappeared.

Prof. Hughes wrote it, he says, from notes made on several of his vacations spent in the south, when he frankly dresses like a native and tries to fool the folks into accepting him. He thought it might be interesting, he writes—smiling as he writes—and instructive as well "to present a benighted people as nearly as possible from their own benighted point of view."

His story is of a college man who is trying to establish a mission school in the Blue Ridge. He is a bit of a saphead for all his learning and worthy impulses, and dresses the part with gay sweaters and knickers and, I suspect, perfumed kerchiefs up his sleeve.

One day he is observed to turn from the main road into a patch of laurel with the pretty daughter of a respected mountaineer with whom he is walking home from school, and when the matter is reported to the girl's father he immediately takes down the old gun and calls out the dogs. His girl has been "ruint," there can be no doubt of that, and a lynching is the only thing that will even matters.

The mountain men catch the northern varmint finally, but when he tries to laugh off their charges they shut him up. Even the girl refuses to establish the innocence of their friendship. He had kissed her, and if the kisses weren't serious to him they were to her. And if he never intended marriage he doesn't deserve to live.

They don't lynch him, but at the play's end they have tarred and feathered him and are riding him on a rail. A sardonic comedy, with laughter enough, but lacking appeal in its drama.

Old and New.

We are suffering from a spring rush of drama. It started the Saturday before Easter with a revival of "The Mikado" and the showing of "The Back Slapper." It continued Monday with the revival of Cyril Maude's "Aren't We All?" and the production of six other plays—Cyril coming in from the road to fill in a gap at the Globe and, presumably, to say farewells to Broadway.

As to the farewells, however, the actor is still a little in doubt. He may retire and live quietly in England, as he swore a month back he intends to do. But most of us are wagering he will not. They have to be very old and very tired to retire. And Maude is neither.

Nine plays there were these two days, and as I write there are four to follow before the week is ended. Adding these to the 175 productions from August to April, and accepting the average that has prevailed since statistics were invented, it means that this particular theater season will show something like 220 plays as a ten month output in New York.

And that, if it means anything—which it does not, really—will be a record, being twenty or thirty more than customary, and fifty more than we could do with, comfortably.

"The Mikado" is another of the Shubert tributes to the memory of Gilbert and Sullivan and the profits they have earned. The cast is half veteran and half new. William Danforth, saucer-eyed and sibilant, is again the comic ruler. Marguerite Namara, wife of Guy Bolton, playwright, and the independent sort of prima donna who sings only when the rôle attracts her, is the Yum Yum.

Lupino Lane, the current representative of the acrobatic Lanes, who have been on the English stage ever since Drury Lane, was diminutive Kocko and the robust Stanley Forde, the Pooh-Bah—considerably more bah than pooh, vocally, but competent. Tom Burke is the tenor.

It is an even and generally entertaining revival, well staged, well sung, directed by Milton Aborn, and led by Alfred Goodman with a fine orchestra to work with.

[Copyright: 1925: By The Chicago Tribune.]

SHE ASSISTS

MISS NELLIE STRONG

She is the player of the incidental part of the Countess Leyden in the Chicago performances of "The Student-Prince"; and, while the rôle isn't a big one, Miss Strong (who's from England) makes her due contribution to the spectacle of Act III.

New Playbills

What Is Due in the Chicago Theaters as Far Ahead as the Managers Know or Care to Tell About.

OPENING TONIGHT:

Eddie Dowling in "Sally, Irene, and Mary" in the Garrick.—The song-play shown early last season in the Great Northern, but without Mr. Dowling, one of the authors: it has been told many times by those who may be presumed to know that the piece depends on his being in the principal rôle of the sentimental plumber. At any rate, it ran through months on end in New-York with him in the part. . . . Miss Louise Brown, who also took part in that run, is to be in the cast.

OPENING NEXT SUNDAY:

"Bringing Up Father" in the Olympic.—A stage-version by Richard F. Carroll and others of the characters in George McManus' like-named "strip" in the Hearst papers. . . . THE TRIBUNE is uninformed as to the identity of the players.

OPENING MAY 31:

"Artists and Models" in the Apollo.—Second issue of the revue originated by the society of illustrators and painters, as made over for the professional stage by the Messrs. Shubert.

Orchestra Ends Its 34th Season

By Edward Moore.

been noticed about Mr. Stock before—that he is not looking to the orchestra's next season, but five and ten years ahead.

For the final concerts he sends word of the March from Beethoven's "The Ruins of Athens," Brahms' First Symphony, the love scene from the second act and the love death from the third act of Wagner's "Tristan and Isolde," his own arrangement of Schumann's "Abendlied," and Tschaikowsky's Overture, "The Year 1812."

There will also be a final popular concert on Thursday night. Here the scheduled works are the Prelude to the third act of Spinelli's "A Basso Porto," Tschaikowsky's Fifth Symphony, the Overture to D'Albert's "Der Improvisator," Glazounow's Suite, "Ruses d'Amour," Järnefelt's Praeludium and Berceuse, and Elgar's "Pomp and Circumstance."

An Interesting Organization.

The Marshall Field & Co. Choral society, as interesting an organization of its kind as is in Chicago, will give its nineteenth annual concert at Orchestra hall on Wednesday night. Instead of a long work, the program this time is intended to be of short pieces of popular character, choruses by Beethoven, Handel, Sullivan, and Wagner, and the cantata, "Everyman," by H. Walford Davies.

The society had its beginning many years ago, when the baseball team of the company needed money to buy uniforms. A quartet of young men gave a concert to help along the cause, and a short time later the chorus was formally organized with 200 voices.

These singers are distinctly not professional musicians; they are business people, many of them the men and women who wait on the public from behind a merchandise counter. But their conductor, Thomas A. Pape, has wrought them into a supple, adroit, and powerful organization. They have amateur standing, but they meet professional tests.

The soloists will be Lois Johnston soprano; Edna Swanson Ver Haar, contralto; Arthur Kraft, tenor, and Carl Rollins, baritone. Fifty-five members of the Chicago Symphony orchestra and Allen W. Bogen, organist, will play the instrumental scores.

With the Melody Makers.

John McCormack sends word that his recital at Orchestra hall this afternoon will begin promptly at three o'clock. There are two reasons why the hour is emphasized: one, that Mr. McCormack will be obliged to take the train immediately at the end of the performance for his next assignment; the other, that being a request program, it will probably be a long one. Requests for over 100 different songs have been sent in, considerably more than he will be able to sing, but the program will be made up of those which have received the greatest number of votes.

Announcement from the Chicago Nurses' club where ticket sales have been conducted for the Chaliapin farewell concert tonight at the Auditorium indicate that a well filled house will mark the last appearance of the great Russian for the season. The occasion has been made a gala one for two reasons: The concert is to benefit the Nurses' club, where the proceeds will go to supply new equipment and extend the club's service to thousands of Chicago nurses; and the fact that Chaliapin has announced that he is not to return to Chicago in opera next season has called together the Russian artists in the city to offer him a ceremonious farewell. Practically all the boxes in the Auditorium have been sold for some weeks in advance, and the list of box and seat holders is an impressive one. Chicago medical men of prominence will attend in groups representing the various hospital staffs throughout the city.

The male chorus of the Central Trust company is the oldest organization of its kind among the banks of Chicago. Since it was formed in the spring of 1921, it has been under pledge to give one concert a month for churches, charitable organizations, and hospitals. Three concerts have been given for the soldiers in Maywood hospital and as many for the Addison Industrial school. The chorus also has sung at the hospital at Great Lakes and at churches in Evanston, Berwyn, Glencoe, Park Ridge, and other suburbs, as well as in the city. On Thursday evening the chorus will give a concert at the Hyde Park Methodist Episcopal church. Miriam E. Davis, soprano, will be the soloist.

Eleanora de Cisneros, contralto, also one of the Chicago Opera company's original members, is now singing at La Scala, Milan.

Vladimir de Pachmann is finishing up a few odds and ends of recitals in the east and preparing to set sail for Europe, which he says is his farewell for all time. He is now 77 years old and during the last two seasons has filled 112 concert engagements. He will sail for London May 16 and promptly give another recital there.

From the Danish consulate of this city comes the information that a Danish music week is to be held at the Royal Opera house of Copenhagen, Denmark, the first part of next month. It will be under the auspices of a special committee of Danish musicians, and will consist of a series of the best and most characteristic scenic productions, operas, operas comiques, and ballets, by such composers as I. P. E. Hartmann, Niels W. Gade, Peter Heise, P. E. Lange-Müller, Carl Nielsen, August Enna, Fini Henriques, and Hakon Boerresen. The king and queen of Denmark are named as high patrons, with the Danish secretary of state, the secretary of education, and the mayor of Copenhagen as honorary presidents of the committee.

Armand Crabbé, one of the good baritones in the early days of the Chicago Opera, turned up in New York the other day and sang at the Paulist church with the Rev. William F. Finn at the organ. It was in fulfillment of a vow to sing first in a church after his return from a tour of South America and Mexico. Before coming here Crabbé was a member of Oscar Hammerstein's Manhattan Opera company, and was a member of the first American cast of "Pelleas and Melisande," with Mary Garden as Melisande and Cleofonte Campanini as conductor. He and they were also in the first Chicago performances.

CONTRALTO SOLOIST

EDNA SWANSON VER HAAR.

[Newman Photo.]

She will be one of the soloists when the Marshall Field & Co. Choral society gives its nineteenth annual concert on Wednesday night at Orchestra hall under the direction of Thomas A. Pape. She is a Chicagoan and, more important, a good singer.

EXPERT

MISS GEORGIA CAINE

She's of the patriciate in the song-plays, knowing what to do with the rôles entrusted to her, and doing it as well and as easily now, when acting dowagers, matrons, and mellow widows, as back in the days when she was the princeling in "Wang," the siren in "Lost, Strayed, or Stolen," or the girl who sang "Won't You Buy a Paper?" in "The Rich Mr. Hoggenheimer." . . . Miss Caine is now in "Be Yourself!"—a good show which is all the better through having her in it.

STAGE-NEWS

Somebody has made over Wedekind's "Erdgeist" for the American stage and named it "The Loves of Lulu." . . . Miss Margot Kelly, here not long since with Miss Ethel Barrymore in "The Second Mrs. Tanqueray," is to have the principal part.

Miss Dorothy Dickson, who began her stage-career in the cabarets and cafés of Chicago, is to have in London the part Miss Adèle Astaire plays in the New-York performances of "Lady, Be Good!" . . . They like Miss Dickson in London, where she had Miss Marilynn Miller's rôle in "Sally."

Miss Wilda Bennett, who had her chance this season in "Madame Pompadour" and failed to click, is to do some singing in the varieties. . . . That branch of the theater is to embrace Miss Lillian Walker, also: she is from the films, and is to act in a sketch named "It Happens to Everybody."

Film Is Lesson for Stern Parent

By Mae Tinee.

Had broken up the beautiful romance between herself and her soldier lover—incidently breaking both their hearts.

Had caused her to marry an unloved man and thus made twilight of all her sunshine, forever and ever.

The picture tells the story of Mildred, and makes it a poignant and stirring tale. With its conclusion you know that Mildred's daughter will look back over her past far more joyfully when she is forty-five.

Miss Windsor in "The Denial" is not Miss Windsor as you have ever seen her. She has worked wonders with make-up, and her exquisite, wistful, moon-haloed mother is just as appealing as her slight, wistful, Mildred of the days when automobiles were "horseless carriages," and her soldier sweetheart rode away with Teddy Roosevelt's Rough Riders to meet a fate he welcomed since fate in the shape of a mother had denied him the girl he left behind him. And just as appealing as her svelte, sophisticated modern heroines.

William Haines as the lover is a clean-cut young chap and a convincing actor.

Emily Fitzroy—always in demand when they want a woman to look and act mean—is the horrible Mrs. Huckins. Vivia Ogden, the gossipy old maid of "Way Down East," has another of the pesky, sneaky, silly rôles she knows how to put over so well. Her work furnishes the comedy of the piece.

Edward Connelly is pathetic as the henpecked father, and other players are well cast in their parts.

This will be, I guess, the last picture in which little Lucille Ricksen will ever be seen. She died recently, you will remember, a victim to the strenuous life of sole support to a family, which she had been since she was a tiny girl. She looks so frail in the picture! But there's no lack of enthusiasm in her work. Game to the last—the plucky little thing!

"The Denial" is based on the stage play by Lewis Beach. The material has been well handled by the director, and the photoplay is recommended as an interesting program production.

All That Sparkles Out in Hollywood Is Not Diamond

By Rosalind Shaffer.

LOS ANGELES, Cal.—[Special Correspondence.]—"Yes," said Madeline Hurlock, blushingly, "yes, I'm engaged."

With that she flashed a large and luminous ring on our dazzled orbs, set in a bee-you-tiful basket setting.

"Who is the lucky man?"

"Mr. Sennett," she said with a wicked twinkle in the brown eyes—then all was clear.

"I guess you're another of these girls with engagement rings from the 5 and 10 cent store. The novelty soon wears off."

Truth to tell, Madeline is engaged only under contract and in the picture to Billy Bevan. She complains bitterly that recently she had to fall downstairs on her face in her new comedy—"which a double might have done just as well," Madeline added plaintively.

Madeline, who is Ben Turpin's leading lady, when he is working, was talking of the movie chapel of the little Roman Catholic church in Beverly Hills. May McAvoy donated its organ, Jackie Coogan the altar, and Ben Turpin the pews.

Rambling around on the Sennett lot the guide pointed out the weather beaten rough boarded dressing room which has in turn sheltered Charles Chaplin, Mabel Normand, Wallace Beery, Gloria Swanson, Mae Busch. This oldest of the still used studios is replete with memories.

Marjorie Daw, for the fifth time in her short life, is playing the beautiful bride. Over at Fox's they are making the old heart hitter, "East Lynn," and Marjorie, as the beauteous Lady Isabelle, was all dolled up in white satin with leg-o-mutton sleeves, passementerie pearl bugling, dust ruffles, silk illusion and quilling—quite a charming figure out of the past, orange blossoms and all and tiny hand bouquet with a paper ruffle and white bow. Marjorie tells that the radio broadcasting station at Warner Brothers studio, "The Voice of Hollywood," is being pestered by some fan who calls up, announces herself as a prominent motion picture star, and turns in requests for songs. The other night the radio bug announced herself as Mary Pickford and requested "Insufficient Papa"—which amused Mary a lot. Also Dug.

Wednesday night at the Montmartre brought out the liveliest gathering the village has seen these many days. Gallagher of "And Sheean" appeared with Fifi, his new French find, and in the most informal manner in the world, the two of 'em reeled off this little ditty.

By Fifi:

O, Mr. Gallagher, O Mr. Gallagher,
they tell me that you've split up with the wife,
That she's left your brand new home,
That now you're all alone,
And intend to live a bachelor all your life.

By Gallagher:

French colleen, French colleen,
You're right, it's off with my ex-movie queen.
I took her for a pal,
Took her for a regular gal.

By Fifi:

How did she take you, Mr. Gallagher?

By Gallagher:

Like Grant took Richmond, French colleen.

It caused a riot in the audience, particularly as Syd Chaplin, at whose home Ann Luther, the "ex-movie queen," stayed in Hollywood, was at the same table, and dear friends of both the pair were scattered through the crowd.

Charlie Chaplin, wearing the Chaplin smile for the first time that we have noted, seemed vastly taken with Fifi and danced several dances with her, though it was plainly to be seen that conversational isolation and not dancing was the object of the maneuver. And you should have seen Mr. Gallagher's eyes follow Charlie and Mademoiselle Fifi.

Julanne Johnston, recently returned from abroad; Alice Calhoun, Dorothy Devore, Janet Winton, Mrs. Ronald Colman, Charles Kenyon, Norman Kerry, Derek Glynn, Matt Moore, Robert Z. Leonard, Raymond Griffith, Pat Somerset, the English actor, and Wedgewood Noel, representative of the Actors' Equity, were present.

Burson Fashioned Hosiery

Styles and Colors for Spring Wear

Bonnie Burson—the latest Burson Hosiery Creation, a finer, more beautiful stocking, ankle "knit-to-fit" for style and beauty and utmost foot comfort—bows to Miss Chicago at the Woman's World's Fair.

Bonnie Burson wears longer—the "knit-in" shape of the Burson comfort foot permits perfect contact with the shoe without the rubbing that wears. All wearing points are innerlined with lisle. Shoe fitting experts and foot specialists are enthusiastically endorsing these Burson "patented" features.

Bonnie Burson comes in exact sizes from 8½ to 10½ with style seam and in a full selection of 22 of the latest colors, fast to washing. Bonnie Burson is truly the most beautiful—the most comfortable—the best wearing stocking regularly obtainable at its price. Satisfaction guaranteed—replacements without dispute.

ANTENNA IS KEY TO SUCCESS IN RADIO RECEIVING

High, Unshielded Aerial Best, Engineers Say.

The antenna is the hand that reaches out into the sky and captures radio signals. Upon its excellence depends the whole structure of satisfactory radio reception.

The amount of actual current traveling in the wires of the antenna of a radio receiver is extremely small. It has a value that can only be measured in micro-amperes, i. e., millionth of an ampere, and its effect on the senses of the ordinary house fly would be nil.

The average radio fan, listening to the crashing climaxes of a symphony orchestra, would do well to realize that the source of all this tremendous sound is a tiny, infinitesimal current caught by his wires from the ocean of ether, which current acts as the connecting medium between his set and the broadcasting station.

Aerial As High As Possible.

Realizing this fact, it behooves us to save all the energy possible and to improve our antenna installation as much as we can. The whole problem of correct antenna installation fortunately is quite simple, and with a few salient facts to remember the broadcast listener should have no difficulty in this respect.

The antenna should therefore be as high as possible and unshielded from surrounding objects. It should not be strung in a courtyard between two buildings, nor should it be wired along the front or sides of a building running vertically to the roof. Antenna that are behind an apartment building or next to a wall will generally be shielded in certain directions and may never receive distant stations also in those directions.

If there are powerhouse lines, trolley wires, telephone or light wires in your vicinity, unless you keep your antenna as far away from them as possible, radio reception in your home is apt to make a boiler factory sound like a graveyard in comparison.

A considerable help when circumstances are such that such lines must be close to your wires is to be sure and run your antenna at right angles to them. When the antenna and such wires run parallel for any appreciable length, unwanted noises are bound to increase.

Joints Well Soldered.

Have you antenna well insulated at its various points of support to prevent leakage to the building and thence to ground. If possible, see that the lead in wire to the set and the wire on the roof are in one piece. If a joint is necessary, it should be well soldered to prevent corrosion, which introduces high resistance, with consequent losses in signal strength.

Finally, it should be determined what length antenna is desired. With most sets, it is true that distance and volume are helped by a long antenna, although the receiver may tune broadly, while a short antenna, even though the signals sound weaker, will enable you to obtain more selectivity in stations of nearly the same wave length.

For such experimenters, where circumstances permit, two or even three antenna will show interesting differences on results obtained, and, on local stations especially, an indoor antenna of forty or fifty feet will be a revelation as to the absence of outside noises and clarity of signal.

FEW UNIVERSITIES IN EAST OFFER RADIO COURSES

A press dispatch from New York declares that Columbia university is to spend $2,000,000 for a building to house the radio section of the university.

A canvass of a number of the leading universities in the east nevertheless reveals the fact that comparatively few offer courses in radio instruction. Among those that do in addition to Columbia are the University of Pennsylvania and Yale. For the most part, however, institutions are apparently not quick to respond to the popularity and future usefulness of the new science.

FRUIT CULTURE LORE TO BE PUT ON AIR BY WGY

Schenectady, N. Y., April 18.—Every fruit grower will find something of interest in the series of monthly talks to be delivered from WGY by members of the American Pomological society, often called "the supreme court of horticulture. On May 5 Dr. E. C. Auchter, professor of horticulture, University of Maryland, will talk on "The Value of Bees in Orcharding." E. A. Hackett of Bolton, Mass., will speak on "Developing of Local Markets in the East." June 2.

Gas in the Stomach Is Dangerous

Recommends Daily Use of Magnesia to Overcome Trouble Caused by Fermenting Food and Acid Indigestion

Gas and wind in the stomach accompanied by that full, bloated feeling after eating are almost certain evidence of the presence of excessive hydrochloric acid in the stomach, creating so-called "acid indigestion."

Acid stomachs are dangerous because too much acid irritates the delicate lining of the stomach, often leading to gastritis accompanied by serious stomach ulcers. Food ferments and sours, creating the distressing gas which distends the stomach and hampers the normal functions of the vital internal organs, often affecting the heart.

It is the worst of folly to neglect such a serious condition or to treat with ordinary digestive aids which have no neutralizing effect on the stomach acids. [illegible]

SARATOGA LAST WORD IN NAVAL RADIO EQUIPMENT

Airplane Carrier Has Powerful Set.

A carrier pigeon broke what was said to be the world's record, one hundred and fifty miles in a little more than two hours, when it brought the news of the launching of the air craft Saratoga at Camden, New Jersey, to Washington recently. However, this feat appeared slow and out of date, inasmuch as the actual launching ceremonies were broadcast.

The Saratoga, which will be equipped to carry seventy-two combat, observation and bombing planes, will be the most powerful electrically driven ship in the world. Needless to remark, the ship will be the last word, so far as radio is concerned.

Although to all appearances it will have decks which are almost unobstructed by masts and aerials, nevertheless, there will be a complete outfit for sending and receiving radio messages. The aerial will be run to the deck from a single top mast, which must be lowered if the vessel ever passes under the Brooklyn bridge.

Constant radio communication will be maintained with the airplanes and between the ship and the world generally.

MARCONI, FATHER OF RADIO, TO BE MARRIED SOON

The announcement of Marconi's forthcoming marriage comes close to his fifty-first birthday, April 25.

It was in 1895 that the most noted of all radio inventors began telegraphing without wires at Bologna, Italy. Six years later came his greatest achievement, the sending of the letter "S" across the Atlantic ocean by wireless. He has devoted the best years of his life to the development of the science of radio.

Radio Sets on Illinois Farms Double in Year

Business and pleasure combined are the strong points of radio on Illinois farms. This is the result of survey made by the Illinois Agricultural association, coöperating with farm advisers throughout the state. A survey made in March, 1924, showed that there were over 20,000 receiving sets on farms in 73 Illinois counties. A rough but conservative estimate just completed brings out the discovery that radio sets on Illinois farms have doubled since the survey a year ago.

DR. WILLIAM C. POOLE.

Dr. William C. Poole, pastor of Christ church, London, and president of the World Sunday School association, will talk on "Religious Education" over WLS tonight, during the program of the "Little Brown Church in the Vale," it was announced by Edgar L. Bill, director of the station.

Dr. Poole is an inspiring speaker and a wide traveler, having made three trips around the world. For many years he was an outstanding minister in America, but in 1921 was called to the pastorate of Christ church, London. He is now engaged in a lecture tour of the United States, and while in Chicago will be the guest of the International Council of Religious Education. He is an ardent advocate of religious education.

LEAKAGE BASIS OF MOST FAULTS OF RECEIVING

Poor Insulation Injures Set's Action.

The field of radio is so new and there is so much as yet that we do not understand that mistakes are being made every day by radio fans in building their own receivers.

Two receivers constructed exactly the same as far as the circuit is concerned may give widely different results. One set may be able to tune through local broadcasting stations and bring in distant stations with loud speaker volume. The other set may be incapable of receiving anything but nearby stations.

The reason for this wide difference in the performance of two seemingly identical receivers seems to be somewhat of a mystery, but there must be a reason for it, and that reason will undoubtedly be found in some piece of apparatus or material that is allowing a dissipation of energy to take place.

Must Be Guarded.

The amount of energy received on an average receiving aerial is very minute, so small, in fact, that very delicate instruments are required to detect the amount of current that is picked up from distant broadcasting stations. It is the function of the radio receiver to amplify this minute bit of energy and increase it to a point where it can be converted into mechanical energy to actuate the diaphragm of a telephone or loud speaker.

The small initial current must be carefully guarded and confined, causing it to follow along in the path by which it will be amplified. The loss of even a small part of this energy will reduce the volume of the receiver and broaden tuning.

Best Materials Needed.

The best of insulation must be used throughout the receiver wherever the currents have an opportunity of escaping. Insulating materials that will function satisfactorily for ordinary electrical currents may be very inefficient for use in radio, where new factors such as the skin creepage effect of the high frequency currents must be contended with. Radio currents tend to travel on the surface of conductors and insulators so that even a layer of dust and moisture on the surface of a subpanel may allow considerable leakage.

Many receivers are constructed with wooden panels and wooden baseboards or subpanels. Often as not the surface may be coated with a black coloring paint of some sort which contains carbon in some form and is a partial conductor of radio currents.

CAL, DAWES, AND PERSHING TALK ON RADIO THIS WEEK

President Addresses the D. A. R. Tomorrow.

New York, April 18.—[Special.]—Inasmuch as there is usually little advance notice when President Coolidge goes on the air, fans may be interested in knowing when he is likely to be heard again.

The President's speech at the opening session of the annual convention of the Daughters of the American Revolution Monday evening will be broadcast by WCAP and possibly WEAF. He is expected to be heard on the radio when he makes the Decoration day address at Arlington cemetery on the afternoon of May 30.

Pershing to Talk Tuesday.

Considerable interest attaches to Mr. Coolidge's probable appearance at the Norse-American centennial celebration at St. Paul-Minneapolis, June 8. This, unquestionably, will be broadcast, as also his speech in Boston on June 16 on the occasion of the 150th anniversary of the Battle of Bunker Hill.

Gen. John J. Pershing will be heard by the radio audience on Thursday evening at 8:30, when WJZ, New York; WGY, Schenectady, and WRC, Washington, broadcast the Pan-American program from Washington. There will also be heard on the same program the U. S. army band and selections of special Latin and South American music by Leopoldo Gutierrez, baritone; Arsenio Ralon, violinist; Helen Heinl, pianist and Ethel Gomlock, soprano.

Dawes Addresses A. P.

The address of Vice President Charles G. Dawes to be delivered before the members of the Associated Press assembled for their annual luncheon in the grand ballroom at the Waldorf-Astoria Tuesday afternoon will be broadcast by WEAF, WJZ, WGY, WWJ and WOO.

Broadcasting will begin at 2 p. m., eastern standard time, with a brief introductory address by Frank B. Noyes, president of the Associated Press, who will present Vice President Dawes.

THIS OPERATOR'S NIGHT GOSSIP IS WORLD WIDE

Pat Rooney, who operates the low wave station 2ZV at Richmond Hill, Long Island, has logged 180 stations in a night and, next to Harry Carman of Freeport, N. Y., is likely the champion long distance talker of the world. Pat sprinkles a choice Irish brogue from Italy to New Zealand before he calls it "thirty" for the evening. "I enjoy radio roaming," says Pat, "and the nice thing about it all is that I never have to listen to any one singing mushy stuff like 'All Alone' and such. The other night I picked up a man in Hawaii and after some conversation he told me he was a Chinaman and a graduate of Harvard and that when he was not nighthawking he was a physician. The Italian I had at Palermo is in the wine business and for a minute I almost thought I could detect the odor of Italian Vermouth. The New Zealander is a wool merchant. Whether it is pills, wine, or wool, radio gets them all."

WHAT IT COSTS TO ADVERTISE BY BROADCAST

Various conflicting estimates have been given as to the charge broadcasting stations make for advertising. Therefore, the following list of prices of the American Telephone and Telegraph company is of interest:

Station WEAF, New York, $500 an hour alone, $312.50 per half hour and $195.35 per quarter hour: Philadelphia, WFI or WOO, $200 an hour; Pittsburgh, WCAE, $200; Washington, WCAP, $150; Buffalo, WGR, $200; Boston, WEEI, $250; Providence, WJAR, $150; Cleveland, WEAR, $150; Cincinnati, WSAI, $200; Detroit, WWJ, $200; Davenport, WOC, $150, and Minneapolis, WCCO, $250.

WHT Puts on Inaugural Program Next Saturday

The inaugural program of station WHT, to open here on April 25, will be dedicated to Guglielmo Marconi, inventor of wireless, whose birthday is on that date. The program will be of an international character, with opera stars, and representatives of the twelve other Chicago stations participating. The new 1,500 watt station has asked the radio division of the department of commerce for a low wave length and is the first super-station to seek a low wave length.

Canada Still Our Best Customer for Radio Goods

Canada continues to be the largest buyer of American radio apparatus, according to a report of the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce at Washington. During the last fiscal month the exports to our neighbor to the north amounted to $186,947. Sweden was next, with Brazil a close third, and the United Kingdom fourth.

WENR Plans to Increase Its Power to 1,000 Watts

Station WENR, just opened by the All-American Radio corporation, will soon increase its power to 1,000 watts, replacing the present equipment of 100 watts, announced E. N. Rauland, president of the company, today. The high power station will be ready for operation about Aug. 1.

RADIO PROGRAMS FOR TODAY

(Standard Time Throughout.)

(Sunday, April 19.)

The third elimination contest, for post-graduate piano, in the Chicago Musical college annual contest, will compose this afternoon's concert broadcast from the Central theater by W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel. The judges of today's piano competition will be Jan Chiapusso, Sidney Silver, and Allen Spencer.

Preceding the Chicago Musical college concert, which opens at 3:30, the well known Chicago Association of Commerce Glee club, directed by Herbert Hyde, is to be heard in an hour long program from the W-G-N studio.

Albert Hay Malotte will be the guest organist at Balaban & Katz' Chicago theater in the Sunday noon organ recital, broadcast this morning at 11:45. His program will consist of French, Polish, Hungarian selections, and an Egyptian ballet suite, with solos by Georges Du Franne, tenor—"I Hear You Calling Me"—and Ben Simon, violinist—"Meditation from 'Thais'" and "Tambourine Chinois" (Kreisler).

This evening's 9 o'clock concert will be offered by Dr. Alex A. Shere, basso; Drury Lenington and Ballard Smith, in tenor and baritone duets, and the Drake concert ensemble in the following program:

1. (a) Prelude G Minor........Rachmaninoff
   (b) Serenata........Moskowski
Piano solos—
   (a) Adagio from Concerto........Grieg
   (b) Minuet........Seeboeck
Leon Benditzky.
3. Dance of the Hours........Ponchielli
4. After a Dream........Fauré

The two other preliminary competitions, vocal and violin, in the Chicago Musical college contest were conducted last Sunday and the Sunday previous and broadcast by W-G-N. The next contest, to be staged at the Central theater next Sunday, will include three vocal candidates, three violin, three graduation class pianists, and the three post graduation pianists to be chosen today, and all of the contest will be broadcast for W-G-N listeners to vote on. And on May 9, the final contest will be conducted at Orchestra hall, when the judges will vote the best pianist, the best vocalist and the best violinist; this concert will not be broadcast.

The W-G-N audience will hear next Sunday's contest and are invited then to submit essays on their choice of the three best musicians. Carl D. Kinsey, manager of the college, is offering $500 in prizes to the twenty listeners sending in the best essays on their choice that coincide with the winners selected by the judges. If less than twenty listeners fail to agree with the orchestra hall judges, the prizes remaining unawarded will be given to those whose essays are deemed best, regardless of their choice of winners. Among today's contestants will be Miss Inez Bringgold, staff pianist of W-G-N.

Uncle Walt will open the day at W-G-N, reading THE TRIBUNE comics to the children at 11 o'clock.

10,000 MILE TRIP TO TEST RADIO SUMMER ACTION

Brooklyn Chamber to Use Special Train.

From one end of the United States to the other, in Canada, and across the border to Mexico, summer broadcast receiving conditions will be studied through the "Trade and Good Will Trip Through the Golden West" by the Brooklyn Chamber of Commerce, beginning on May 17 and ending a month later.

The party will travel nearly 10,000 miles on a special train, one of the cars of which will serve as a community room for meetings, song rallies, and the like. This car will be fitted with an elaborate radio installation, with loud speaker, and other loud speakers may be placed in adjoining cars, when desired. Every one anticipates a great deal of pleasure from the radio programs, outside of the scientific interest in the tests, with reference to strength of signals, possible fading, etc. On Sundays church services will be tuned in.

En route, every afternoon and evening, and during the stays at various points of interest, efforts will be made to tune in as many stations as possible, as a real test of summer reception in the various localities. The report will be the most comprehensive one of its kind ever compiled.

SPECIAL MUSIC AT SUNDAY EVENING CLUB SERVICES TONIGHT

REV. B. I. BELL.

The broadcasting of the Sunday Evening club program by KYW tonight will begin ten minutes early, due to the fact that a group of songs will be given at that time by the Coe college men's glee club, beginning at 6:50. This glee club, about twenty in number, is touring the middle west in a special bus, giving concerts at leading cities. Among the number is a blind boy, sightless from birth, with an unusual tenor voice.

At 7 o'clock Dean Shailer Mathews will give an informal talk on the subject "Philip and Thomas," and the Rev. Bernard Iddings Bell, president of St. Stephen's college, Annandale-on-Hudson, N. Y., will deliver the address at the main meeting. The Rev. Mr. Bell, who will speak on the subject "What Is Man?" is well known to Chicagoans by reason of the fact that he was at one time vicar of St. Christopher's Episcopal church, Oak Park, and aid to the chaplain of the Great Lakes Naval Training station.

English King to Talk Over Radio on May 9

LONDON, April 18.—The Wembley exhibition this year will be opened by radio. Arrangements have been completed for King George V. to officially open the exhibition, broadcasting his speech on May 9. The speech of the king will be his first public utterance for millions of radio fans upon his return from a cruise in the Mediterranean, where he is an ardent wireless enthusiast, operating a special receiving set on the royal yacht Victoria and Albert.

Danish Government Takes Over Control of Radio

COPENHAGEN, April 18. — Last Wednesday the Danish government assumed control of the nation's broadcasting stations with the state paying all sending costs. The government's theaters will be available for sending operas, concerts, and recitals. The government plans to enlist all listeners in on the tax bill. The Danish radio fans expect improved service.

WILL BROADCAST SPORT RESULTS FROM THE FIELD

WAHG to Use Portable Stations.

New York, April 18.—[Special.]—Baseball, boat races and other out door sports will be on the air this coming summer from WAHG. The Richmond Hill station is having three cars equipped with low wave transmitters for rebroadcast work and at least one sixty foot yacht.

The low wave transmitters will work with 2XE which in turn will be picked up and rebroadcast by WAHG. Insofar as baseball is concerned no actual dates have been made as yet but the rebroadcast of the boat race on Long Island Sound from the yacht is all planned and scheduled. College boat races are also in negotiation.

At least one important tennis tournament is included in the summer sports schedule. The simplicity of the rebroadcast is self evident. The elimination of telephone lines which require much time for installation and which once installed are not mobile, is a big advantage. The portable broadcaster can be moved anywhere on almost a moment's notice.

Radio Fans Invited to Visit Electric Club

The next regular meeting of the radio section, Electric Club of Chicago, will be held in the club rooms, 30 North Dearborn street, Tuesday at 7 p. m. Directional transmission and reception will be the subject for general discussion at this meeting. Dr. E. R. Stoekle of Milwaukee will address the meeting on "Useful and Harmful Resistance in Radio Circuit." Radio fans not members of the Electric club, are invited to attend this meeting and become acquainted with the activities of the section.

RADIO CORNER ON PULLMAN.

The Pullman company de luxe excursion train operating weekly between Havana and Santiago, in Cuba, has as one of its most attractive features a radio corner in the dining room.

W-G-N NOTES

That radio interview with Gloria Swanson will be next Tuesday evening, between 6:45 and 7:15 p. m. Fifty questions that have been submitted by the radio audience are to be asked of the marquise before the W-G-N microphone. Don't forget the date and time o'clock!

Frank Ridgway, agricultural editor of THE TRIBUNE, is to speak from W-G-N next Thursday evening at 8:50 on "Cows That May Be Bottled, Buttered, and Beefed." Mr. Ridgway promises that his bovine subject will be most interesting to all listeners.

The first of the W-G-N college radio reunions will be staged on Wednesday evening, between 8 and 9. Sixty-eight alumni clubs will assemble in all parts of the country to listen to the big Notre Dame university program, to be broadcast from the Drake hotel studio. The peppy and interesting show will include the Notre Dame Glee club, some acts from the famous Monogram club, President Emeritus James A. Burns, Coach Knute K. Rockne, and Cheer Leader Eddie Luther.

MAXIMS VISION RADIO AS AN AID TO WORLD PEACE

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS, April 18.—Radio is destined to be the greatest tool yet invented to accomplish world peace, Hiram Percy Maxim, inventor of ordnance devices and president of the American Radio Relay league, declared, speaking at the International Amateur Radio union Wednesday. His son, Hiram Stevens Maxim, inventor of the machine gun, told the amateurs from all parts of the world that peace was the greatest objective of all countries, peace being obtainable with the help of radio. The nations represented at the conference were, England, America, Canada, Argentina, Brazil, Uruguay, Holland, Portugal, Monaco, Czecho-Slovakia, Belgium, Japan, Siam, Italy, Bulgaria, and Turkey. The chairman of the convention was E. Belin, French inventor of radio photography.

I. C. C. TO RULE ON NEW FREIGHT RATES FOR RADIO

Increase Would Make Sets Cost More.

Hearings have been concluded before the interstate commerce commission on the appeal of the western classification commission for a higher freight rate on radio sets and apparatus. It is expected that a decision will be forthcoming from the commission by June 10 on the appeal.

Should the appeal be granted, higher prices to the consumer on radio sets are expected to result. Heretofore radio sets have not been classified for freight rates and have taken the rates of electrical apparatus.

New Rates Suspended.

On Feb. 2d the classification commission announced a higher rate for radio sets, giving them a classification of their own. An appeal to the interstate commerce commission by radio interests resulted in the suspension of a higher rate until June 10.

Appearing before the commission in the interest of lower rates were L. E. Whitney and W. J. Gorman, representing the Radio Manufacturers' association of Chicago; I. E. Lambert of the Radio Corporation of America; Paxton Deeter of the Atwater Kent company, Philadelphia, and Joseph C. Colqutle of the Music Industries Chamber of Commerce of Chicago.

Music Men Interested.

The appeal for higher rates was made by F. W. Smith and Parker McAllister of the official classification commission; E. K. Vorhees of the southern classification commission, and Robert W. Fyse of the western classification commission.

The interest of the music people is based upon the fact that should the higher rate become effective it would affect talking machines with which radio receiving apparatus is combined.

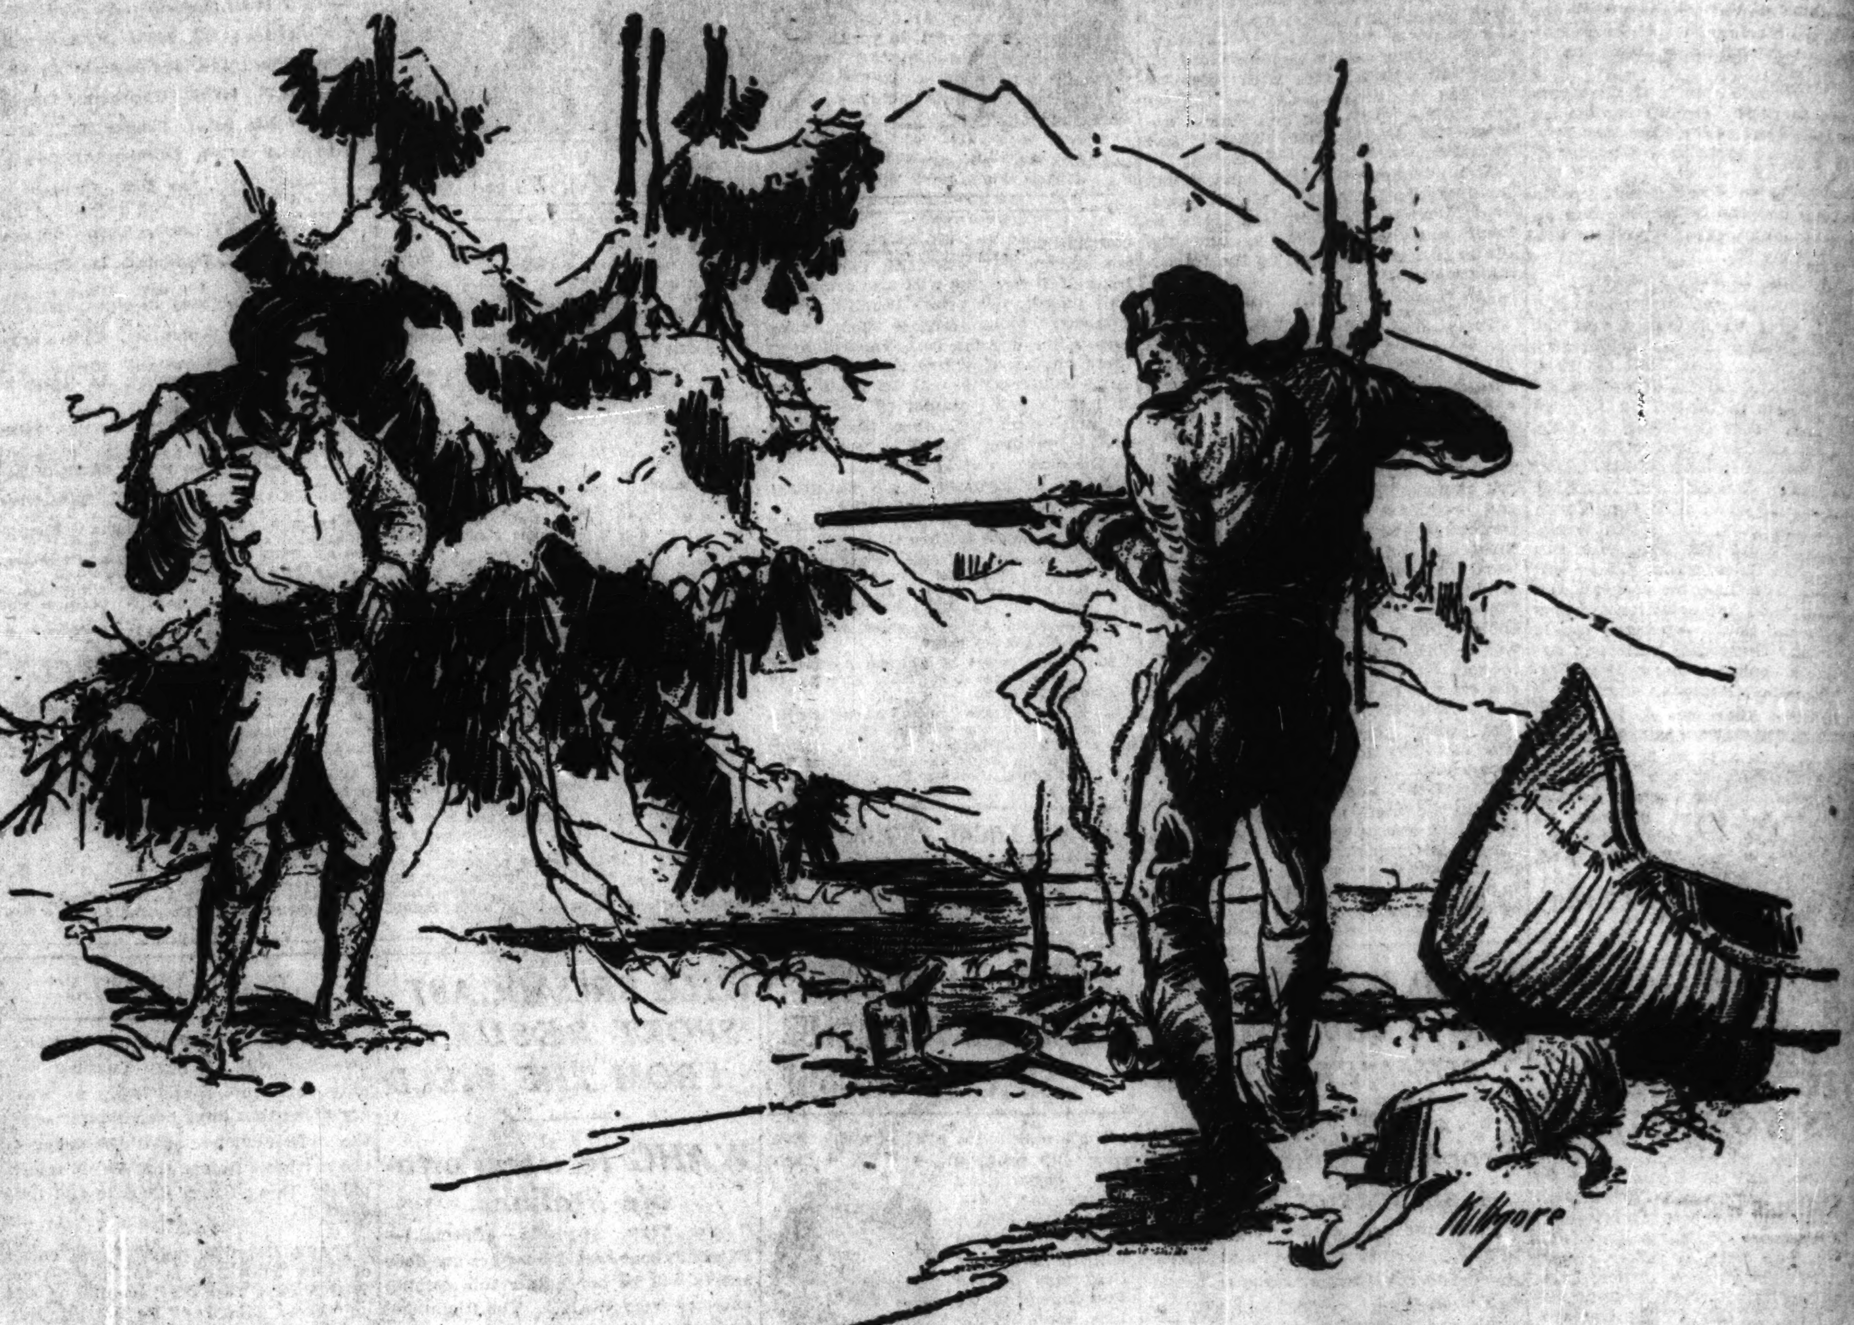
WHITE WATER

by Robert E. Pinkerton



"The race is over and I've beaten you to the border," said Sid. "Stand back before I shoot."

IT WAS A TUMULTUOUS, mad moment in the great woods — trees bending in the wind, rain coming down in torrents, lightning tearing the sky overhead. The man and the woman had beached their canoe and raced for shelter in an unoccupied log cabin.

Standing there together while the fury of the storm passed, the woman threw her arms around his neck, and in a passionate flow of words, declared her love for him. Thoughts of her husband—his employer—back in the hunting lodge where they would soon be going, ran through his mind. Here was a situation to make or break a man. Larry Vail did an unexpected thing—and on his impulse hangs much of the adventure and action of this exciting love story of the north woods.

There is plenty of action and surprise. Intrigue of women who love and hate; intrigue of men who sacrifice honor for money; a wild canoe chase toward the international border; women of the city transplanted to the untrodden forests of Canada; the color and atmosphere of the logging camp and the frontier town—these help to make up a great novel with one of the most picturesque settings imaginable. Don't miss the best story Pinkerton has yet written. Start it now and continue it in tomorrow's Tribune.

BEFORE Robert E. Pinkerton became a novelist of the north woods, he lived the life of the trapper, the lumberjack, and the free lance of the bush. Like Jack London, he has lived the things he writes about.

Shortly after he left the University of Wisconsin, he went up into the Canadian woods, living with a trapper, and lost all sense of responsibility. When he needed a little money to get through the winter, he went to work. Among the 42 jobs he worked at were bull cook on a log drive, lumberjack, trapper, copyreader on Chicago newspapers, trader, theatrical press agent, commercial fisherman, sporting editor, an Associated Press editor, guide, and a member of the United States forest service. He drove a team on a 26-mile portage, wrote advertising copy, and built log cabins in the bush.

In 1911 he married Katherine Gedney, who collaborates with him. Their honeymoon was a 1,000-mile canoe trip in the north woods. Then they settled down in a cabin north of Lake Superior, where their nearest neighbor was eight miles away.

Two other novels by Pinkerton—Indian Blood, published later as The Test of Donald Norton, and The Fourth Norwood—were used first as daily serials in The Tribune. This new story of the Canadian woods is the best he has yet written.

INSTALLMENT I.

BAD RIVER.

BAD RIVER, like its numerous fellow streams, is a shouting, swaggering rowdy. Mad, heedless, boisterous, it expends amazing energy tearing and ripping ineffectually at its granite bed, hissing past great bowlders, boiling and seething in countless eddies, hurling itself with rash courage against hills of solid stone.

Yet Bad river conforms with the land through which it finds its tumultuous way. It is rough, savage. No peaceful stream could accord with the frost splintered rocks, with the jagged outlines of the spruce ridges, with the weird gloom of the thick swamps. Bad river is not only of the north but a symbol of it.

Something of this passed in a hazy, lazy manner through the mind of the girl who sat beside the stream one summer afternoon.

She did not speak of her thoughts to the man and woman just behind her, and she was startled when the woman said:

"It has all the qualities a woman loves in a man."

The girl did not move. She understood perfectly what lay behind the remark, and she knew the man would not comment.

"It is as irrepressible as youth," the woman continued, "as unconscious of its real strength. It has moods, fierce and ruthless sometimes. Up there it is gentle, but strong and even tempered. Around any bend—there's its charm! One never knows what to expect, what sudden urge or whim, what tempest, what——ah!"

The girl, too, started. Upstream a hundred yards a figure had shot into view from behind the wall of rock and spruce around which the river turned. Its appearance was doubly startling because the man seemed to be standing on the surface of the swift water. No craft was visible. Little waves slapped over his white, bare feet.

The stream there was strong and deep, its surface unbroken. Bad river sometimes paused to catch breath, stilled its clamor for a moment, yet even in the straight, silent places it retained a suggestion of its mercurial nature.

"He's on a log!" the girl whispered.

The man was rushing toward them. He was close enough now for the three to note details. His trousers were rolled almost to the bulge of the calf. A gray wool shirt was buttoned to the neck. Brown hair, wavy, almost curly beneath the brim, seemed to thrust a small felt hat to the back of his head. His face was undisturbed, emotionless. He was too far away for them to see his eyes, which were held by the river.

But it was his body, and its pose, that was as arresting as his sudden appearance. Grace of line, of posture, were the more striking because of complete unconsciousness and marvelous fitness. In the rushing stream, his craft so small it barely showed above the surface, he stood as unconcernedly as if on the granite bank and as motionless as a bronze cast. The log, which a rabbit's weight would have set spinning, rode as steadily as a great ship.

Straight on along the shaft of red gold light he rushed. The sun found gold in his hair and, the girl imagined, flecks of reddish brown in hazel eyes. Still he had not moved. A pole, roughly trimmed, rested on the log in front and hung loosely in one hand. But he was as motionless as is a huge cat ready to leap.

The girl was conscious that she had ceased to breathe and that the woman's breath had suddenly been expelled in an almost soundless rush of rapture.

It was beauty of a startling kind; the beauty of a man's perfect grace in body and outline, of warm colors, swift movement, mystery; a picture in a richly savage setting, a glimpse of the reckless spirit of the wilderness. Suddenly each sensed a tensing in the other two.

"My God!" the woman whispered, hoarsely, and the girl felt strong fingers bite into her shoulder. She wanted to scream and could not.

Directly in front of where they sat, a fact she had forgotten in the savage beauty of the picture, the smooth flow of the water ceased. Great bowlders drove the current to the center, and there, with a roar and a snarl, the water leaped out and down into a caldron. Straight toward the brink the man rode his log.

Reflections on Journalism . . . .

two directions. First, the individual reporter tends to be a more dignified fellow than he once was. Better educated and more competent in his days of beginning, he is far more careful of his amour propre than he used to be. He reads more and drinks less. He demands, and gets, more salary. He is less easily snared by the temptations set for him. His view of his craft takes on a breadth that it never had in the old days. Gradually he ceases to think of it as a game, and begins to think of it as a profession. In actuality, of course, it is not yet a profession, for its practioners yet lack professional autonomy and authority and the power to enfore discipline within their own ranks—but I believe it is on its way.

This improvement in the individual journalist has had the inevitable effect of improving newspapers. They are no longer as cheap and venal as they used to be. The old timers conveniently forget how bad most of the papers they once worked for really were. In the town where I began there were five sheets, and three of them played dubious politics and leaped whenever an advertiser blew his nose. Every American city was full of such papers; not a few of them made great pretensions. Today, I believe they are rare. The consolidations that every ancient journalist deplores have accomplished at least one good thing: they have got newspapers out of the hands of needy men. And if such men came back tomorrow they would have a hard time inducing competent newspaper men to work for them. The trade has gone up a peg, and it will stay there.

Interplay of Effort.

It would move faster if newspaper editors, as a class, were as intelligent as newspaper reporters. I believe that, in the average American town, they are not—that their greater average age puts them back, professionally, almost a generation. The schools of journalism far surpass the old time city rooms in the character of the recruits they enlist. They tap a supply of candidates of better education, and out of much better surroundings. They do not try to make journalists out of busted lawyers, former whisky drummers, and unfrocked clergymen. But many a city desk is still occupied by a city editor of the ice wagon driver school. So long as such silurians survive the value of the work being done by the schools of journalism will not be fully apparent, for that work will not be fully utilized.

Already, however, the more intelligent newspaper editors are utilizing it, and before long, I believe, there will be an active interplay of effort between the schools and newspapers. The schools themselves are trying to raise and safeguard their own standards; the good ones gradually separate themselves from the bad ones, and adopt programs that give them professional dignity. Soon or late the Class A schools, demanding sound educational qualifications for entrance and offering well planned and thorough courses of study, will be sharply differentiated from the one room schools that now flourish, just as the Class A medical and law schools are differentiated from the other kind. When that time comes the graduate of a Class A school will be practically assured of a good job on a good paper the day he graduates.

Everything beyond that will be in the hands not of the pedagogues but of newspaper editors. Once they begin to refuse to employ novices not properly trained, and in Class A schools, journalism will begin to take on professional dignity at last. I speak of the editors of first rate newspapers. Plenty of jobs on the other kind will remain for incompetents. But there will then be just as much difference between a first rate journalist on a first rate paper and the hireling of a gutter sheet as there now is between a graduate of the Harvard medical school and a traveling corn doctor.

School Training Counts.

As I have said, many of the old timers deplore and oppose the change. Their opposition is not entirely stupid. They get an appearance of logic into it; they believe true journalists can be made in only one way, and that is by throwing them overboard, in youth, in large batches, and watching the fittest survive. There is some plausibility here. In certain of its branches, at all events, success in journalism seems to depend upon a natural bent far more than upon training. I have known men to become very good reporters in three months—as good, in many ways, as the best. But not many. The overwhelming majority have to be taught—and if they are ever to escape from the ranks they have to be taught some more. I believe that most of this teaching can be done more conveniently in school than in a city room—that the novice who has been competently trained will be much more useful and make much faster progress than the poor fellow who has to comb a city editor's profanity for its occasional strands of wisdom.

The stray genius need not be taken into account. No newspaper, I greatly fear, was ever manned by geniuses alone; Richard Harding Davis would probably have made a bad night editor or editorial writer. Most of the hard work must be done by men who depend less upon inspiration than upon sound professional competence. The greater the competence of such men, the more accurate, intelligent, and useful are our newspapers. And the greater their sense of professional dignity, the more honorable and conscientious is the craft they practice. I believe schools of journalism tend to improve them in both directions.

VOICE OF THE MOVIE FAN

Three Cheers for Pola.

Dear Miss Tinée: Just saw Pola in "The Charmer." Three great big cheers for her. She's a darb. I abhor slang but just at present is the only way I can express myself. No need of closeups of flowing tears, tight bodices or vulgar makeups, to show or try to make you believe she has ability to act. It's there, that's all, a bite of an orange or apple from Pola is a picture by itself. And also may I say, though I don't know you, I like you. 'Tis said from the lips of a woman but—well, you know women, Miss Tinée. TAFFY.

[Editor's note: I like you, too, Taffy! Write again.]

"The Great Divide" Again.

Mae Tinée: Good morning. Just a few lines about that wonderful play, "The Great Divide" in which that good he-man hero, Conway Tearle, played the part of the unwanted lover. Also Alice Terry the beautiful kept her part of the bargain just fine, not saying anything of the splendid support. Bravo! Fine! Let's hope to see Mr. Tearle and Miss Terry star together in more western plays. Alas, good day. P. B.

After All These Years.

Dear Mae Tinée: Here I am after all these years. I was once one of your most devoted followers and often worried you gray with letters that were of little or no importance.

I wrote to you once from Keokuk when I was in high school, and told you I was going to California and try for the movies. You kidded me along in your reply, but just the same I did go to California and succeeded in becoming an extra, but I always did have a healthy appetite and mother served such good and regular meals at home. And extra work isn't thrown at you every day or week either, so a steady position with a steady income looked awfully good to me, especially with a lot of discouragement and a growing hunger.

Hence this position which I have held for a year, teasing an accounting machine in Jesse L.'s office and perfectly satisfied for the time being. See all the stars every day and don't even get a thrill out of them any more.

I could write a whole library about the studios and the people in them, but I wonder if any one would care to read it. Some day I will try. I overheard a ham on one of the sets pronounce an afternoon show like your name, and I thought of you and the bright idea of coming inside and writing a few lines to you popped into my head. So that's that, as they say in the classics. TOM.

[Editor's note—Well, you sound peppy! Congratulations! Reckon we'll be seeing your name in electric lights some day.]

So Sadly Standardized.

Dear Mae Tinée: One takes it for granted that to the most of this set of theatergoers, whether they frequent motion pictures or the voice, Sarah Bernhardt and Lulu Glaser are practically unknown. Theatrically speaking, both are memories, but they were masters of manual acting which enabled them to register much more effectively by unspoken means than any actor on the cinema list. In fact, the cinema actors can glean effective lessons from them.

Judging from what they have the actors register on the screen, one is forced to the conclusion that directors never heard of, certainly never saw, these two women. Nor did they see Frank Mayo or Sol Smith Russell or Joseph Jefferson.

This is recalled by the fact that the Divine Sarah did more effective acting with her hands than the average cinema star can achieve with her cosmos. And that Mayo and Russell were able to hold an audience spellbound for as long as three minutes on the stage with what was known as "business."

The cinema audience has become sophisticated enough to take some things for granted. Why not have the directors and script writers admit this and eliminate footage for effects? Can it be they are so smeared with De Mille's dramatization of the Sennett idea of legs they forget that the normal person is not utterly a devotee of bedroom eyes and pajama ideas. R. R.

Opal—a new blend in Roofing colors · just the roof for a stucco home

Opal—a roof with the coloring of brown October leaves silhouetted against a deep blue sky.

Here is a note that's new in roofing beauty. To almost any home it would add attractiveness.

And if that house of yours is a trim-lined stucco of creamy tan, it is the roof.

It's a roof that sets comfortably on such a house. Light enough in tone so as not to make it look top-heavy; yet so distinct in coloring that it isn't lost against a background of sky and trees. Interesting in its endless variety of softly blending patterns, the opal roof is never obtrusive.

This unusual roof is formed of shingles on each of which are blended slate flakes of jade green and Richardson's rare weathered brown. The opal effect is secured by applying them just as they come from the bundle.

Other rich blends of color

This, however, is but one example of the beauty secured in Richardson Multicrome Roofs. There are other new colorings; likewise suited to different types of homes.

The tapestry tan roof for example; predominately weathered brown in tone, and patterned like a rare tapestry in soft tile red and jade green mixtures. It is unusually rich looking on a brick house of almost any color. And for a white Colonial home nothing could be more attractive than the onyx roof; where opal and bronze mosaic shingles (similarly formed with weathered brown and tile red slate flakes) add interesting touches of color to a jade green background.

Before you build, before you re-roof; by all means see these new roof colorings. One of them can give your home just the distinction and charm you have always wanted.

It is all-important, of course, that the coloring of the roof be in harmony with the rest of the house. Only then can the house-top contribute its full share of beauty to your home.

50% thicker than the ordinary roof

The Multicrome Roof is built of Richardson Super-Giant Shingles—extra large, extra heavy. Its 50% greater thickness adds both beauty of texture and years of endurance. Its base is sturdy, long-fibre Richardson Felt. Its waterproofing is Viskalt—99.8% pure bitumen, especially vacuum-processed. Its surface is slate in close, overlapping flakes—further protection against weather and fire hazards.

The Richardson Multicrome Roof represents the maximum roof value at a moderate price. It is economical to lay and equally good for new or over-the-old-roof jobs.

To help you choose

To help you choose the roof which will make the most of this opportunity we have prepared an authoritative booklet fully illustrated in color. It shows page after page of beautiful homes in different architectural styles. And with the Richardson Harmonizer which it contains you can see the complete effect of 54 different combinations of body, trim and roof colors.

The booklet also gives valuable information on the principles of any harmonious color scheme. It is called What Color for the Roof? The price is 25c.

If you are planning to build or re-roof, this booklet will be worth many times its cost. Write for your copy today.

Or ask for our free booklet, A Richardson Product for Every Roofing Need.

See the new colors at your dealer's

Meanwhile, go to your nearest dealer in lumber, hardware or building materials. Ask him to show you these and other beautiful Richardson color effects, in solid as well as blended tones. Ask him, too, why the points mentioned in the panel at the left make their beauty lasting.

DEALERS: There is a Richardson product for every roofing need. Perhaps you can secure the Richardson franchise for your territory. Write us.

Boulder Colorado
One Big Round of Fun for Every One

The entire family will enjoy its stay in Boulder. The young folks and the grown-ups too will find pleasures to their liking, and something to do—somewhere to go—every day of the vacation period.

Boulder is the "Hub" from which all outdoor sports radiate—motoring over wonderful mountain boulevards, hiking to the land of everlasting snow and ice—the glaciers; camping beside tumbling mountain creeks; fishing for the fighting trout in myriad lakes and streams; golfing where the eternal mountains bunker the course; swimming in natural warm-water pools; horseback riding; tennis—and other sports—all in the cool, invigorating atmosphere of Colorado's vacationland.

Boulder has free band concerts, daily pipe organ recitals, interesting and instructive lectures, children's playgrounds, kodaking—almost every pleasurable and refined entertainment one might desire.

Make your plans now to visit Boulder this summer. Here is a place to stay—at a price you will like to pay. Ample accommodations within the city—or if you prefer, there are delightful mountain lodges, cabins and cabin sites near by. Boulder wants you to come, and will treat you right.

Your ticket agent will tell you about the low railroad rates to Colorado—or you can motor over nationally-known highways in your own car.

THE NEW MORRISON HOTEL

A FEW seconds in an elevator—instead of an hour or two in a taxi—will take a guest at the New Morrison into an atmosphere as pure as that prevailing at a hotel outside the city limits. In the Morrison's new Clark St. section, 400 of the 850 rooms will be in the tower, and, by virtue of the newly acquired "sky-lease," they will be practically free of ground rent. This will greatly extend the hotel's traditional policy of renting rooms for $3 to $5 that would cost $5 to $8 elsewhere—a condition due to valuable store subleases.

The present capacity (1,054 outside rooms, each with bath) will eventually become 3,400—the largest hotel on the globe.

The Morrison is the home of the Terrace Garden, "Chicago's Wonder Restaurant," the Middle West's favorite "dance-and-dine" rendezvous. The following artists will appear here throughout the week beginning Monday, April 20:

DON BESTOR

The Ideal Dance Orchestra

PRINCESS MICHEL CANTACUZENE.

MISS JOSEPHINE DUNHAM.

MRS. LESTER ARMOUR.

Princess Michel Cantacuzene, who is the former Miss Clarissa Curtis of Boston, headed the receiving line for the exclusive and smart party given at the Casino on Friday evening by the Lower North Community council to raise funds for its field work. She is also actively identified with the women managing the woman's world's fair, which opened yesterday and is to continue through this week at the American Exposition palace in Lake Shore drive.

Miss Josephine Dunham, daughter of Mrs. Ethel Richardson Dunham and Robert J. Dunham, heads the committee in charge of cigarets and favors for the annual cabaret supper dance of the Lighthouse Volunteer Aids, to be given on Friday evening at the Bal Tabarin in the Hotel Sherman.

Mrs. Lester Armour of 325 Wellington avenue and Lake Forest is a member of the committee in charge of the dinner dance to be given on Tuesday evening at the Opera club for the benefit of Madonna center. Mrs. Armour is the former Miss Leola Stanton of New Orleans.

Returning to Our Windy City by Way of Gilded Gotham

By Mme. X.

THE only wholesome and suitable route by which a Chicagoite should return to the windy city from the pomps and vanities of Palm Beach is by way of brilliant and gilded Gotham, the center of our artistic and literary culture. So many of our gifted and ambitious fellow citizens have sought in New York a more congenial atmosphere, that for a son or daughter of Chicago to drop in there for a brief sojourn on the way home is like arriving at Chicago's outskirts.

Of course this peripatetic p. p. p. immediately sought out these gifted and ambitious fellow citizens, and routed out of their lairs two of our well known artists, Cecil Clark Davis and Abram Poole, also running across Mrs. Marshall Clark, better known as Virginia Clark, besides tracking to his den in Macdougall alley the well known sculptor, Victor Salvatore, who, because he married Mrs. Arthur Ryerson's youngest daughter, Miss [illegible] Ryerson, in a measure belongs to us.

Also we hunted down our decidedly popular and famous writer, Ernest Poole, and his charming spouse, formerly Miss Margaret Winterbotham, both ex-Chicagoans, who live in an entirely delightful house in East 48th street, in a neighborhood that is commonly called Turtle Bay. Furthermore, we dragged forth from his studio home that promising new figure in our present day literature, Arthur Mason, whose connection with Chicago lies in the fact that he married Mrs. Genevieve Winterbotham Mowrer, daughter of the late Joseph Winterbotham and sister of John H. Winterbotham and Mrs. John A. Carpenter.

We also had a chance meeting with Mrs. Francis King, ex-Chicagoite and foremost figure in American gardening, and met several other lesser luminaries, but these more or less ex-fellow citizens will be the theme of this col today; so if you are not interested, turn to some other department for your Sunday morning entertainment.

In Mrs. Davis' Studio.

Having promised Mrs. Cecil Davis to visit her studio at 9 West 51st street, just off roaring Fifth avenue, the writer trotted up there about noon after an active tour of New York's shopping district. I mention this tour, as when 9 West 51st street was reached, no elevator being visible, these same legs, which had trotted so blithely from one shop to another in search of things never bought, had to mount seven flights of the longest stairs ever yet devised by man to reach a superior floor.

Up at this altitude our well known Chicago portrait painter has an austere and businesslike studio whose principal feature is a delightful and sunny, adjacent and well floored roof, whence she gets a wide view of New York and its soaring structures, with an encircling rim of faraway hills, and the masts of river traffic to the east and the west. It is a delicious spot and one in which Mrs. Davis takes great satisfaction. She has had a great success at the New York academy exhibit with a portrait of Baroness d'H., a Belgian grande dame of ancient family, and striking appearance. New York critics have given it unusually favorable mention and made much of it.

She had in her studio a most effective five leaf screen that she has painted, on which she has depicted New York's wonderful outline with its skyward leaping buildings, towers, domes, spires, and minarets. The screen is done in soft, dull shades of blue gray, and is really a lovely piece of work. She is exhibiting it in the architectural show, which opens in the Terminal building galleries tomorrow, an exhibit which is generally considered the most important of its kind in the country, perhaps in the world, as today this country is foremost as an exponent of architecture.

In Mrs. Davis' studio was a half finished portrait of Dr. Foster Kennedy, one of the great neurologists of the time. The canvas presents a fine strong, impressive face, and promises to be an excellent example of Mrs. Davis' unusual talent.

Ups and Downs.

At the behest of Mrs. Davis, the little, automatic, rather proud and haughty elevator rose reluctantly from the depths to take me back to terra firma. Three of me would have taxed its capacity. But even if it's little, it is lively. It didn't like me. When I pressed the button which my hostess indicated, that little hot tempered bit of mechanism refused to budge, though it shivered. Mrs. Davis' face, written o'er with concern, looked at me through the tiny pane of glass which permits her to view those who approach her sanctum before letting them in. I thought how much nicer walking was than any other form of locomotion, particularly walking downstairs. But that sinister little box of dark spite refused to let me open its door, and before I knew it I was rumbling down in cimmerian gloom.

Down and down we sank, and landed with a heavy thud. I opened the door into what I expected to be the main entrance hall. Not at all. That bit of vicious ganglia had landed me on to the cellar coal pile, which was the habitat of a large family of lean and lively cats. They did not like the cellar and rushed into the elevator. I pushed them out; but as fast as I got one or two safely out, three or four would sneak in. They grew in numbers as I battled with them. Finally the genus humana vanquished the genus felinus, and the now seemingly subdued little box took me up to the next floor. But it was only a seeming subduing, for the imp must have known that the door into the entrance hallway was locked, and once again I had to punch a dim button, which this time landed me in the midst of an eager and unoccupied hairdressing establishment. With shame and humiliation I had to explain to the assembled hair artists that I was seeking not hair tonic, but a mode of escape.

When finally I reached the pleasant and populous sidewalk, I realized that as I passed the elevator shaft on my way out, I had heard a sardonic and metallic chuckle. That little bit of machinery had outwitted and tormented this specimen of western hayseed for at least ten minutes.

A Call on Abram Poole.

The next on my list of Chicago celebrities, Abram Poole, I found at his delightful residence in East 48th street, keeping bachelor's hall. His wife, best known to the world as Mercedes d'Acosta, has taken two plays, a producer, a scene painter, and Eva Le Gallienne as star actress with her to Paris with the full intent, based on many excellent promises and prospects, of presenting these same dramas before that most discerning and critical of all audiences, the Parisians. The plays are not to say audacious in theme, one concerning Joan of Arc and the other being built about Mary, the mother of Jesus. Either one or both of them calls for 145 people on the stage at one time.

Miss Le Gallienne, who speaks French as exquisitely as she does English, and that is saying a great deal, is to play in both of these dramas, which are being rendered into French by an expert translator. There will be no lingual bar between the Parisians and these two productions. It will be interesting to watch the outcome of this gallant effort. For myself, I wish her the greatest possible success. The Gallic motto, "De l'audace; toujours de l'audace!" is my favorite one.

Abram Poole himself has his studio in his house in a spacious, square, rather dusky room beyond the ground floor dining room and opening on to a secluded little square paved court with some shrubbery and the head of a stone griffin adorning the wall opposite the dining room's French windows, windows that open on the court in an inviting way. New York houses have many such attractive nooks and architectural effects.

Mr. Poole was working on a portrait of a most fascinating looking young

NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY

Russian, an exquisitely piquant brunette, with black hair drawn around a divinely oval face, with perfectly arched dark eyebrows, brilliantly dusky eyes, small but regular features, and a radiant smile in spite of the fact that she has been through the gamut of terrible experiences in Russia's bloody debauch. They're an amazing, an incredible people, those Russians!

Mr. Poole showed me some of the canvas designs for his recently completed work in young Marshall Field's new house down on Long Island. They must certainly be stunning mural decorations which he has contributed to this, one of the greatest of American estates. They are in grisailles which means they are of various shades of sepia and still warmer browns with a few dull shades of reds and blues gleaming faintly through the prevailing umber veil. In design, texture, and color they are delightfully right and satisfying. No wonder that exacting and extremely discriminating critic, Mrs. Marshall Field III., is said to be entirely satisfied with them.

Off to France and Italy.

I had merely a look-in on Mrs. Marshall Clark's attractive New York apartment, and saw there a charming canvas of a mother and auburn haired child which she has just painted on commission. The apartment, which is on the ground floor of the same building in East 67th street in which live our former fellow citizens, the Edward Moores, was filled with Mrs. Clark's luggage, for she was sailing the next day on the Olympic to take a motor tour through France and Italy.

Macdougall alley, just off Washington square, has long been the special haunt of artists and literati. It is a wide, stone paved, secluded nook, what in London would b called a mews, meaning a place of stables, horses, and coaches. Victor Salvatore, the gifted Italian who entered the Ryerson family some six or seven years ago, has a studio in this famous alley. Thither went I in search of knowledge of matters artistic.

There were several effective things in this studio, but most striking of all was a life size portrait bust of Alexander Graham Bell, the inventor of the telephone. This piece of sculptural work is a commission which is to be placed in the national portrait gallery at Washington. He had also a recently completed little bronze head of Abraham Lincoln which was quite a perfect thing of its kind in the expression of character and personality which he had wrought in the miniature piece of bronze. Some years ago he did a similar one, but was never satisfied with it. This is the fruit of his dissatisfaction, a well worth while bit of discontent.

Directly behind his studio, approached through a passageway, is the Salvatores' home, a most attractive duplex apartment in one of those aristocratic old New York houses that face on that ancient haunt of Manhattan beau monde of sixty-five odd years ago. In such a dwelling Janet Fairbank's Van Cortlands of Washington square might have been reared and sent forth into the world.

Seeing Turtle Bay.

They have been much described and written about—those houses on New York's east side in Turtle Bay. You probably would be much bored, if I should undertake again to tell you about them, but I'd like to describe to you the vision of spring that one gets in the open space of gardens which fills in the place which we usually call backyards behind those two rows of old New York houses. Already the shrubs and trees are budding in that secluded, sunny inclosure. Low brick walls outline the gardens which belong to each abode, but are not high enough to do more than keep an errant, creeping baby from escaping from its own premises.

A wide graveled path runs about the center of this inclosure. Somewhere near the middle of this, but, thank heaven, not quite in the middle—I hate things just in the middle, don't you—is a low, granite pool under a drooping, languishing willow tree, an aged, hoary, gentle willow tree, whose swaying branches must almost conceal the pool when the leaves are full out. Another gnarled and rather dissipated old tree at the west end of the garden leans against the wall as if weary but watchful.

Each of the long, bricked out spaces has its orderly arrangements of spring flowers already poking their eager noses or finger tips up out of the mold. Looking out on this deliciously sunny and secluded space are, beside the Ernest Pooles, the Winston Churchills, the George Rublees, formerly of Chicago (she was Miss Juliet Barrett, daughter of the late Samuel E. Barrett), and some member of the well known family of Littell, literary folk they all are. So you see the youngsters growing up in that particular section of Turtle Bay are daily breathing in an air rich with literary quality.

The wedding of Miss Dorothy Miller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Franklin M. Miller of 44 Cedar street, to Bruce Willis Strong took place on Tuesday evening at St. Chrysostom's church, the Rev. Norman Hutton reading the service.

Meeting a Real Personage.

Perhaps some of you have read the stories of sea life and the remote, strange parts of the world which have been appearing this last two or three years in well known magazines signed Arthur Mason. The first one I read, which appeared in the Atlantic Monthly, struck my fancy, and since then I have followed the gradual development of this in many ways remarkable new writer. This was partly because he is married to a former Chicagoite, and partly because stories of the lone places in the world and of roving mortals have always a special fascination for me. Now that I know the man himself his stories will henceforth have infinitely more flavor.

He belongs to that small in number class of passionate adventurers and incurable wanderers to whom the globe is an irresistibly fascinating and never ending romance. He is of Irish blood, well built, good looking, smooth shaven, with slightly silver thick black hair and a simple, unself-conscious manner. In short, he is that rare event, a real personage, a man to whom wide horizons and vast spaces are more congenial than the walls, ceilings, and other inclosures invented by civilized man.

He has been round remote and storm haunted Cape Horn thirteen times. He has sailed in the old fashioned windjammers on almost every sea north and south of the equator. The South Sea isles are as familiar to him as State street is to you and me. In 1899 he navigated a small sailing vessel with a crew of four other adventurous souls to Alaska. In six months there he cleaned up $96,000, which he brought with him to Nevada, where he lost it in six months' gold mining; done, he was, by a lot of hard boiled American miners. He walked eighty-seven miles across an unpeopled desert, his toes sticking through his ragged shoes, to get away from the scene of his disaster.

In all his unceasing and widespread wanderings he has had innumerable adventures and these are surging up from their long burial and are giving him the themes of the stories, short and long, which are now winning him fame and a good livelihood. In this literary work his wife is his right hand and indispensable aid. He has imagination and experience, but not the habit of putting his material into words, and in this direction she helps him. Stories of his have appeared in the Atlantic Monthly, in the Red Book, in the Ladies' Home Journal, and in other periodicals, both American and English. A serial novel from his pen begins in the Red Book next autumn. He is much interested in his budding literary career, but even this profitable and honorable calling cannot still the restlessness which sent him out into the world as a lad of 16, to wander up and down, accepting hardship and danger. He will be off again this summer on a walking tour to revisit the land of his birth, Ireland.

MRS. ABE NEWBERGER.

[Lewis-Smith Photo.]

The marriage of Miss Vivian Kahn to Abe Newberger took place on April 7 at 5:30 o'clock in the afternoon.

One little incident which he related left a vivid picture on my memory. He was tramping in an unexplored part of the northwest in this country, when, high up in a lofty tree, he spied what looked like a basket hanging to a branch.

"I'm by way of being a curious man," he said, with a faint Celtic accent, "so I had to climb that lonely tree to find out what the basket was. Up and up I went, until my climbing shook the limb on which the thing hung. Down on my head came a shower of bones, little, wee bones, those of a baby's skeleton." Some grieving Indian father had hung his little dead child up among the birds, as near the sky and clouds as he could get, and its basket, probably made by its mother, had protected it from winds and rains and birds of prey. The little story stands out from many others Mr. Mason told in the course of an hour's talk, all of them interesting and full of flavor of the wild.

Gardening as a High Art.

Next to Arthur Mason on my list comes that charming presiding genius of modern gardening, Mrs. Francis King, whose name is known from one end of the country to the other, wherever gardening is a matter of solicitude. She is, as an erudite gardener expressed it, "the Miss Gertrude Jekyll of America." Perhaps, like myself, the name rings on ignorant ears. If so, you will be interested to know that she is the most famous of garden authorities in England, an elderly woman, whose garden in Surrey is the Mecca of garden worshipers on both sides of the Atlantic.

Mrs. King is worthy of the title. She was a pioneer in the gentle art twenty or thirty years ago, before the rest of us had wakened to the infinite possibilities of gardening as a high art. She is now on the ocean, on her way to attend the international garden convention, which meets this year in Holland at Harlem, and to which she is the appointed American delegate. She has the further honor of being chosen by the garden clubs of the world to preside over this important convention.

Just think of the thrill of all those lovers of beauty to be in Holland at the height of the tulip season! If the Dutch did not invent this ravishing herald of spring, at least they annexed it centuries ago as the national flower of Holland and developed it into its many wonderful manifestations today.

Spring and tulips are hastening to us in Cook county. Out in Mrs. Vibe K. Spicer's charming garden in Kenilworth lovely blue scilla and chionodoxa, delicate lavendar crocuses, waxen bloodroot, and a little new tulip, the Kaufmaniana, are all up, making splashes of delicate color under the still leafless lilac bushes or in the curves of the hardy perennial border. Also, a stunning new miniature windmill stands on a poll in the garden, making an ideal home for tiny wrens. It is the work of the deft fingers of Vibe Spicer, who is a master craftsman when it comes to making spirited and picturesque weather vanes, some like three masted ships with bellying sails and twirling to the breeze.

It's a poetic spot, that garden in Essex road in Kenilworth, with its jolly little bubbling fountain, its reed bordered pool, trickling into a stony little brook, its many flowers each treading on the other's steps, its warbling birds and its jolly and impertinent squirrels. It is a fit abode for the artist and the poet, Mr. and Mrs. Spicer, who live there.

Y. W. C. A. in Lake Forest.

Sixteen miles farther up in Sheridan road the folk of Lake Forest are busy on a different kind of planting. The service bureau of the local Y. W. C. A. is out trying to raise the $12,000 which is needed to run its work for the next eighteen months. Miss Ellen Holt is chairman of the whole enterprise. Others also working for the end in view are Miss Margaret Frost, Mrs. Russell Hill, Mrs. Cyrus Adams, Mrs. E. W. Read, Miss Martha Sarver, Mrs. George Findlay, Mrs. Philip Steidel, Miss Katherine Trowbridge, Mrs. James L. Breese, and Mrs. Van Wagenen Allen. Mrs. Helen Farquhar Sandford is director of the campaign.

The Y. W. C. A. in Lake Forest has a membership of 367. Its work includes Americanization work, such as teaching the foreign born to speak English and to know something about our institutions. There are also classes in infant welfare and a mothers' club, further to bring light and health to those who need such instruction. It has attractive headquarters in that pretty Market square where so much of the village life is staged. There, once a week, on Saturday mornings, the Lake Forest Garden club holds a flower market. There the patriotic assemblages of Fouth o' July and other national festivals are held. There the village lads who enlisted in 1917-'18 were martialed for their training camps, and there they were received when they came back victorious from those bloody battlefields in Europe. It is a quaint and picturesque spot and the heart of the life of the community.

Woman's Fair Opens.

Next Thursday will be a busy day for the members of the Woman's Roosevelt Republican club and for the women who organized and put through the Woman's World's fair, which opened yesterday so brilliantly. The names of the women interested in both are almost synonymous. The club is giving a tea that afternoon at its headquarters, 333 North Michigan avenue, at which the guest of honor will be that good looking and attractive woman, Gov. Nellie T. Ross, first woman governor of the state of Wyoming, the state that first declared itself in favor of woman suffrage—was it thirty or forty years ago?

That same day Mrs. Joseph T. Bowen and the rest of her board of directors are giving a 12 o'clock breakfast at the American Exposition palace, 666 Lake Shore drive, to meet the guests of honor who will be the guests of the fair. I found in New York, and even in idle, pleasure loving Palm Beach, much interest expressed in this Woman's World's fair. Many said it was just like Chicago to do something so big, so original, so striking.

To Talk on Sea Power.

The Chicago Historical society is offering its members what promises to be a most interesting lecture tomorrow evening from John Holland Rose, professor of naval history in that ancient seat of learning, Cambridge, England. The subject is "Sea Power in World History."

There will also be on view in the society rooms a valuable collection of old prints of ships and shipping, lent to it by Chalkley J. Hambleton, chairman of the house committee.

WEDDINGS

No wedding or engagement announcement will be published in The Tribune unless it bears the signature, address, and telephone number of a parent, either of the bride or the bridegroom. Announcements should reach the society editor not later than the Wednesday morning preceding the Sunday they are to be published.

Mrs. Paul Rainer of 5240 Kenwood avenue announces the marriage of her daughter, Gladys Bullard, to Jude Perrin Gary, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis E. Gary of Wheaton, Ill. The wedding took place on April 12 at the Church of the Redeemer at Biloxi, Miss. Mr. and Mrs. Gary will reside after June 1 in Wheaton.

WOMEN'S CLUB PAGE

Club Women Are Interested Aids of Girls' Week

By Kate Webber.

SEVERAL interesting affairs are on the calendar for the observation of National Girls' week in Chicago. Sponsoring the activities of the week is the Girls' Week federation, of which Mrs. William E. Dever is honorary president.

Tomorrow evening the Chicago Federation of Girls' Clubs will hold its sixteenth annual dinner at the Chicago Woman's club. Representatives from other organizations have been invited to participate and make it a city-wide gathering of girls who are doing for girls. Among these are members of the Settlement federation, the Council of Girls' Workers, the Chicago Telephone Girls, Daughters of America of the University of Chicago, and the Junior American Red Cross. Judge Mary Bartelme will be social chairman, and Mrs. Frank Jerome will act as toastmistress.

The Council of Nursing Education will present an unusual program for girls on Tuesday evening in Fullerton hall, the Art institute. Films will be shown and brief talks on the various branches of nursing will be given. A dinner will be given for the executive board preceding the meeting.

During open house, to be held this week by the council, the girls are invited to become familiarized with the heads of the hospital training schools, and to ask questions they may have in mind regarding the work. The council is located at 660 Rush street. The executive committee includes Mrs. George W. Dixon, Mrs. Perkins B. Bass, and Mrs. Ernest E. Irons.

Friday will be girls' day at the Woman's World's fair. The day and the girls' week booth will be in charge of the girls of the city who, as a preliminary to the observance of the week, have formed a new organization composed of all organized girls' clubs in the city. Among those affiliated are the Junior league, the Service club, the Bell telephone girls, the Central Eleanor club, the Junior auxiliary of the Woman's City club, the Woman's Trade Union league, the Council of Jewish Juniors, the Junior auxiliary of the Catholic Woman's league, and the Young Business Women's council.

Apropos of the week, the child welfare department of the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs, through its chairman, Dr. Lena K. Sadler of Chicago, has issued a message to girls and young women for health promotion week.

There is perhaps no group of persons in Illinois in which the state federation is more interested than in the young women. They are the clubwomen of tomorrow; and for that reason, as Dr. Sadler frankly states, their seniors are interested in having them become interested in health promotion week, which will follow, appropriately enough, on the heels of girls' week.

The message stresses the importance of health as the foundation of efficiency, in college, home, or office, as well as the chief and real source of beauty.

Words of counsel will be given for the young woman who doesn't feel like getting up in the morning, and who needs spinach, eggs, milk, and exercise, especially housework.

Clubwomen are interested, too, in the company that young girls keep. Their observations have taught them to urge the young to show quick disapproval and dismissal of the young man who does not conduct himself properly. The secret of charm is to make a boy feel he must climb to reach the goal of sincere happiness. But the girl's judgment and discretion count for more in the beginning than most girls realize.

"Clubwomen are interested in you young girls," says the message in closing. "You have seventy thousand friends in Illinois who are looking forward to your debuts; to the time when you will take our places in the club life of the state."

MRS. FREDERICK C. JUSTICE.
[Moffett Photo.]

The Southern Woman's club, of which Mrs. Paul Chamberlain Boomer is the retiring president, will celebrate its fifteenth anniversary at a spring luncheon on Thursday at the Edgewater Beach hotel. The purposes and attainments of the club are given briefly in today's news.

Dr. Lena K. Sadler, state chairman of child welfare for the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs, has prepared a message for young girls for the week of April 26, to be known as Health Promotion week. The dependence of beauty, efficiency, and success upon good health are points stressed in this message, which the state federation is distributing, and excerpts from which are given in the club news today.

Mrs. Frederick C. Justice, acting president of the Edgemere Woman's club, is in charge of arrangements for an all day business and social session and the annual spring luncheon of the club, to be held on Tuesday at the Webster hotel.

Southern Club at Fifteenth Birthday

THE principal 1925 achievement of the Southern Woman's club, which closes its fifteenth season this month, has been the planting of forty elm trees along the Dixie highway. This is but a beginning of the club's plan to plant a long stretch of elms, which will be evidence of its interest in forest preservation as well as sentiment for the land of its forbears.

Since the club was founded the ideals of the original members have been preserved in the programs and undertakings. The membership has increased more than 100 during the incumbency of Mrs. Paul C. Boomer as president.

Meetings are held twice a month in the Fine Arts building. Various subjects, including civics, music, art, travel, and literature, are presented by competent speakers.

This year's annual tour, sponsored by the art department, was through the Chinese section of the Field museum and was preceded by a lecture on that country by the official lecturer.

The club also has an annual children's Christmas party and a night for the husbands of members. Mrs. Louis W. Hall is program chairman.

Last summer a lawn fête at the residence of Mrs. Edgar F. Alden in Winnetka netted a fine sum for the Tallulah Falls, Ga., Industrial School for Girls, in which the club has a deep interest. The proceeds of the annual card party also are given to charity and worthy causes.

During the last year the club has contributed to the Chicago Woman's shelter, the Chicago Junior School for Boys, the Salvation Army, the Hyde Park Neighborhood club, the Park Ridge School for Girls, THE TRIBUNE ice fund, the Court of Domestic Relations, the Alabama College for Girls, the soldiers' radio fund, and the Christmas party fund.

Two hundred ex-service men at the Great Lakes hospital were given a Thanksgiving party, where each received gifts in addition to refreshments and a program.

The annual spring luncheon, to be held on Thursday at the Edgewater Beach hotel, will conclude the club activities until autumn, when the new officers will plan the coming season.

DOWNTOWN CLUBS

Mrs. Edward E. Reininger has arranged the program for the meeting of the Chicago Outdoor Art league on Tuesday at 12:30 o'clock at the Chicago Woman's club. Miss Etta Q. Gee, Mrs. George E. Watson, and James H. Burdette will speak.

There will be a meeting of the I Will Woman's club on Tuesday at 1 o'clock.

St. Catherine's Mission society will give a card party tomorrow afternoon at the tearoom of The Fair. The proceeds will go toward aiding the work of the Sisters of the Blessed Sacrament. Miss Margaret A. Doyle is in charge of arrangements.

The third order of St. Dominic will give a card party on Wedensday evening at the Great Northern hotel, for the benefit of the Chinese missions.

Club Ethics

By Maude Swalm Evans.

The historian carried a sheaf of papers when she came to the club luncheon table.

"I've been delving into the early history of the woman's club movement," she announced, "and I've found some interesting bits regarding its beginning."

"Didn't know it had a beginning—thought it always was," voiced the committee chairman.

"Its generally accepted beginning," stated the historian, "was with the organization of Sorosis, in New York, in 1869, although Indiana has records of the Minerva club, organized in that state ten years earlier."

"Indiana!" ejaculated the treasurer. "She's nailed down about every prominent author and poet that's come out of the middle west so far, and now she's trying to nail down the women's clubs!"

"No use arguing with records," reproved the historian. "However, it's the beginning of Sorosis that attracted my attention. It seems that the women authors and journalists of New York asked, and were refused, the privilege of attending a dinner given to Charles Dickens by the men of the New York Press club, and so the women, in protest, and to 'show 'em,' organized a club of their own—Sorosis."

"I'll wager those men would have thought twice before refusing if they'd had an idea of what they were starting," put in the committee chairman.

"The women had all sorts of difficulties, of course," continued the historian, "not only the scorn and ridicule of the men, but of many women, also; but they did finally convince the members of the Press club that they meant business. Then the press invited Sorosis to a breakfast. The men sang and talked and did stunts, and the women sat and listened. Shortly after, Sorosis gave a tea for the press. This time the women did the singing, and talking, and stunting, and the men sat and listened. It was an eye opener for the brothers of the pen. They enjoyed themselves so much that they gave a dinner later; this time the men and women were equally represented on the program."

"They were good sports, anyway, those boys of the old days," conceded the treasurer.

Miss Viola McClory is social chairman of the Joyce Kilmer league, which will hold its annual charity card party at the Edgewater Beach hotel on Saturday at 2 o'clock. The proceeds will go toward the maintenance of a crib at St. Vincent's Infant asylum.

THE OUTLINE OF SCIENCE

Edited by Prof. J. Arthur Thomson

WEIRD PARASITIC WAYS.

When one organism lives in or on another (its "host"), gets its food from it, has its life history inextricably bound up with it, and is not beneficial but rather injurious in its influence, we speak of parasitism. But a clear-cut definition is impossible; many parasites do very little harm to their hosts unless these get out of condition; many parasites are unimportant unless they get into some vulnerable part of the body; many external parasites clean up their host's skin. A parasite may become a symbion, as has probably occurred in the case of the heather fungus. There are many degrees of parasitism, from external hangers-on like fleas and lice to internal boarders like tapeworms and threadworms. There is also an important distinction between parasites that live in the food canal of a host, sharing in the digested food, as tapeworms do, and those that prey upon the living tissues, like the liver fluke, which feeds on the blood of the sheep's liver. It is not in the interest of parasites to kill their host—that is lopping off the branch on which they are seated. Perhaps the trypanosome, which causes sleeping sickness in man, is not so much a parasite as a predacious infusorian devouring man from within as a lion might do from without. A very important consideration is that a parasite often establishes a live-and-let-live compromise with its host and nothing remarkable happens unless the parasite is transferred to a new host which is not in any way accustomed to such an intruder. Thus transference to man is, as it were, an accidental episode in the life cycle of the trypanosome of sleeping sickness—not that the life cycle is as yet clear.

It is important to see parasitism in its proper perspective: it is a way of evading part of the struggle for existence. Just as some animals have discovered caves others have discovered hosts. The discovery usually means abundant food and safe shelter; it often involves a riskful life history. It is an interesting fact that in some types, e. g., among crustaceans and insects, only the females are parasites, which suggests that the habit sometimes arose in connection with egg laying and the protection of the offspring.

Adaptations of Parasites.

Evolution is not always progressive, and it is illustrated in the adaptations of parasites as well as in the adaptations of birds. Parasites tend to go back, but their very retrogressions may be effectively adaptive to the conditions of their inglorious life of ease. Let us take the case of a tapeworm, floating in the human intestine amid the half-digested food, and moored by its head to the wall.

It is safe from all enemies (unless, perhaps, the medical practitioner with his vermifuge); it floats in a plethora of food, which it can absorb by the whole surface of its long tapelike body; it can live and thrive with a minimum of oxygen, and it has a mysterious "anti-body" which preserves it from being digested by its host; it has on its head muscular adhesive suckers, and, in some species, attaching hooks as well, so that it is firmly anchored to the wall of the intestine; it sojourns in warmth and comfort without any expensive sense organs to keep up; with its low type of nervous system it lives a life of dull sentience. It has attained to what economists have called complete material well-being.

But there is the seamy side of the tapeworm's "life of ease"—namely, degeneracy. There are no sense-organs; the nervous system is of a very low order, without any brain; the muscular system consists of smooth muscle cells which contract sluggishly; there is no mouth or food canal. The reproductive system is complex, but there is a suggestion of degeneracy in the frequent occurrence of self-fertilization—a very rare thing among animals. Some tapeworms produce eight million eggs, and prolific multiplication is certainly common among internal parasites. There are two ways of looking at this. Abundant and stimulating food, such as parasites often command, tends to make the individual prolific. This is the individual and physiological aspect. But the continuance of the race is often very difficult in the case of a parasite that requires two hosts, as so many do, and we may conclude that those types which were constitutionally capable of prolific reproduction would be the successful survivors. It cannot be doubted that many animals enter the door of parasitism, but fail to leave it open for their progeny. So they die out in their asylum. The astonishing thing is that so many have succeeded. The dog is known to have about forty different kinds of parasites; both man and the pig have more. In omnivorous types the alimentary

·ART AND ARTISTS·

Industrial Art School May Soon Be Reality Here

By Eleanor Jewett.

BY all odds the most important bit of art news this week is that which was announced a few days ago concerning the generous gift of $100,000 from the education department of the Rockefeller foundation for the furtherance and development of the Industrial Art school that is being established at the Art institute by the Association of Arts and Industries. Just now in France an exhibition of modern decorative and industrial art, international in scope, is being held. The United States, though invited to contribute, was unable to take part in the exhibition through lack of material. This new school may remedy that.

The Association of Arts and Industries, with headquarters at 230 East Ohio street, is back of the establishing of the Industrial Art school under the roof of the Art institute. Its proximity to the Art institute will mean many advantages to its students, which distance would deny them. For one, the institute has a remarkably fine and comprehensive library; for a second, the museum has splendid permanent exhibits and interesting modern transient exhibits; for a third, the institute has a growing art school of its own with an increasing roll of students and a roster of names of teachers that is remarkable; for a fourth, the institute is situated advantageously both from a civic and national standpoint. It is central. It calls from everywhere, and it goes everywhere—it, its work, its students, its influence, its teachers.

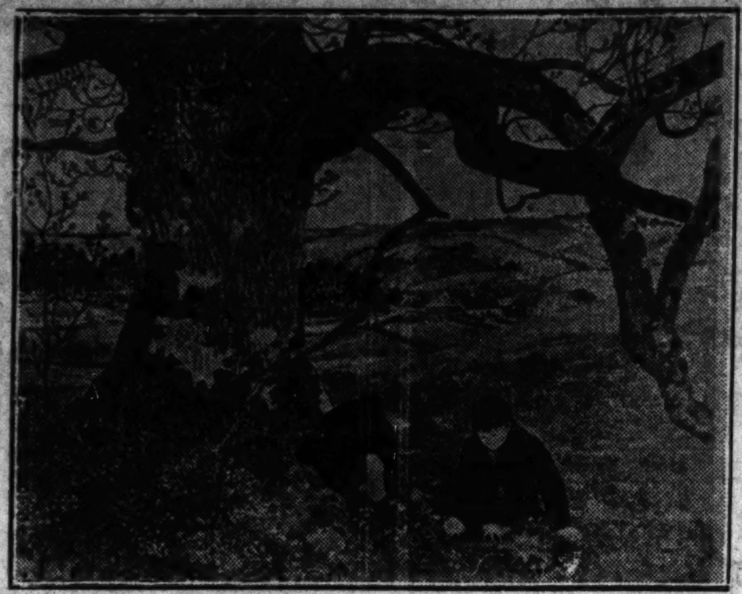
The new Industrial Art school has been discussed at length at various times during the last several years. It will be an achievement of slow growth, perhaps all the sturdier for that. The fundamental purpose underlying its being is the training of American young men and women as designers for the industries which are today as numberless as the sands of the sea. Instead of "Made in Germany," "Made in Japan," "Made in France," to cite but the three commonest nationalities we find on our novelties and toys, the Industrial Art school will provide a "Made in America" label.

The students will be trained for industries of all sorts. It is to be hoped the list will include billboards and fence advertisements. Among the acknowledged industries are furniture, printing, textiles, wall paper, interior decorating, ceramics, toys, advertising—in fact, all kinds of work and manufacturing in which design is a factor, and there are, if you pause and consider the matter, few in which it is not. Today the master designers in our industries are foreigners. We import them and seem proud to do so. We boast of bringing a leading man designer of women's clothes from Paris. We chuckle as we think how we stole him from Poiret. We had better conceal our theft. We may with greater pride point to the man whom France has stolen from us—for some purpose. So far our men have been safe. France wants none of us, along artistic lines. She can do it better herself.

It may not be always so. Industrial art schools flourish in France, Germany, Austria, Japan. Their exports flood our markets. We send abroad millions of dollars worth of raw material which is returned to us in a finished state and bought by us, giving the foreign countries enormous profits. Europe averages fifty and sixty art schools, schools of design and industrial art, to every country. We have only two schools in the United States. One is at Philadelphia and the other at Providence, R. I. The Chicago school is needed.

Mrs. Howard Spaulding Jr., Mrs. Edith Rockefeller McCormick, and Julius Rosenwald have become founders to the school, each contributing $25,000. A group of fifty individuals and firms headed by Col. William Nelson Pelouze have contributed $2,000 each to the project. Among those who are included in the group are James A. Patten, Harold Swift, A. G. Becker, William Wrigley Jr., Mrs. Albert Bigler, Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Worcester, Edward B. Butler, Martin Ryerson, George F. Porter, Alfred Decker, Thomas E. Donnelley, Samuel Insull, Adolph Karpen, and the estate of Charles A. Chapin.

The Art institute is supplying the space and the Association of Arts and Industries is raising an initial fund of $260,000 to build and equip the classrooms. Endowments and memorials may run the fund later up to the million dollar mark to insure its development into the greatest industrial art school in the country. Its establishment must come first. This, by the gift of the $100,000, is now a certainty.



"The Kite," by R. J. Enraght Moony, an English artist, will appear in the fifth annual international water color exhibition, which opens in the east wing galleries of the Art institute on May 1.

Although the United States was not able to join in the international industrial and decorative art exhibit at Paris, a commission has been appointed by Herbert Hoover, secretary of commerce, to visit it and report on such things as are important to the esthetic and industrial progress of our country. Charles R. Richards of New York, director of the Association of American Museums and an international authority on industrial art, has been appointed chairman of the committee.

Mrs. Howard Linn is chairman of the art gallery committee of the Woman's World's fair, which opened yesterday at the Furniture mart. She and her committee have brought together an unusually interesting and fine collection of paintings and sculpture, most of the pieces privately owned. Among them is the bust of the dancer, Anna Pavlowa, by Malvina Hoffman. The exhibit will be dealt with at length in next week's column.

The Palette and Chisel club announces its thirtieth annual exhibition of painting and sculpture by its members. The exhibit is arranged in the rooms of the club at 1012 North Dearborn street. It will continue to Saturday, May 2. Three prizes, of which two have been awarded, were incentives for the members to put their best foot forward in their contributions. The Municipal Art league prize was given to "Moonlight Sonata," by Rudolph Ingerle; the Charles Worcester prize of $200 was given to "The River Bank," by Edward Grigware; the third prize announced, the Palette and Chisel club gold medal, is to be given later by popular vote of the members of the club.

If you have a talented child in your family pay heed to this: The Bookshop for Boys and Girls, 270 Boylston street, Boston, announces an exhibit of children's drawings for July and August. It desires to include the art work of children in all parts of the country which has been done, whether at school or at home, under the freest possible conditions of self-expression. Mindful of the exhibit last fall of the work of Viennese school children under the care of Prof. Cizek—the exhibition was shown at the Art institute in September—this exhibit is an effort to equal and surpass it. Those interested may write to Elinor Whitney at the address of the bookshop given above.

Current exhibitions at the Art institute close next Friday, giving way to the International Water Color exhibit and sculpture by Ivan Mestrovic that open May 1. Before the cartoons of the Society of Mural Painters are removed from the walls, go once more and get another thrill from that tremendous drawing by Besnard of St. George killing the dragon. It is the most stupendous and vigorous piece of work we have seen in a long time. It is much too inspiring a drawing to have escape from our possession. The only consolation its going leaves is the assurance that we may meet it again—in the ceiling of the Comédie Française.

Another exhibit whose departure will leave a sad gap is that of sculpture by Nancy Cox-McCormack. As a rule, sculpture is rather a cold medium for portraiture. Mrs. McCormack has given the lie to the customary. Her portraits are warm with life; they pulse with vitality; their strength is a real quality; they are human and earthly, not stone effigies, but breathing people. The most exquisite is the "Lidia Rismonde." The best expression of the superlative in other qualities, such as strength, distinction, etc., is almost an impossibility to select. Each bust has its own best. One must see them all. They are almost the most satisfactory portraits in sculpture I have ever seen.

The Maurice Prendergast room is a gay weaving of decorative design, light, cheerful, amusing, a bit annoying and saccharinish at times, but well enough for the kind of painting it represents. It is a little confusing, so much pink and blue and green and white dripping and dropping and skipping here and there, alighting on each canvas in turn and then swirling away to its neighbor; the massed impression of this perpetual candy storm is more than a little stifling. It rather makes you long for a pure draught of air, from the purple deserts of Edward B. Butler, the cold mountain lakes of Oliver Dennett Grover, or the nunlike aspens, slim and virginal, of the Taos painters, Hennings, Ufer, and the rest.

The work by C. O. Woodbury is exceedingly interesting. It has a charm that grows with familiarity. There are several portraits in his exhibit that claim place with the best one has seen among portrait etchings. His flings into the chaotic may be understood in the knowledge of his ability to draw. He plays a marvelous and fanciful tale on the possibilities in ancient gnarled trees. They stand, these trees, like travelers, or witches, pilgrims, or evil spirits. The pelican, too, a bird the orient delights in, is a subject for several delightful studies.

Dudley Crafts Watson will speak on Saturday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock in Fullerton hall to children of the members of the Art institute, on "Designing for Ourselves."

Tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock in Fullerton hall, Mr. Watson will continue his talks on home crafts with a lecture on "Batik." For the Monday following his subject will be "Block Prints."

Everything new from top to toe! That is what Spring is for—and is at least one reason why the season is so popular.

But, heretofore, many women—especially those who are inclined to be Stout—have had to forego the pleasure of completing their Spring wardrobes with shoes that would properly set off new gowns and frocks. The only shoes they could get were either "frumpy-looking" or too painful to wear. That is all different now. ADAPTO Shoes, made especially for Stout women, may be had in all the charming models of the Spring mode—and, best of all, they are supremely comfortable.

NEWS OF THE RELIGIOUS WORLD

Religious Training Convention to Be Held in Milwaukee

By the Rev. W. B. Norton.

THE Religious Education association, which was founded in Chicago in 1893 and still has its national headquarters here at 308 North Michigan avenue, will hold its twenty-second annual convention in Milwaukee, Wis., beginning next Wednesday and continuing to Saturday noon.

Since the death of Dr. Henry F. Cope, the general secretary, Dr. Theodore Soares has been acting general secretary and Dr. Clifford Manshardt assistant general secretary. The election of a new general secretary may be one of the live issues of the convention, as Dr. Manshardt has announced his intention of going as a missionary to Bombay, India.

The day meetings of the convention which will be open for discussion will be held at the Pfister hotel, which will be convention headquarters. The evening meetings which will be of a popular character will be held in the Immanuel Presbyterian church, of which Dr. Howard Agnew Johnston, formerly president of the Chicago Church federation, is the pastor.

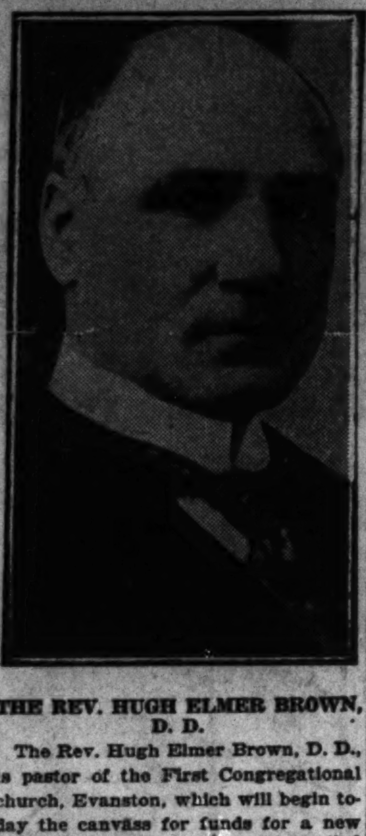
Among the Chicago speakers will be Prof. Gerald B. Smith, Prof. Harris F. Rall, Evanston; Rabbi Louis L. Mann; Superintendent W. J. Hamilton, public schools, Oak Park; the Rev. J. B. McKendry, Oak Park, and Prof. Frank G. Ward. Other speakers will be Dr. Donald J. Cowling, president of the Religious Education association; Dr. Herbert W. Gates, Dr. Alfred P. Fitch, Dr. S. Glenn Atkins, Dr. Benjamin Winchester, Dr. W. P. Merrill, Dr. Ernest Thomas, Canada; and Superintendent M. C. Potter, public schools, Milwaukee.

The Presbyterian young people of Chicago will hold a rally today at 3 o'clock in the Chicago temple, Clark and Washington streets, under the auspices of the Young People's federation of the Chicago presbytery. The purpose of the meeting is to consider plans for the erection of a young people's building at Camp Gray, near Saugatuck, Mich. Dr. William Chalmers Covert, general secretary of the board of Christian education, for twenty years pastor of the First Presbyterian church, Chicago, and Frank D. Getty, associate secretary for young people's work for the Presbyterian denomination, will be the speakers. Dr. Covert will preach at 11 a. m. and at 8 p. m. in the Fourth Presbyterian church, 880 North Michigan avenue.

The corner stone of the $175,000 Lutheran Training school at Addison, Ill., will be laid today at 2:30. The addresses will be made by the Rev. Otto C. A. Boecler and the Rev. L. Schmidke. Other Lutheran news of interest follows: The Rev. Mr. Boecler, who speaks at the Addison corner stone laying, will preach today his farewell sermon as pastor of St. Luke's church, Greenview and Belmont avenues. He has been called as professor of homiletics and church history at Concordia seminary, St. Louis. St. Luke's church has more than 3,000 members. The Wunder dormitory of Concordia college, Milwaukee, Wis., named in honor of the Rev. H. Wunder, for sixty-two years pastor of the First St. Paul's Evangelical Lutheran church, Chicago, will be dedicated today. The Rev. Henry Kowert, pastor of First St. Paul's church, Chicago, and the Rev. H. Daib, Merrill, Wis., will be the speakers.

The Rev. Herbert John Rossington, for eighteen years pastor of the First Presbyterian [Unitarian] church of Belfast, Ireland, will speak this morning at 10:30 o'clock at the People's church, Pantheon theater, 4650 Sheridan road, Dr. Preston Bradley, pastor; and this evening at 8 at the First Unitarian church, 5700 Woodlawn avenue, the Rev. Von Ogden Vogt, pastor. He will also address the Liberal Ministers' union tomorrow noon and a banquet of Unitarians at the Chicago City club tomorrow evening. The Rev. Mr. Rossington is one of five Unitarian clergymen from England who have come to the United States to celebrate next month in Boston the centennial of the founding of Unitarianism here. The other four visiting clergymen are the Rev. Lawrence Redfern, the Rev. R. Nicol Cross, the Rev. J. Cyril Flower, and the Rev. Alfred Hall.

Girls' week, which began yesterday and will continue until next Saturday, will be featured today with sermons and talks in the various churches. The motto of the week is "Our Girls and a Better World." Another sentiment is "To do for our girls what boys' weeks is doing for the boys." At the Chicago Temple, Clark and Washington streets, the pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal church, Dr. John Thompson, will preach on the subject, "Modern Girls—Their Rights."



THE REV. HUGH ELMER BROWN, D. D.

The Rev. Hugh Elmer Brown, D. D., is pastor of the First Congregational church, Evanston, which will begin today the canvass for funds for a new $500,000 church and social center called the annex. Both the church and annex are to be built after the style of the New England meeting house. Dr. Brown began his ministry in Evanston in September, 1918. He came here from the Pilgrim Congregational church, Seattle, Wash. He is a graduate of Whitman college, Walla Walla, Wash., and of the Yale university school of religion. In his college days he was captain of the football and baseball teams and a leader in an intercollegiate debating team which won eight favorable decisions. He served for nine months in the world war as religious director and in speaking for the Y. M. C. A.

At the Pilgrim Congregational church, Oak Park, the Rev. Ernest Bourner Allen, D. D., pastor, a group of foreign students from the University of Chicago will be guests. They arrived yesterday afternoon, and will be entertained throughout today and night. They will assist in the morning service, and in the evening four of them, representing different nations, will speak on the general theme, "The Call to Christian World-Wide Fellowship." Among the students will be five young women.

The St. Paul's Reformed Episcopal church, at Winchester avenue and Adams street, has been named the Bishop Fallows Memorial, and the Rev. William Russell Collins, D. D., who has been acting rector for the month, has accepted the call to become the regular rector. The late Bishop Fallows, one of the best known ministers in America, was for many years rector of St. Paul's, which now bears his name as a supplementary title, the name of St. Paul's also being retained. Dr. Collins is general and financial secretary of the New York and Philadelphia synod of the Reformed Episcopal church, with headquarters in the theological seminary, Philadelphia.

Bishop Willard Brewing of Toronto, Canada, will administer the rite of confirmation today at 4 o'clock at the Bishop Fallows Memorial church, at 11 a. m. at the Bishop Cheney Memorial, Yale avenue and 70th street, and at 8 p. m. at St. Mark's church, 2445 North Washtenaw avenue.

Masses will be said today for the first time at St. Timothy's Catholic church at Rosemont and Washtenaw avenues, at 8 and 10 o'clock, the latter being high mass. The new pastor, the Rev. James P. Kiely, will officiate. Plans are being formulated to erect a parish school.

There will be a reception today at 3:30 into the guard of honor at Notre Dame Catholic church at Oregon avenue and Sibley street. The Very Rev. Mgr. C. J. Quille, general secretary of the eucharist congress to take place in 1926, will give a special talk on duties of the guard in regard to their mission at the congress.

The annual retreat for the members of the conferences and councils of the Society of St. Vincent de Paul of the entire archdiocese of Chicago will be held this week, Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and next Sunday at 8 p. m. at the Cathedral of the Holy Name, Superior and North State streets. The retreat conferences will be given by the Rev. Charles J. McCarthy, C. M. vice president of De Paul university.

The Rev. Charles H. Derr, twenty years in China, will lecture this evening with lantern slides at the Bethany Presbyterian church, Humboldt boulevard and Cortland street, the Rev. W. J. Ohan, pastor.

Are you reducing?

Scientific reduction is not a matter of enforced perspiration—not at all. It is a matter of diet, exercise and massage.

The finest corsets and reducing garments, made with Konlastic, the knitted elastic, allow the body to breathe freely and evenly—at all times and under all conditions—while, with every change in motion and posture, they gently massage the excess flesh away. Ask your doctor.

Konlastic
"the knitted elastic"

with its all-way elasticity, adjusts itself instantly and naturally to all curves in all directions, holding and moulding the figure without restraint.

Look at any fine corset or reducing garment—made with Konlastic. See the poses in the fabric! . . . These poses mean everything to your comfort and health; everything to your sustained youth. Ask your doctor.

"A little book about Happiness" gives facts and viewpoints that have a definite bearing on personal beauty, charm and poise. Finally and definitely, it places the corset where it belongs in the scheme of things—not merely a garment, but rather a part of you . . . the thing that is affecting you for better or worse, directly or indirectly, every minute of every day.

This "little book about Happiness" is free—at corset departments. Or write me, mention the store where you buy corsets and I will mail you a copy. Address: Pamela Hill, care James R. Kendrick Co., Inc., Germantown, Philadelphia.

THE OUTLINE OF SCIENCE

Edited by Prof. J. Arthur Thomson

parasites are always more numerous than in those with a specialized diet. Some constitutions seem to favor or attract parasites; thus the European oak trees harbor about a hundred different kinds of gall flies.

It is not only the number of different kinds of parasites in one host that strikes us, it is also the numerical strength of one kind. Thus there may be 10,000 individuals of one kind of threadworm in the intestine of one grouse, the minute larvae being swallowed along with the leaves and flowers of the heather.

Another interesting point is that particular kinds of parasites are usually restricted to one kind of host, one reason being that they cannot be adapted to a variety of surroundings. When the parasite requires two kinds of hosts for the completion of its life cycle the host of the adult is in many cases an animal that habitually eats the host of the larval stage. Thus the dog eats the rabbit, the bladder worm of the rabbit develops into a tapeworm of the dog. Similarly, the bladder worm of the mouse becomes the tapeworm of the cat. Man gets his two commonest tapeworms (Tænia saginata and Tænia solium) by eating imperfectly cooked flesh of ox and pig respectively, for these are the hosts of the bladder worm stages.

What is it exactly that parasites do to their hosts? Some absorb a good deal of digested food from the intestine; some perforate the wall of the food-canal; some cause inflammation by vitiating the surrounding tissues; some block passages, even blood vessels; the mite of so-called Isle of Wight bee-disease blocks certain air-tubes and cuts off air from the muscles, besides feeding on the bees' blood; the sturdieworm of the sheep presses upon the brain or the spinal cord, causing serious locomotor derangements; some tapeworms and threadworms secrete a toxin; some peculiar crustacean parasites, e. g., Sacculina, destroy the reproductive organs of male crabs. In short, the influence of parasites is very manifold.

The Romance of Parasitism.

There is something repugnant in most parasites; we cannot look at them without some ethical recoil. All the same there is an astounding, undeniably romantic element in the life-histories of many parasites. Let us take the liver-fluke as an instance.

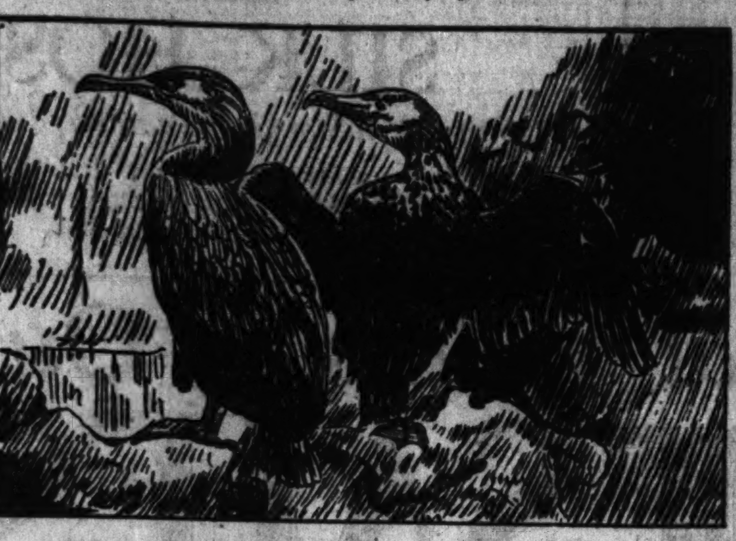
The adult liver-fluke (Distomum hepaticum) lies like a flat leaf in the tributaries of the bile-duct of the sheep and some other mammals. It is about an inch long. It sucks in the blood of the liver, and it causes the disease expressively called liver-rot. Like most internal parasites, it is very prolific, each being capable of producing 50,000 eggs, which are fertilized by sperms from the same animal—a rare state of affairs called autogamy. The developing unshelled eggs pass down the bile-duct, down the intestine and on to the ground. If they land on a dry place, such as a pathway, they soon die; if they come to rest in a damp place, e. g., among wet grass, they continue developing for a time. But they will not come to anything unless they reach a pool of water. Thus drainage of pasture-land has greatly reduced the amount of liver-rot.

In the pool of water a microscopic, pear-shaped, ciliated larva escapes from the egg-shell and swims about actively. It has two minute eye-spots, but no mouth or means of feeding. So it cannot continue swimming for more than a limited period, about eight hours.

During its swimming it comes near or in contact with many things, such as stick and stone, water-weeds, and small animals, but it answers back to nothing, save the touch of the little water-snail (Lymanæus truncatulus), which is very common in pools. When the larval liver-fluke touches the mollusc it immediately enters, finding the breathing aperture a convenient doorway. We do not understand the specific irritability of the tiny brainless larva which leads it to respond to the touch of the only creature which will allow of a continuance of its life history. It is a racially enregistered responsiveness, but these are only words hiding our lack of understanding. If there is no water snail in the pool, or if the larva does not find it during the eight hours' limit of its free swimming, it will come to naught.

Inside the water snail the larva loses its cilia and eye spots, and becomes a sporocyst; this gives rise by means of spore cells (germ cells requiring no fertilization) to 5-8 larvæ of another type called rediæ. These give rise in the same way to 8-12 more rediæ, and these to 12-20 larvæ of a third type called cercariæ. These are the young flukes at last, with a bilobed food canal, the beginnings of suckers and reproductive organs, and a locomotor tail. If a water wagtail were to swallow the infected water snail at this stage, that would be an end of the parasites as well. This is another chance against [illegible].

From the moribund snail the tailed larvæ wriggle out; they swim in the water, they swarm up blades of grass, they encyst as tiny white spots, losing their tail in the process. If the sun withers the grass the whole story is at an end. The only event that will secure continuance is that a sheep eat the blade of grass bearing the tiny encysted larva. From the food canal of the sheep the cercaria migrates up the bile duct to the liver, and in a few weeks becomes mature. In some cases the full grown flukes die in the sheep's liver after reproduction; in other cases they migrate out of the liver, down the food canal, and die on the ground. The most important general fact is that the life history of the liver fluke shows a succession of risks of complete failure. Had it not been for their prolific multiplication, liver flukes would have passed off the stage long ago.



CORMORANTS—They are greedy fish eaters, but it must be remembered that they feed on many fishes, such as eels, which devour the fry of useful food fishes. They also keep a check on some other fry eating animals, such as crabs. The intricacy of the web of life is such that it is occasionally difficult to get a clear issue for or against a bird, as far as man's interests are concerned. There is often something to be said on both sides. In China and Japan tame cormorants are used by fishermen, a leather collar being placed around the neck to prevent them swallowing what they seize. The cormorant usually nests on the ledges of cliffs. When feeding its young the mother takes a great part of the chick's head into its mouth. [Photo: W. E. Berridge.]

Pearls and Parasites.

It sometimes happens that an irritant body, such as a grain of sand, gets in between the shell of a pearl oyster (or a fresh water mussel) and the underlying skin or mantle, which lines the shell and is always adding to it. Round the intrusion the skin secretes layer after layer of mother of pearl, or nacre, and a sort of pearl is formed. But this is not a true pearl. It is usually adherent to the shell and has a solid foreign body, sometimes opaque, at its core.

A finer result is obtained when a tiny hole is bored in the shell and a rounded granule of mother of pearl is slipped in between the shell and the skin. The hole is sealed up and the "pearl" is left to grow. In this case the result is more homogeneous, for the core is of mother of pearl. But this never yields what is called a "fine pearl."

An improvement on the previous procedure consisted in introducing into the skin of mussels little fragments of living tissue. In the course of time these were found encased in concentric layers of mother of pearl, yielding reputable pearls. It is probable that this method is capable of great improvement.

What happens in natural conditions is rather different. In the common edible mussel a pearl may be formed from a sac of skin cells surrounding an intruding fluke larva. The skin cells secrete a sepulchre for the fluke—delicate concentric layers of mother of pearl. As the core is the tenuous remains of a very delicate and minute parasite, the pearl that results has considerable opalescence. Similarly, some naturalists believe that the fine pearls of the oriental pearl oyster are formed round intruding larvæ of a tapeworm, but conclusive proof is wanting.

There is considerable reason for believing that pearls often arise round nuclei of the substance called conchin, which is secreted by the skin as the organic foundation of the calcareous shell. A little blob of this clear secretion, formed in a skin sac as the result of some slight disturbance in the ordinary routine of shell making, may form the center of a really fine pearl, which is built up of numerous concentric layers of nacre.

In connection with evolution it is often asked how natural selection, i. e., nature's sifting and singling, can be expected to act on the little finicking details which are so characteristic of living creatures. To this reasonable question Darwin himself gave the answer by the emphasis he laid on the web of life. For in the gradually evolved and ever complexified system of interrelations there is a sieve of extraordinary delicacy, which will discriminate between even minute fluctuations to the plus or the minus side. An apparently trivial new departure is tested in reference to the established system of interrelations. A shibboleth may decide the fate of a species.

I WANT SEVEN SALESMEN WHO WANT TO EARN $10,000 A YEAR OR MORE.

These opportunity seekers must be high class, clean cut, intelligent, well educated specialty salesmen, between 25 and 35 years of age.

We now have over fifty salesmen in the field, and new class will fill our territories.

Our high man, fully experienced, earned over $1,800 in March. A man with only two months' experience earned over $850. A deaf man earned over $600—he can hear "yes" but not "no." Average for entire sales force $378—many weak sisters and beginners among them.

This is a specialty line for doctors and dentists, rather technical, but complete instruction and training is given. As soon as you demonstrate sufficient knowledge and ability for the intelligent presentation of our products you will be assigned a territory and placed on a drawing account commensurate with your ability.

Salesmen must have good clothes, an agreeable personality, and be able in a diplomatic and convincing way to obtain a close at the first interview. Men who have successfully sold ideas, stock or bonds can qualify. Demonstration is tangible, thoroughly practical, and fully proven, and every doctor or dentist is a prospect.

This company is the largest in the world in its field.

Interviews by appointment only. Phone Sales Manager, Diversey 7425.

Here is a co-operative plan that will appeal to you.

Here is a building which is the last word in construction and appointments.

Here is a location that stands alone. The park, golf course, and Yacht Harbor close by. A beautiful view at the lake, also, serves to greatly enhance the value of YOUR home.

Six spacious rooms, two baths. We are sorry that we have no sevens left to offer you.

May we acquaint you with the details?

LARGE MANUFACTURERS, ATTENTION!

To large outside manufacturers seeking location in Chicago or Chicago manufacturers who are compelled to expand, I offer a most exceptional opportunity, approximately 350,000 sq. ft., with rare shipping facilities. The main line of one of the largest R. R.'s in the country adjoins the property with a track frontage of nearly 1,200 feet. Direct connections with the main line of another road equally important alongside the property, and with the Chicago Belt line; also 1,200 ft. of frontage on Deep Waterway canal. The very best railway and waterway facilities that any point in the country affords. Its conspicuous location also affords unusual advertising advantages. The lot is 110 ft. front by 175 ft. deep, and has a marketable valuation of $19,000. The home is of stucco construction with Yaryan heat—no coal, ashes, or oil to worry about. Spacious central hall with music room on left and fine living room on right; natural fireplace, of course. Through living room, one enters the dining room, which is of unusual size. A good sized kitchen completes the 1st floor. Both front and rear steps to the 2d floor, which has five splendid chambers, with 2 tile baths. Ballroom on third floor. The unusually fair price is made for the express purpose of a quick sale—not because the owner needs money but because he is leaving the country. Your inspection, by appointment, is invited.

Confidence

Our record of 12 years' standing for fair dealing has firmly established this concern in the CONFIDENCE of Chicago's used car buying public.

Our policy in selling used cars has been the nucleus of our success in gaining such CONFIDENCE.

OUR POLICY

TRUTH, just a plain, candid statement of facts, is required of every member of our organization. We will not exchange our honor for your money.

CONFIDENCE is the basis of all trade, with mutual satisfaction to both buyer and seller.

How foolish, then, it would be to destroy that confidence by urging you to buy a car that is not right!

Buy now! with CONFIDENCE.

Sensible Investing.

If you are looking forward toward the future—looking to the time when you will have a steady and sizeable income apart from the money you make at your occupation—you will not be speculating or putting your money into securities of doubtful safety.

One sometimes makes large profits from speculation, but much more often he loses. And if he makes good profits at the start he is very apt to keep on speculating until sooner or later he loses.

A good savings bank is an excellent place in which to put one's savings. It affords a high degree of safety and makes the funds readily available in case one needs them at any time. It also pays a small return for the use of the money, the prevailing rate here being 3 per cent per annum. This is the logical place to start building up savings, but the low rate of return makes the process of acquiring sufficient funds to bring in a large income a slow one.

After one has saved up a hundred dollars or so he should begin to think of increasing the income that it is capable of bringing him. He should begin to look for safe investments where the same amount of money can be made to bring in perhaps twice the income he is getting on his deposits.

There are on the market today many sound bonds yielding as high as 5 and even 6 per cent (occasionally even more) where one's money is amply protected. The majority of these bonds can be bought in denominations as low as $100, so that they are within the means of the small as well as the large investor. Many of these bonds have an active market, so that they can readily be sold if one needs the money, and on many he can borrow as much as 75 or 80 per cent of the face value at any time when he needs cash temporarily, but does not wish to dispose of his bond.

Great care must be used, of course, in selecting a bond, as there are bonds of all grades. One should carefully investigate and know just what is in back of the bond and all its terms before investing. In this respect we are glad to be of assistance.

The investor who makes it a practice to put his savings into safe bonds and to keep adding to his holdings as he is able will be surprised to find how rapidly his income grows and his assets pile up. Such a one is building for his future along sensible, conservative lines, with neither the hazards of speculation nor the modest returns from the savings bank to impede his progress.

CHICAGO CURB MARKET

Active trading continued in local unlisted securities last week, with a somewhat mixed price trend and a generally higher level of values at the close.

Elgin National Watch, ex dividend $1, was in good demand at 66, with practically no stock available near current figures. Godchaux Sugar preferred moved up from low sales at 35 to closing transactions at 40, at which price additional stock was wanted. Kellogg Company advanced almost 15 points to high sale at 65, but later reacted, stock being offered at 61 with little interest showing on the buying side. Acme Steel Goods old stock was in demand and 5 points higher, 110 being freely bid. Northwestern Yeast was traded in around 170, closing at 168 to 172. The bid price of American Seating improved about 10 points to 133 without attracting sellers. Little change was noted in Bucyrus at 132 to 135.

After selling at 67, By-Products Coke was offered at 65½, with buyers at 64½. A better demand was noted for Beatrice Creamery at 62¼ to 63¼. The preferred was unchanged at 104 to 106. Creamery Package full voting and nonvoting shares were [illegible] at 30 to 31, and 29½ to 30½, respectively. Sullivan Machinery reflected a decline of about 3 points, when stock was offered at 49½. Goodman Manufacturing eased off a point to sales between 47½ and 48¾. McCord Manufacturing common advanced fractionally to high sales at 5¾, later being offered at this price with buyers at 5⅝. The preferred held its previous advance of 2 points at 44 to 46. First State Pawners continued in demand at 120. Few transactions took place in Butler Brothers, the close showing little change at 33⅝ to 33¾.

Transactions in Albert Pick [illegible] ranged between 95 and 97, and the close represented a small loss at 95¼ to 96½. Interstate Iron and Steel lost a full point in selling between 93 and 94. Kraft Cheese preferred was in better supply at 104, with buyers around 102½. Little interest was noted in Wahl preferred, closing at 70¼ bid, 73 asked.

Trading in the public utility issues was in general at a higher level. Adirondack Power and Light rose 3 points to high sales at 59, but later sold off for a loss of 1 point at 55. American Gas and Electric was stronger, rising to 75 and closing up 3 points at 73¾. American Light and Traction common continued to recover from its previous decline, transactions ranging from 137 to 140½. It showed a firm undertone at the close around 140. American Power and Light was in demand, with high and last sales between 56 and 57. American Super Power "B" changed hands at 29¾. Associated Gas and Electric was traded in at higher levels throughout, rising over 3 points to 29½, and closing firm at 28¼ to 29.

Commonwealth Power continued to advance, stock changing hands at 116¼ in the late trading. A few transactions took place in the warrants around 35, an improvement of 2 points. Electric Bond and Share advanced 4 points to sales above 60. Although Lehigh Power Securities sold up to 10[illegible], it failed to hold this gain, closing practically unchanged at 102 to 103. National Power and Light was in better supply, selling down from 253 to 239, and closing with a net loss of about 7 points at 242. Tennessee Electric Power was strong in the late trading, advancing sharply to high sales at [illegible], but closed with net advance of 2 points at [illegible]. A few transactions took place in United Gas and Electric at 30, an improvement of 1 point. Western Power sold up to high and last sales at 34½. The preferred, however, was easier, declining to sales at [illegible], and recovering but slightly for a loss of over 1 point at 90.

A business can be sold easily

The year 1925 promises to be a year of increased production and greater business activity. More people than ever are looking for business opportunities, and are either investing their money in new enterprises or are purchasing established businesses. There is an increasingly greater demand for businesses, both large and small, and an owner who wishes to sell for any reason should have little difficulty in finding a buyer.

The difficulty experienced in selling would depend entirely upon the method used to interest prospects. If a Want Ad medium of well known efficiency and proven resultfulness is used, selling will be prompt and economical. The Tribune is such a Want Ad medium, and reports from successful advertisers prove that Tribune Want Ad prestige and public interest is a matter of actual fact. This Tribune Want Ad, ordered for January 7 and 11, brought a buyer immediately:

BATTERY AND IGNITION
service station; blvd. corner, W. S. Electric test bench and full equip. Barg. for cash or easy terms. Seeley 7683 for partic.

Mr. MacLennan, former owner of the MacLennan Service Station, 2100 W. Jackson Street, gave this report on his Want Ad:

"I ordered my Tribune 'Business Chance' Want Ad for two days, Wednesday and Sunday. There were several immediate replies, three or four of them from excellent prospects, and the deal was successfully closed before the ad appeared for the second time."

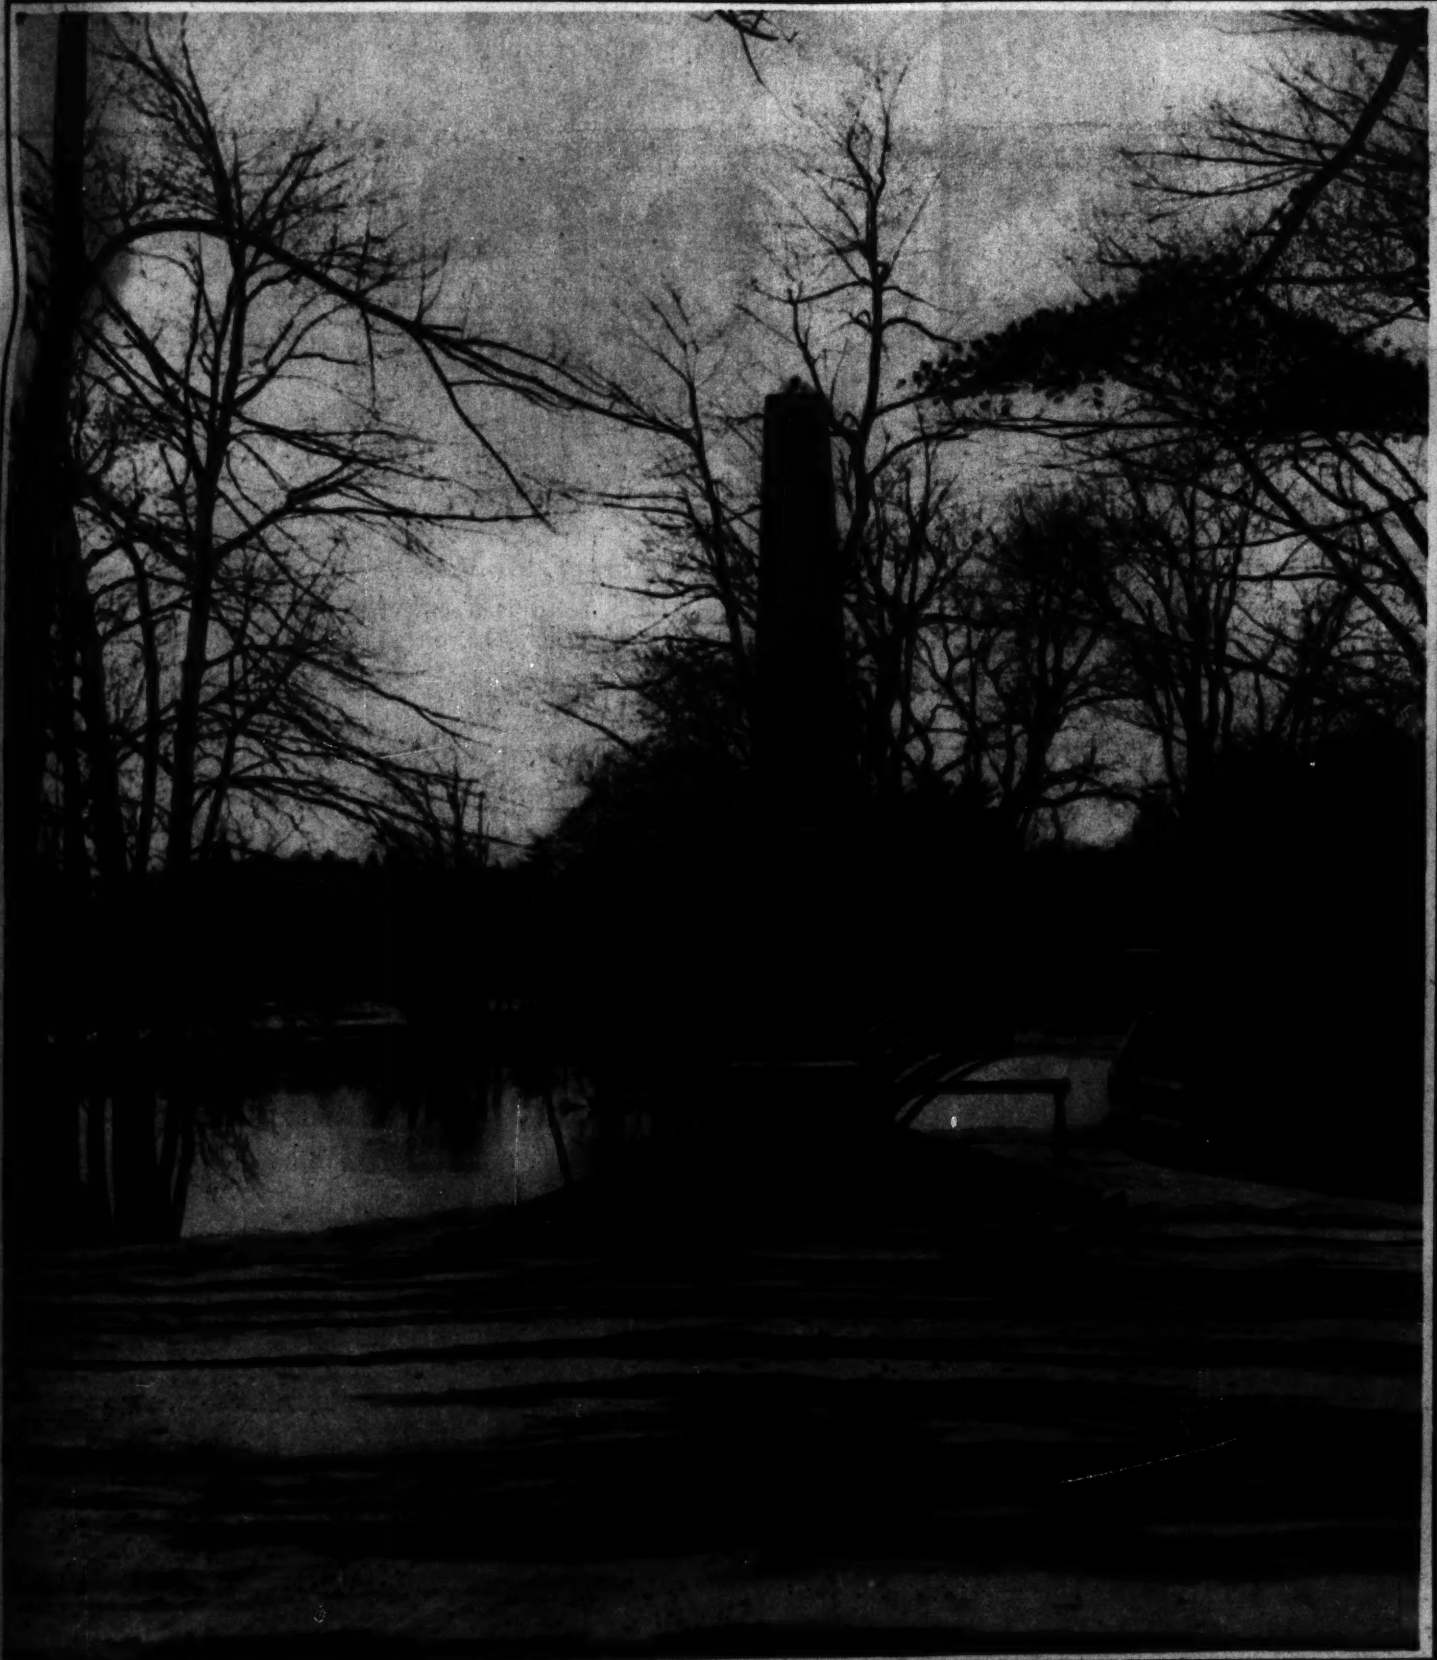
THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER

April 19, 1925

HERE'S A THRILLER FROM THRILLERVILLE—A SPILL OF SPILLS, caught at the Epping harness track in New South Wales. The lucky camera shooter snapped the wreckage just at the psychological second. One driver is stretched on the track; two horses down, kicking and thrashing madly, with the heels of one threatening the life of the fallen pilot; one gig whizzing through the air, with its cushion flying many feet above it; and another frightened horse just about to crash through the fence, rig and driver behind him. The smashup seems to spell certain death, yet neither a driver nor a horse was hurt.

(Photograph from Wide World.)



'TWAS THE EIGHTEENTH OF APRIL IN '75 that Paul Revere rode along here through the night, warning the Yankee farmers that the British were coming. Next day came the battle of Lexington and Concord, the first clash of the American Revolution. So today Uncle Sam celebrates one hundred and fifty years of liberty. He's celebrating especially down Boston way, down where Paul Revere rode, and where came the first great battles of the war. Our picture shows the battleground at Concord, looking down the road toward the North bridge.

ANOTHER TORNADO CAUGHT IN ACTION—This twister swooped down upon the White Belt Dairy farm near Miami, Fla., killed three persons, injured more than a score of others, destroyed seventy-five homes, and left some 400 victims homeless. The camera caught one man trying to run out of the storm's path.

Send the Coupon Maybe your teeth are gloriously clear, simply clouded with a film coat. Thousands have gleaming, wonderful teeth without knowing it . . . you may be one. Make this remarkable test and find out.

"Off Color" Teeth

How to overcome them . . . Give them dazzling whiteness, and your gums that healthy coral tint you envy

HOW, by removing a simple film that covers your teeth and clouds them, you may find your own teeth are gloriously clear and white—the most remarkable of dental tests based on a new method urged by world's dental authorities. Send the coupon, find out what beauty lies beneath the film that clouds your teeth and fosters tooth and gum troubles.

DO you seriously want dazzlingly clear teeth and firm and healthy gums? — beauty factors that will add immeasurably to your personality and attractiveness?

You can have them, if you wish. That's been proved times without number. But not by continuing with old methods of cleansing and of brushing.

Please don't believe your teeth are "different"; that they are naturally "off color" and dull. You can correct that condition remarkably in even a few days.

Modern science has discovered a new way. A radically different principle from old ways; and based on latest scientific findings. This offers you a test, free. Simply mail the coupon.

Why Handicap Yourself?

Dull teeth and softening gums are a social handicap, now scientifically proved unnecessary. Largely on dental advice smiles are becoming clearer, more alluring.

How to gain them—quickly

DENTAL science now traces scores of tooth and gum troubles, directly or indirectly, to a germ-laden film that forms on your teeth.

You can't see it with your eyes, but run your tongue across your teeth and you will feel it . . . a slippery, viscous coating.

That film absorbs discolorations from food, smoking, etc. And that is why your teeth look "off color" and dingy.

How Movie's Famous Stars "Make-up" Their Teeth

Scores of the most noted stars of the movies use this method as an essential part of make-up . . . note the flashing clearness of their smiles.

It clings to teeth, gets into crevices and stays. It lays your gums open to bacterial attack. Germs by the millions breed in it. And they, with tartar, are a chief cause of pyorrhea and decay.

You can't have pretty teeth, unless you combat it. Highest authorities all tell you this.

"Smokers' Stain"

Film absorbs discolorations from smoking, etc. Just remove it. . . . see how clear dull teeth become.

Brushing won't end it

ORDINARY dentifrices and cleansing won't fight film successfully. Feel for it now with your tongue. Note how your present cleansing method is failing in its duty.

Now new methods are being used. A dentifrice called Pepsodent – different in formula, action and effect from any other known.

Largely on dental advice the world has turned to it. Tooth and gum troubles hence are on the decline.

Look, Mother, for Film

Film on a child's teeth is a potential danger sign. For health's sake you must remove it daily.

It removes that film. And Firms the Gums

IT accomplishes two important things at once: Removes that film, then firms the gums. No harsh grit, judged dangerous to enamel.

A few days' use will prove its power beyond all doubt. Why cling to old methods when world's authorities urge a better way?

Send the coupon. Clip it now before you forget.

UP A TREE, not only photographically, but literally as well. This costume was all right when Miss Caroline Smith won the Olympic fancy diving championship. But now, because she was photographed in another rather brief costume in publicity for a student theatrical production at Northwestern university, she has been excluded from the cast. That costume was all right, too, Caroline thinks, and she wants an apology from the university.

A RADIO INTERVIEW before an audience of millions—James Stephens, the Irish novelist known especially for "Deirdre" and "The Crock of Gold," being "radio interviewed" at Station W-G-N by Quin Ryan, announcer, by the media of questions from radio auditors. Gloria Swanson will give a similar interview on April 21. If you'd like to know the secret of her stardom, or her favorite vegetable, or anything else about her, just send your query to W-G-N and she'll answer over the radio.

WHERE the biggest business deals are put through . .
WHERE the smartest people go . .
WHERE "entertaining" is most brilliant and successful . .

WHERE the food is supremely good . .
Crispo products are served

AT NOON . . when the drama of Big Business is played and the representatives from New York and the Coast meet the man in Chicago.

At tea-time . . when the smartest members of Chicago society, back from Paris or the Riviera perhaps, gather to exchange news and views.

At night . . when a brilliant dinner given for a bride-to-be is attended by distinguished guests from near and far.

Where the stage is set for the gorgeous pageant of American life in Chicago, handsome rooms—lights—music; where entertaining is most successful, here the food is supremely good, and at such times, in such places, Crispo products are served.

Crispo means quality

How does it happen that Chicago hotels famous for their cuisine, Chicago clubs noted for their chefs, Chicago hostesses known for their gracious hospitality, serve Crispo crackers, wafers and cakes? It doesn't "happen," it is planned by people who recognize quality and insist on the finest to be had. They realize that Crispo crackers guarantee that perfection of detail which characterizes the completely successful meal.

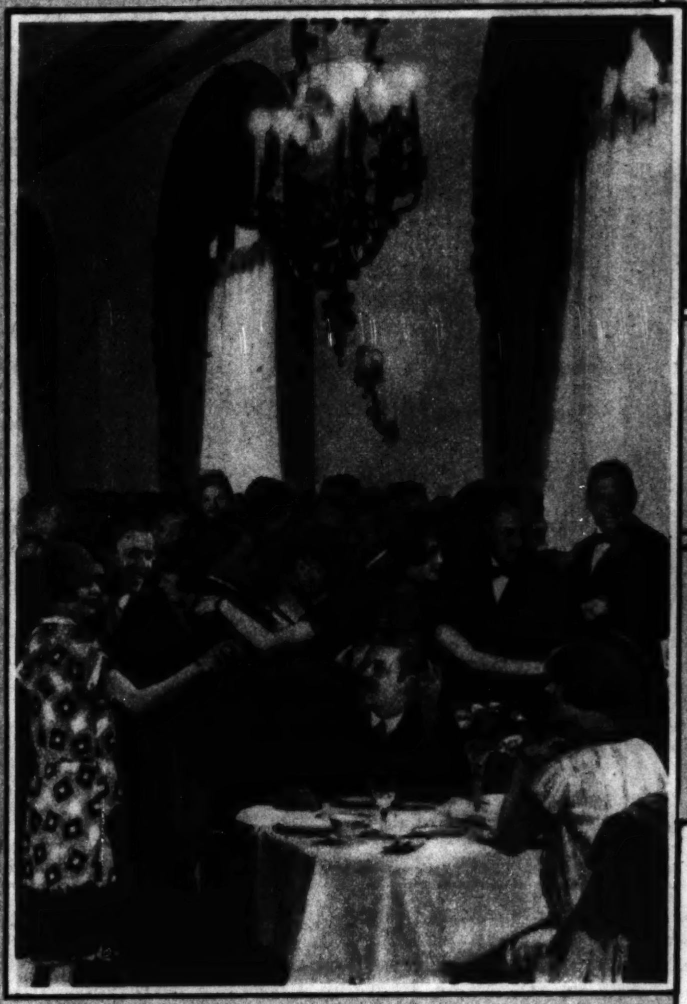
And it doesn't "happen" that Crispo products are all of the highest quality and that that quality is kept uniform. Crispo products are made of finest ingredients; they are master baked! Mixed exactly—proportions always right; never skimping or substitution. Baked accurately—with temperature and humidity scientifically correct.

Made of the best materials

When you buy Crispo products you are getting strictly fresh eggs, pure creamery butter, pure granulated sugar. You can purchase no better materials yourself in the best markets. Our imported Ceylon cocoanut, for instance, is especially good because its natural butter content is intact. We use only the finest imported Smyrna figs. Our "sponge goods" (so-called soda crackers), for example, are supreme in quality because of additional shortening used in them.

Wherever you buy them, whenever you buy them, you'll find Crispo Lily Soda Crackers (illustrated in the home tin) always the same, the crispiest, freshest, most delicious crackers you ever ate, salted just right. This is true, too, of the Graham Dainties (also shown in the home tin); the Crispo Biscuit (unsalted soda crackers); Crispo Cocoanut Bars (the irresistible kind!) and Crispo Peter Pans (the delectable shortbread); true of every single one of the many varieties of Crispo cookies and wafers, crackers and biscuits and cakes that the Sawyer Biscuit Company makes.

Ask your grocer to suggest Crispo staples and specialties which you will like to serve on different occasions. . . Always fresh, quality always uniform and you pay no more for them! It's economical to buy the Crispo Lily Soda Crackers and the Graham Dainties in the large home tins, and you can make good use of the tins. Also sold in packages and in bulk.



I inspect the bakery every day

In order to be perfectly certain that the Crispo plant is always the model of cleanliness, efficiency and continuity of operation that is our standard, I go through the bakery myself each morning. I can say without qualification that each worker, all the equipment, every ingredient is always absolutely above reproach.

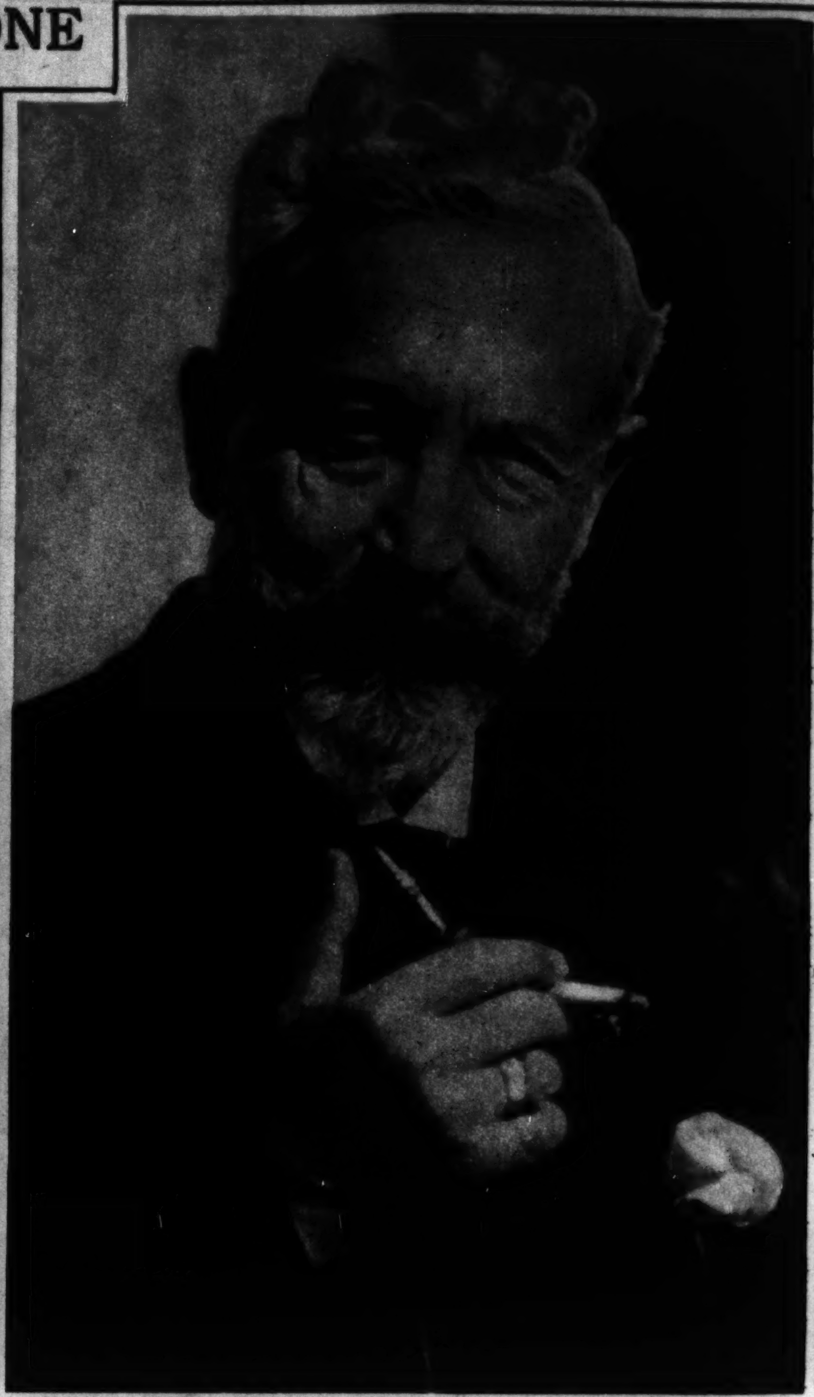
THE PLOT FOR THE GERMAN THRONE

THE EX-CROWN PRINCE has given up his old dream of becoming Germany's kaiser, it is revealed in exclusive dispatches from The Tribune correspondent in Berlin. Now he hopes to place his eldest son upon the throne, and his designs have won the support of south German monarchists, who had backed the imperial aspirations of Crown Prince Rupprecht of Bavaria until Rupprecht renounced his claims.

(Photograph from Pacific and Atlantic.)

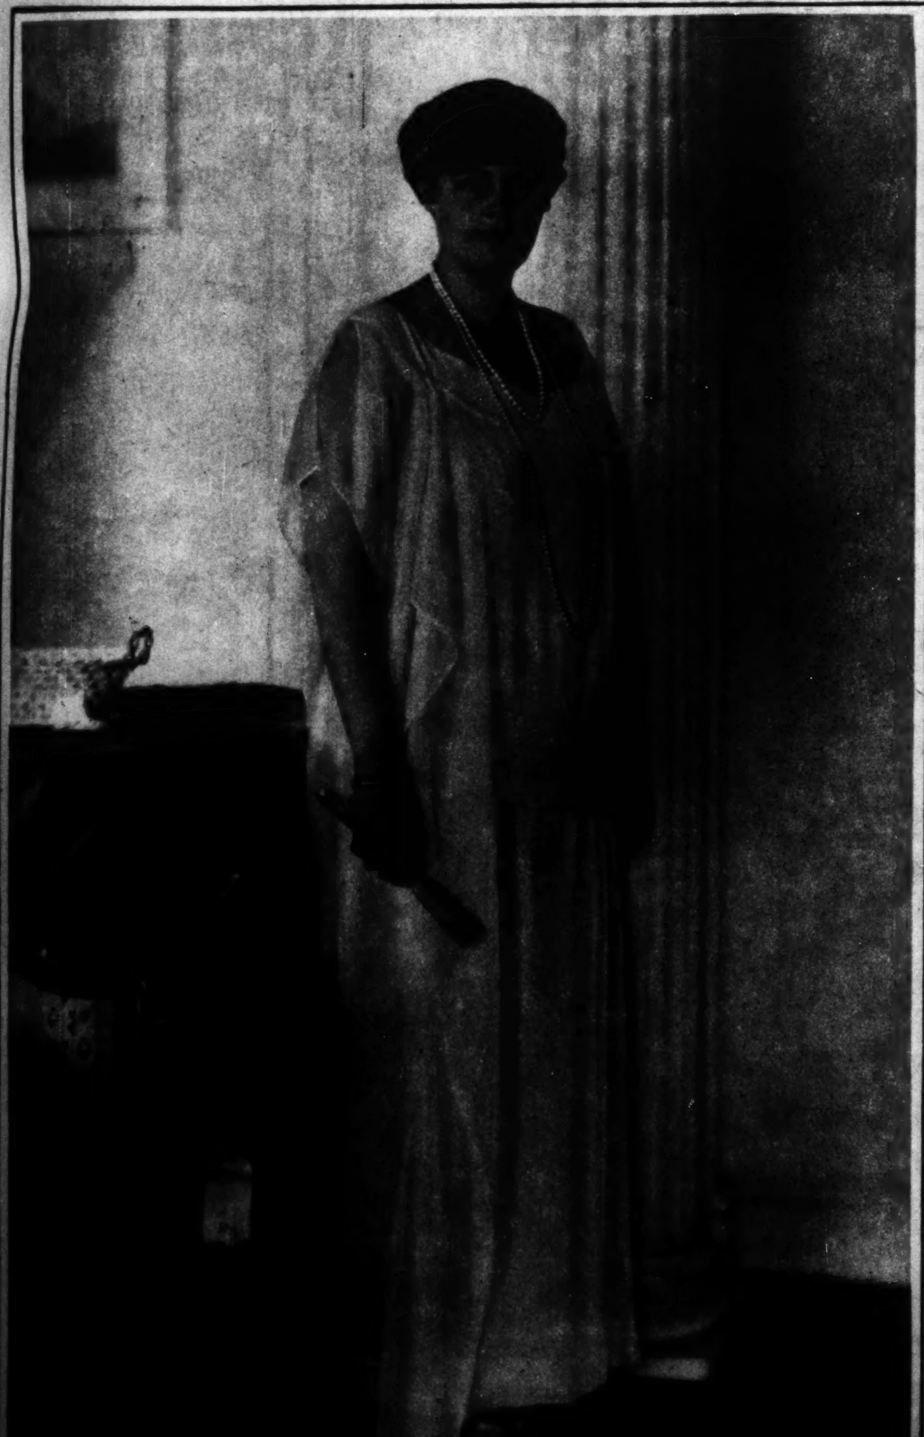
WITHIN TEN YEARS, Rupprecht predicts, Wilhelm Friedrich will reign as kaiser. Here is the hope of the royal conspirators, the crown prince's eldest son, as he is today. He is 17 years old, and thus may be expected to have many years before him for figuring in the machinations of the German monarchists.

(Photograph from Pacific and Atlantic.)



THE EXILE OF DOORN is believed to be playing a major role in the new scheme for re-establishment of the throne he lost. In correspondence with Rupprecht the former kaiser announced he had no objection to the Bavarian's candidacy for regent of Germany should opportunity offer.

(Photograph from Pacific and Atlantic.)



THE WOMAN IN THE PLOT—The Crown Princess Cecilie, wife of the ex-crown prince of Germany and mother of the new hope of the royalists. She is at present in Spain with Wilhelm Friedrich. Only recently she made her first public appearance since the war in Berlin, where she was received with enthusiasm that roused high elation among adherents of the old regime.

RELIGION COST HIM AN EMPIRE, he says—"Were all Germany Catholic, I could be kaiser tomorrow," Crown Prince Rupprecht told an interviewer, "but north Germany does not want a Catholic sovereign." He revealed that he did not expect to outlive the ten years he has given the republic to exist.

"MY SON WILL BE KING OF BAVARIA," Rupprecht adds to his list of predictions. Prince Albrecht, the youthful son, is the child of Rupprecht and his first wife, a sister of the queen of Belgium.

SHARPSHOOTERS OF FOOTBALL will wear old Harvard's colors next fall, if this device produces the expected results. One of the spring coaches conceived this plan to perfect the players in the art of forward passing. Two great sheets of canvas are hung between the goal posts, with holes in them just about big enough to let a football pass through. The players stand at varying distances from the target and practice shooting the oval through the holes. (Photograph from Pacific and Atlantic.)

All built-in bathroom accessories are not alike

When cracks start to form your beautiful bathroom is doomed

IF YOU install Fairfacts accessories, you get a definite guarantee which says that a Fairfacts accessory will preserve its snow-white glistening surface as long as your house stands. This guarantee is important because Fairfacts accessories are widely imitated.

These imitations often crack because temperature changes cause unequal expansion between the surface and the interior of the fixture. Fairfacts accessories are made by a special process which permits the inner material and the glazed surface to expand and contract equally.

It is easy to get Fairfacts accessories. Just demand the guarantee of permanence and see that you get it. After you see this guarantee, put it away in your strong box with your other valuable papers. Also be sure to see our trade mark.

Permanence in bathroom accessories may not seem important to you now but it may save you bitter disappointment later. The Fairfacts Company, Inc., Manufacturers, Dept. CC4, 234-236 West 14th St., New York City.

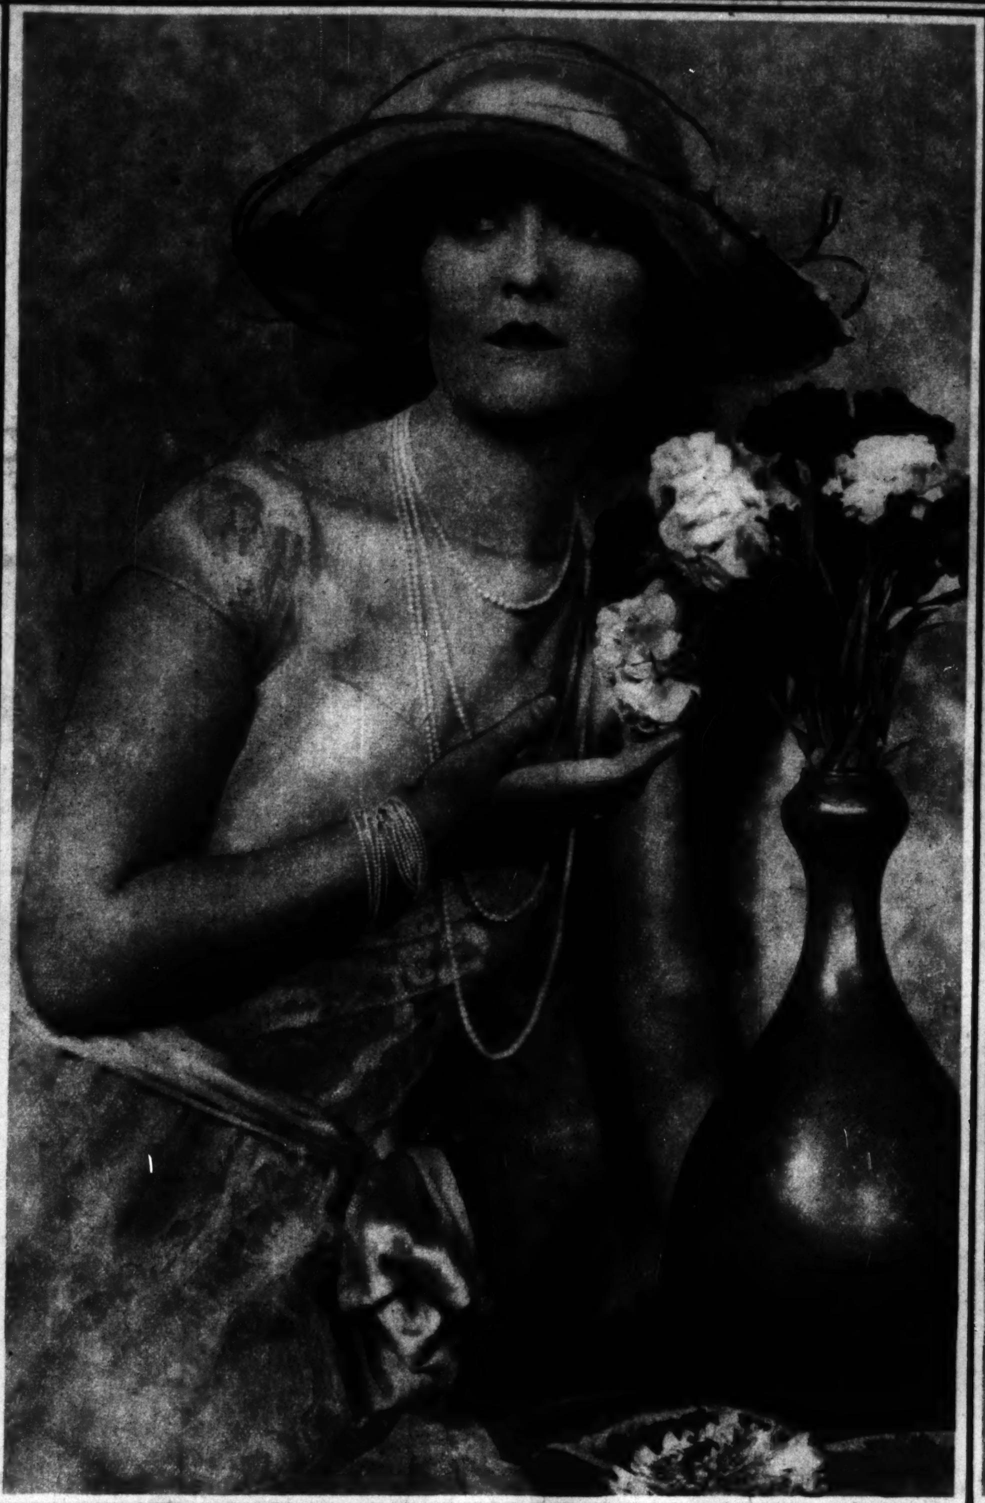
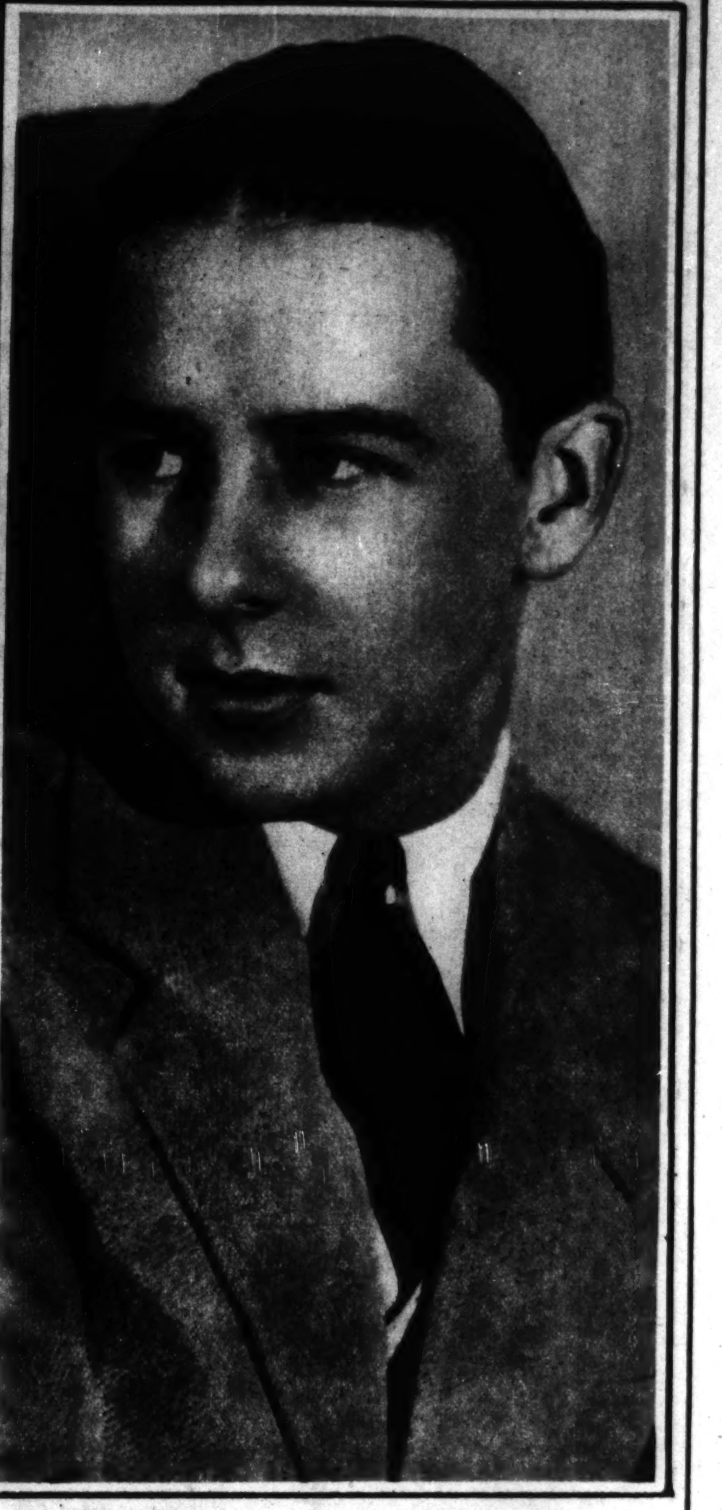
PRINCE YOUCON TROUBETZKOY is before you! He's a real Russian prince garnered by Universal, and not averse to adding his bit to the princely exchequer by playing in the movies. All the outward attributes of an "idol," hasn't he? Bee stung upper lip and ever'thing!



THE LADY OF THE CARNATIONS might be a good title for this charming study of Laura La Plante. Miss La Plante, who is appearing in Universal's "Ann's an Idiot," is all dressed up here in a hat of shell pink horsehair edged with golden satin—and a gown of—well, you say—we have no information in regard to it.



BEN LYON ran in to say "How d'ye do?" not long ago. He seems a nice, unaffected young fellow with a large enthusiasm for life and work. Remember him in "So Big"?

"I HAD BEEN suffering from constipation, stomach ills and headaches for about ten years. A well-known physician . . . suggested that I eat Fleischmann's Yeast. I ate two cakes a day with results that amazed me. Fleischmann's Yeast put an end to headaches, stomach ills and constipation and restored my vitality. I eat it for several months each year to keep myself fit." (John B. Kinstler, Bellevue, Ky.)

Can you answer "Yes"?

Does your body eliminate its wastes properly?
Is it free from digestive and skin disorders?
Has it the strength, the energy, you need?

Not a "cure-all," not a medicine in any sense—Fleischmann's Yeast is simply a remarkable fresh food. The millions of tiny active yeast plants in every cake invigorate the whole system. They aid digestion—clear the skin—banish the poisons of constipation. Where cathartics give only temporary relief, yeast strengthens the intestinal muscles and makes them healthy and active. And day by day it releases new stores of energy.

All grocers have Fleischmann's Yeast. Start eating it today! Buy several cakes at a time—they will keep fresh in a cool dry place for two or three days.

And let us send you a free copy of our latest booklet on Yeast for Health. Health Research Dept. 687, The Fleischmann Company, 701 Washington St., New York.

THIS FAMOUS FOOD tones up the entire system—banishes constipation—stomach troubles—skin disorders.

Eat two or three cakes a day before meals: on crackers—in fruit juices or milk—or just plain. For constipation especially, dissolve one cake in hot water (not scalding) night and morning.

(LEFT)

"I FELT BADLY for nine years. I was always tired in the morning—my food did not digest and I had fainting spells. Then I met a strong and healthy Hollander who told me he ate Fleischmann's Yeast. At last I tried it. Now I am entirely well. I am 49 years old, but feel as I did when thirty, and I do the hardest kind of work with pick and shovel every day." (M. B. Delhon, Denver, Colo.)

"HAVING SOLE CHARGE of a Mission on the top of the Blue Ridge, I did my own housework, taught school, gave Visiting Nurse work, and conducted a Clothing Bureau. . . . In March, 1924, . . . I began to feel very ill. Then one day I opened the mail and found my order of Yeast. The stories I had read flashed into mind, and I began to eat those silver wrapped cakes. That day appetite and vigor began to return—I sincerely believe Fleischmann's Yeast saved me from a serious breakdown." (Miss A. P. Knight, Upper Pocosan Mission, Va.)

"BEING A TEACHER of music, I have consequently suffered more or less from the ills which attend a life of physical inactivity. I finally decided to give Fleischmann's Yeast a trial. I am enthusiastically converted. By its use I have overcome the dizziness, sick headaches and constipation that for years were a serious handicap to me." (Miss M. Crosby, Enid, Okla.)

A FAR CRY from the home-made schooners and sloops with which Admiral Perry defeated the British squadron on Lake Erie in 1813 is the scout cruiser Memphis, steaming here under Brooklyn bridge on her maiden voyage. The contrast is evoked by the first mission of the Memphis. It is bound for the West Indies, to participate in the dedication of a memorial to Perry.

Your Whole Appearance Depends Upon Your Hair

Without beautiful, well-kept hair, you can never be really attractive. Soft, silky hair is the most ALLURING CHARM any women can possess. It makes the plainest features appear soft and sweet.

Fortunately, beautiful hair is no longer a matter of luck. You, too, can have beautiful hair if you shampoo it properly.

PROPER shampooing is what makes your hair soft and silky. It brings out all the real life and lustre, all the natural wave and color and leaves it fresh-looking, glossy and bright.

When your hair is dry, dull and heavy, lifeless, stiff and gummy, and the strands cling together, and it feels harsh and disagreeable to the touch, it is because your hair has not been shampooed properly.

While your hair must have frequent and regular washing to keep it beautiful, it cannot stand the harsh effect of ordinary soaps. The free alkali in ordinary soaps soon dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle and ruins it.

That is why thousands of women, everywhere, now use Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo. This clear, pure and entirely greaseless product brings out all the real beauty of the hair and cannot possibly injure. It does not dry the scalp or make the hair brittle, no matter how often you use it.

If you want to see how really beautiful you can make your hair look, just follow this simple method.

A Simple, Easy Method

FIRST, wet the hair and scalp in clear, warm water. Then apply a little Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo.

Two or three teaspoonfuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather. This should be rubbed in thoroughly and briskly with the finger tips, so as to loosen the dandruff and small particles of dust and dirt that stick to the scalp.

After rubbing in the rich, creamy Mulsified lather, give the hair a good rinsing. Then use another application of Mulsified, again working up a lather and rubbing it in briskly as before. After the final washing, rinse the hair and scalp in at least two changes of clear, fresh, warm water. This is very important.

Just Notice the Difference

YOU will notice the difference in your hair even before it is dry, for it will be delightfully soft and silky.

After a Mulsified shampoo you will find your hair will dry quickly and evenly and have the appearance of being much thicker and heavier than it really is.

If you want to always be remembered for your beautiful, well-kept hair, make it a rule to set a certain day each week for a Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo. This regular weekly shampooing will keep the scalp soft and the hair fine and silky, bright, fresh-looking and fluffy, wavy and easy to manage.

You can get Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo at any drug store or toilet goods counter, anywhere in the world. A 4-ounce bottle should last for months.

Splendid for children —fine for men.

Your white teeth—keep them safe with Pebeco

ORDINARY BRUSHING fails to remove the acids from your teeth for more than a few brief minutes. Five minutes after you stop brushing the acids begin to form again.

The only way to protect your teeth permanently is with the tooth paste that gently stimulates the natural alkaline fluids of your mouth glands.

Teeth stay white and safe when the mouth glands flow normally

By a simple natural method you can now prevent Dry Mouth that causes tooth decay

"I WENT to the dentist yesterday. He says my teeth and gums are in fine condition"—

A few years ago you rarely heard anyone say that. But today thousands can truthfully claim it. Men and women are learning how to correct the underlying cause of decay.

Modern, cooked foods — soft, and quickly swallowed — give the mouth glands almost no work. From sheer lack of exercise they gradually stop flowing. And in your dry mouth, your teeth, unprotected by the alkaline fluids of the glands, are defenseless against the deadly acids of decay.

It is only recently that dentists and physicians have recognized that there is a way to stimulate the glands naturally and successfully.

Pebeco keeps glands active

Pebeco acts directly on the salivary glands. As soon as it enters your mouth it starts a full, normal flow of alkaline saliva.

With constant daily use Pebeco completely restores the natural, protective action of your glands. Their alkaline fluids again bathe your teeth day and night and the acids of decay are neutralized as fast as they form.

Pebeco leaves your gums clean and soothed—your whole mouth, normal and healthy —your teeth not only white and shining but safe.

And yet there are many other Omar moments just as pleasant.

OMAR is the aromatic blend of 13 kinds of rich Turkish and 6 of ripe domestic leaves, mixed according to our formula for the perfect Turkish blend. OMAR—the very name suggests aroma—and aroma makes a cigarette. They've told you that for years.

The Acorn of Courage Started the Holland Furnace Company

A LARGE percentage of all the economical and healthful home-heating of today was made possible by Courage—the tremendous courage of one man.

This courage began its effect in American homes seventeen years ago, and has become more and more a power ever since.

The Holland Furnace Company would not be an organization worthy of the name, probably would not now be in existence at all, had it not been for single handed courage.

This advertisement can be taken largely as a tribute to the one man, A. H. Landwehr, who chose a very difficult but worth-while life work to do and then proceeded to develop the simplest means of doing it.

He wanted a difficult thing so that few others would be attempting to do the same thing. And he wanted the simplest way because that is the surest way to succeed—just plain horse-sense.

Courage means more than anything else to every pioneer.

Of course, home-heating did not begin seventeen years ago. A. H. Landwehr was not a pioneer in that sense. He was a pioneer in that he built an organization that could expertly install every individual Holland Heating System that his factories could manufacture.

Only feeble attempts had ever been made to accomplish this much needed result. No man had had the courage to risk the opposition of dealers, even though these plumbers, tinsmiths and hardware men knew themselves that they were not heating engineers. Few of them could ever hope to be for they were too busy with all sorts of other affairs. And few of them, indeed, had backing enough to make a guarantee that would count. That has always been so and always will.

Practically every risk known to business was faced by A. H. Landwehr. Manufacturing and merchandising each present problems enough. But add to this the training and equipping of an army of heating engineers, and financing them, together with their offices and warehouses—men from almost every walk of life. Today there are thousands in this organization, and all because there was courage in one man to step out and do what other men were afraid to undertake, even though it was plainly the right thing to do.

Almost every business day in the year this company refuses to accept orders for Holland Furnaces from people who live where it is not practical for Holland men to make the installation.

The installation is even more important than the furnace itself, and the policy of the Holland Furnace Company is that every Holland customer must be pleased. Therefore, every Holland Furnace that is built must necessarily be installed by Holland expert installers. Every Holland heated home in this country has an influence on the value of every other Holland heated home. We cannot jeopardize our standing with home-owners or with real estate men and builders.

This explains why we cannot permit even a small proportion of our heating systems to be installed by men who are not directly responsible to this concern.

We have nothing but good will for dealers in every line of business. But when we sold furnaces to dealers, prior to seventeen years ago, we learned that a furnace installation could not be sold successfully "over the counter" like so much packaged merchandise. It was at that time that A. H. Landwehr called a positive halt in the affairs of the Holland Furnace Company. It was then that this Company began all alone the development of a complete Home-Heating Service. The result—the largest furnace company in the world—built in only a few years—tells best of all the appreciation of home owners and builders for healthful, economical heating service.

Courage was the seed—the germ—from which all this began. The Holland Guarantee Bond with its three fundamentals, Engineering Experience, Financial Strength, and Moral Character—the bond that guarantees every Holland user, a heating system that is healthful and economical and entirely satisfactory—this too is the outgrowth of a courage that picked a hard worthwhile thing to do and then built an organization to do it.

It will not obligate you in any way to let a Holland man tell you about the Holland Heating System and what it would cost you for your own particular home. It is his business and pleasure to tell you this and his business to be not only a heating expert but a gentleman. You will enjoy talking with a Holland representative.

THE BANK

BY

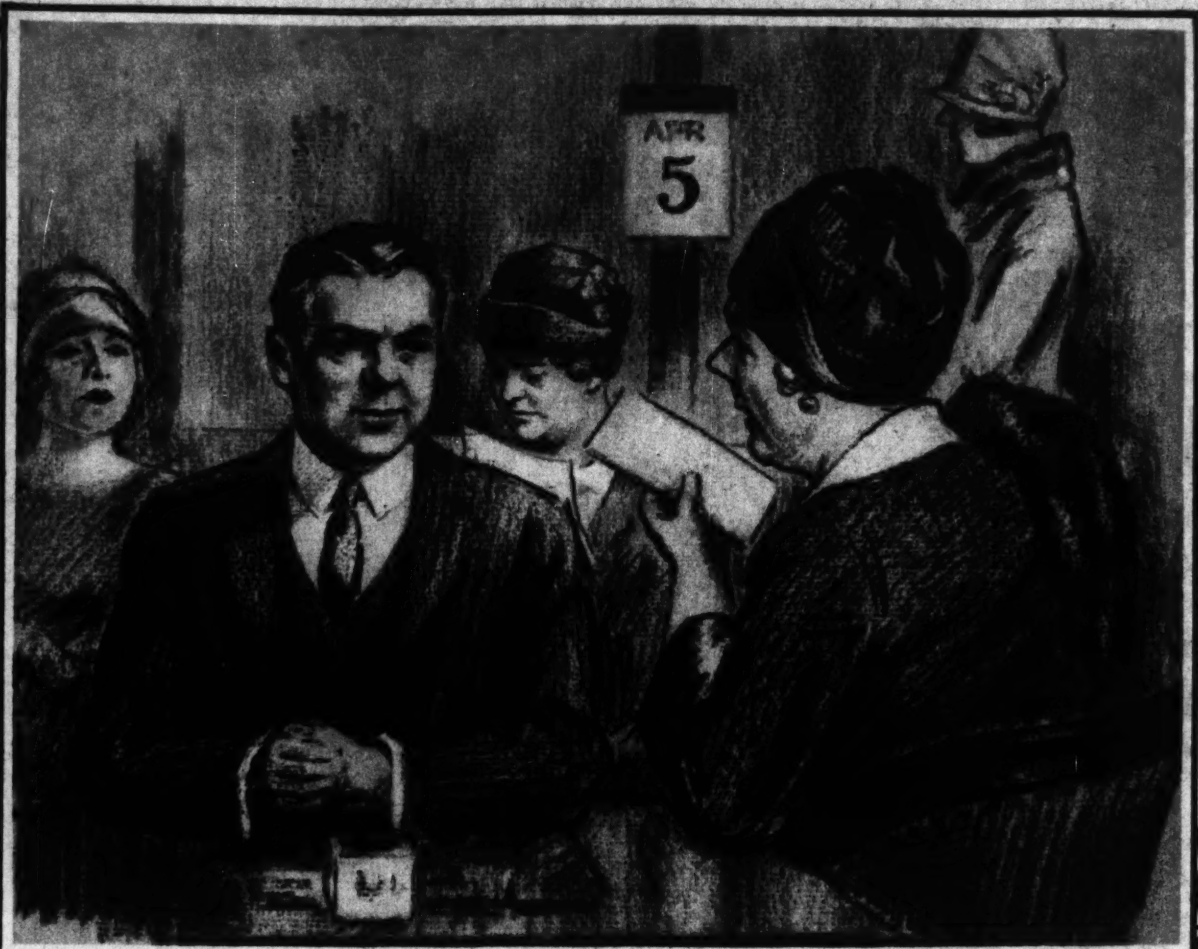
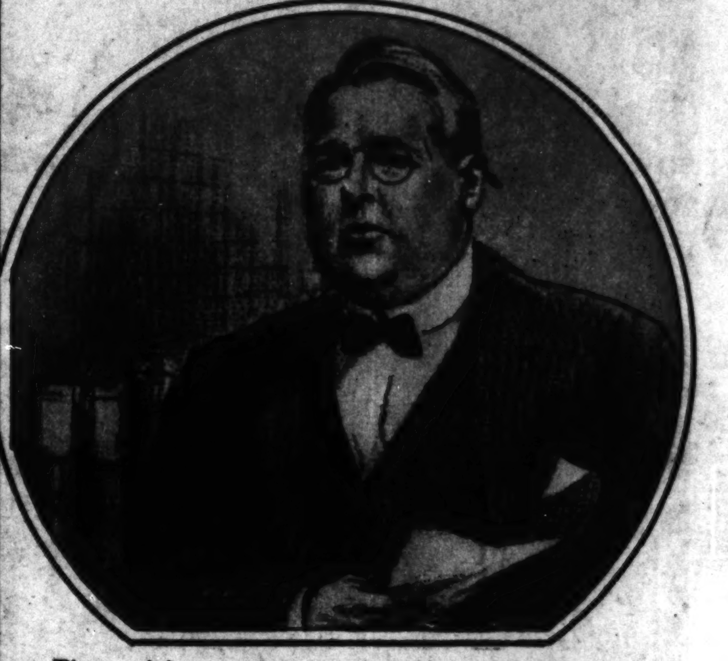
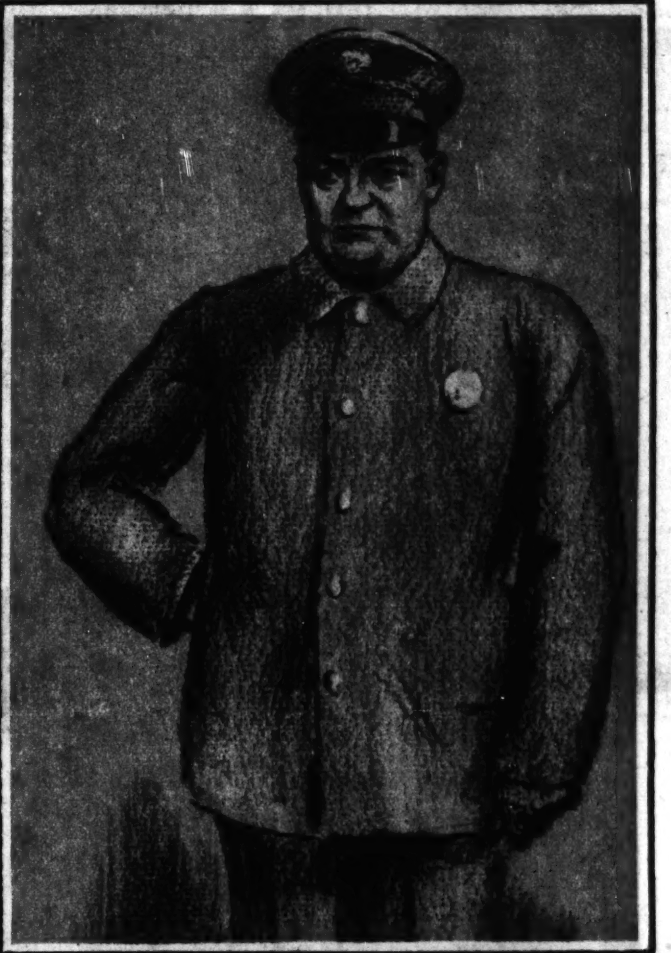
"Would you kindly tell me how to go about calling a bond?"



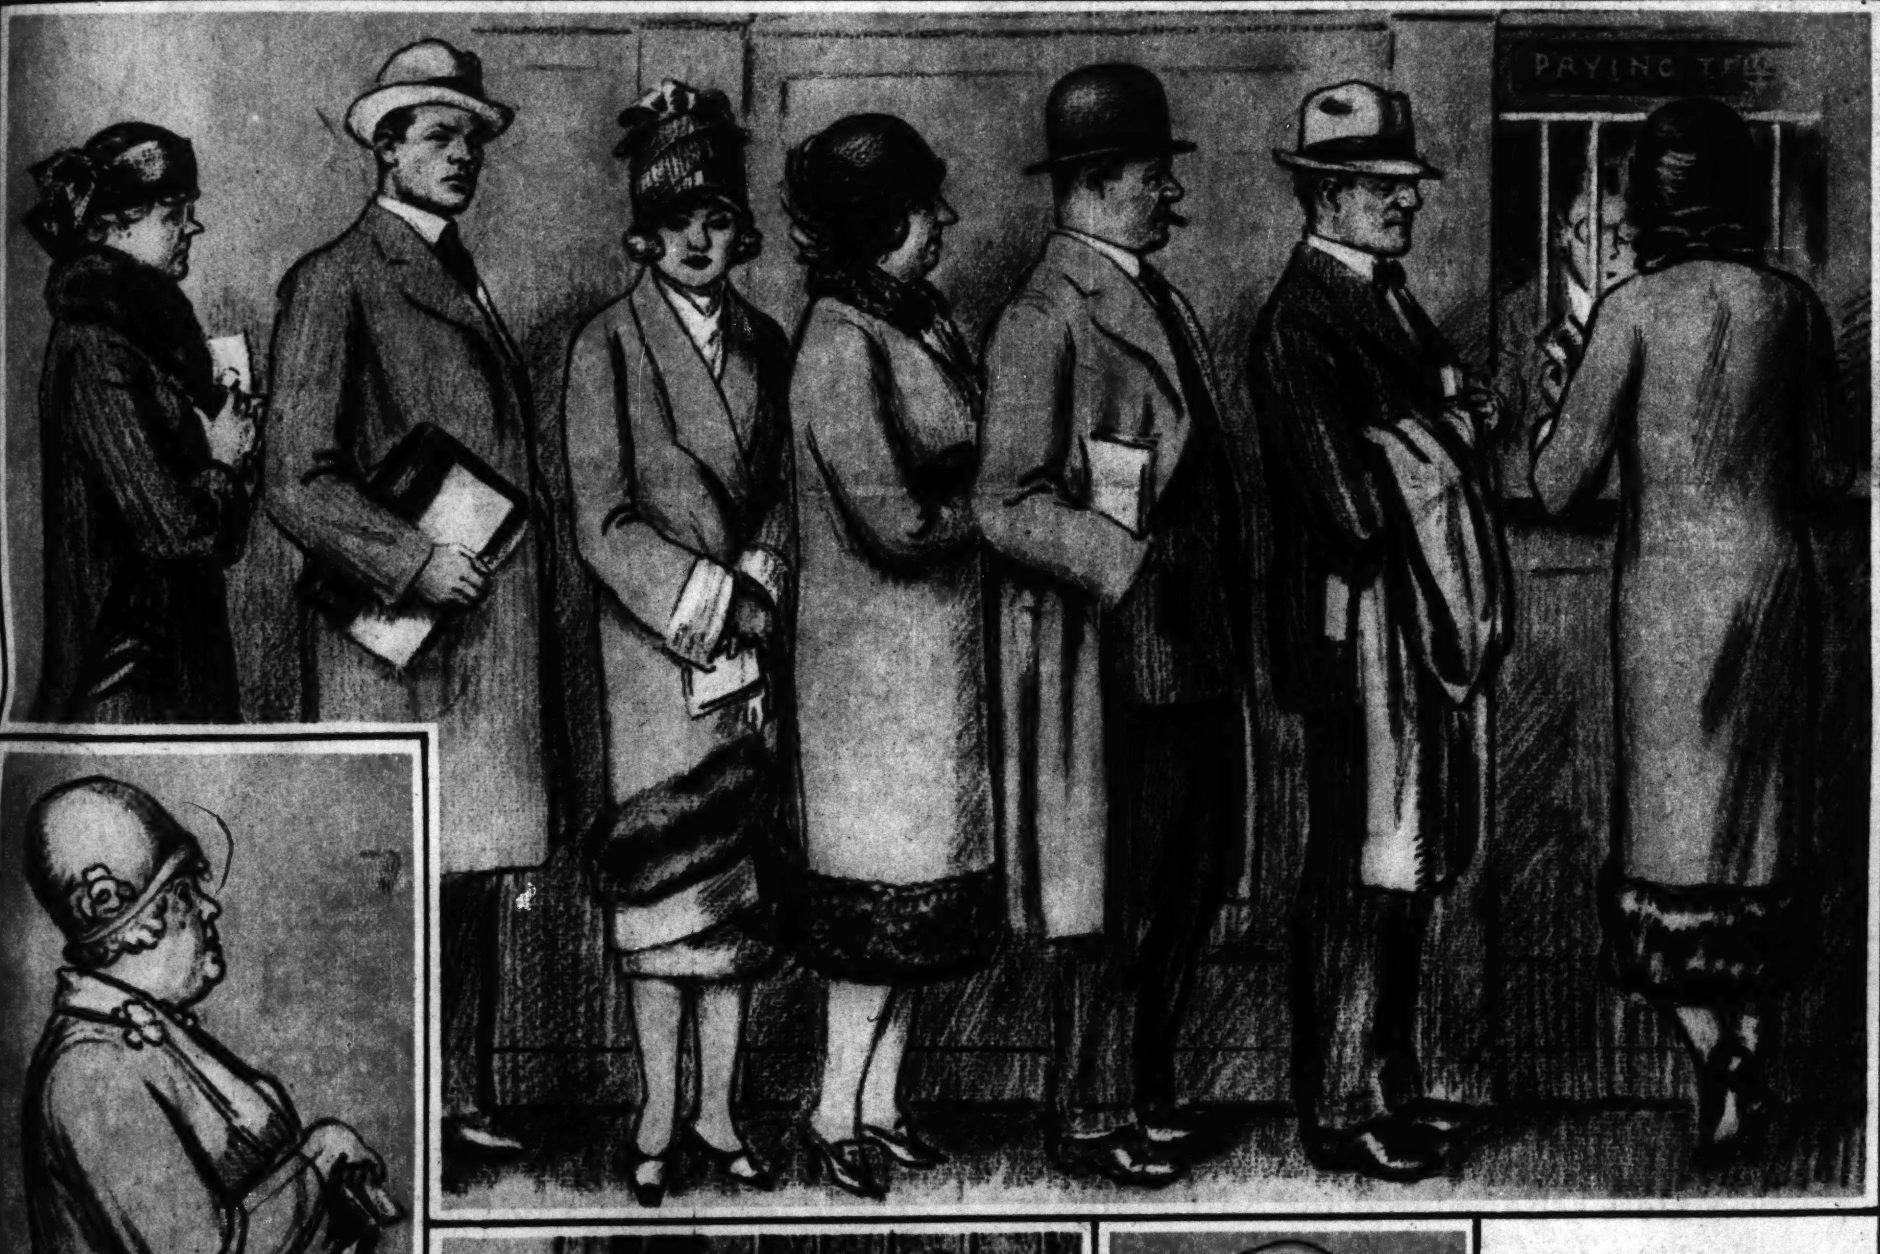
One of the seventeen odd vice presidents of the banking house—the one with the frank, open countenance, is on duty at a desk up in front, ready and willing to advise harassed women who are investing. They want to make, if possible (provided, of course, it is a safe move), a four and three-quarters investment yielding twenty-five per cent.



The genial young man at the adjuster's window is all out of breath explaining to a young lady whose bank balance is down to two dollars and fifty-three cents a lot of intricacies about the banking business. And, would you believe it, the young lady is threatening to transfer her account to another bank!



The bank's own private police force looking fiercely at an unshaven man in a cap.



The line at the paying teller's window, temporarily held up by the deposit slip of a beautiful but dumb depositor. Just a little mistake in addition. The depositor thought that five and two made nine with one to carry.

(Copyright: 1925:

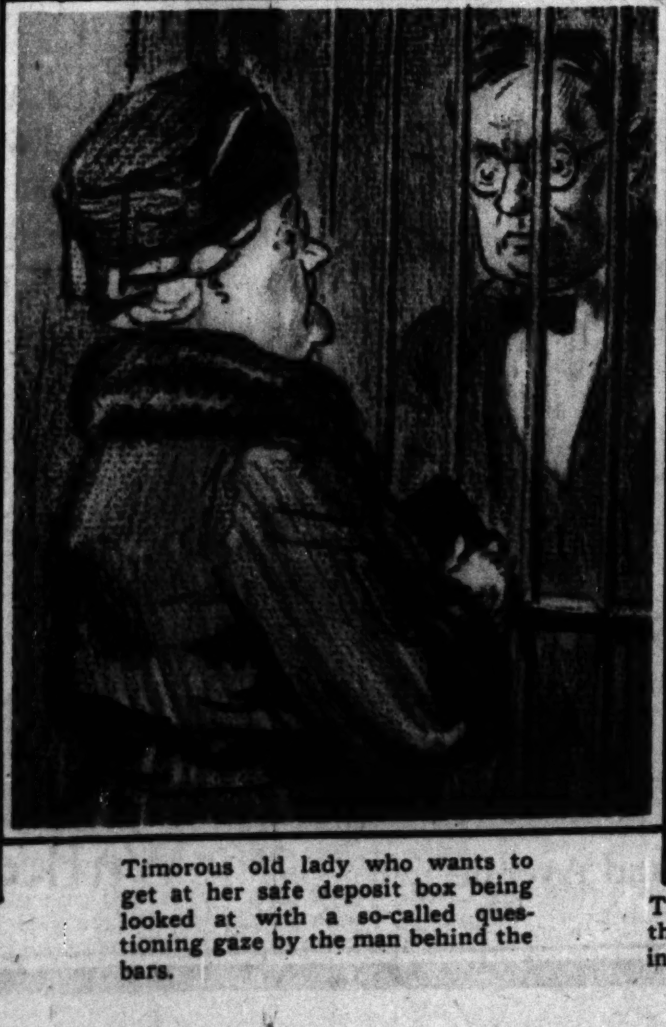
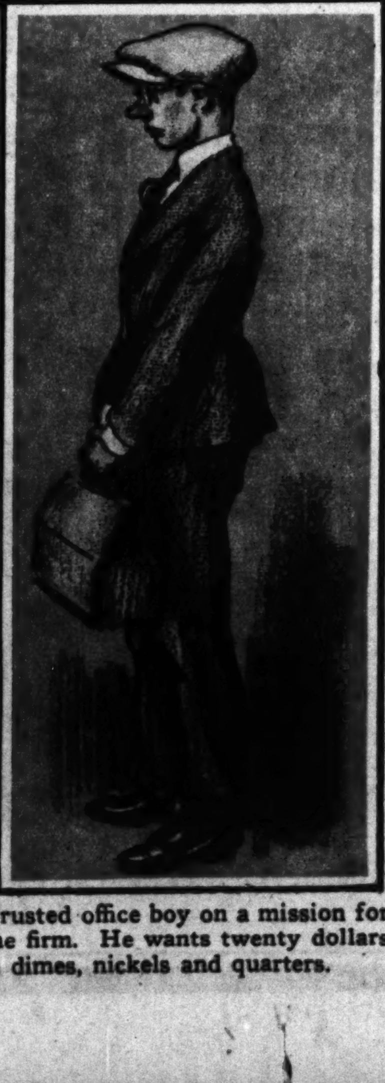
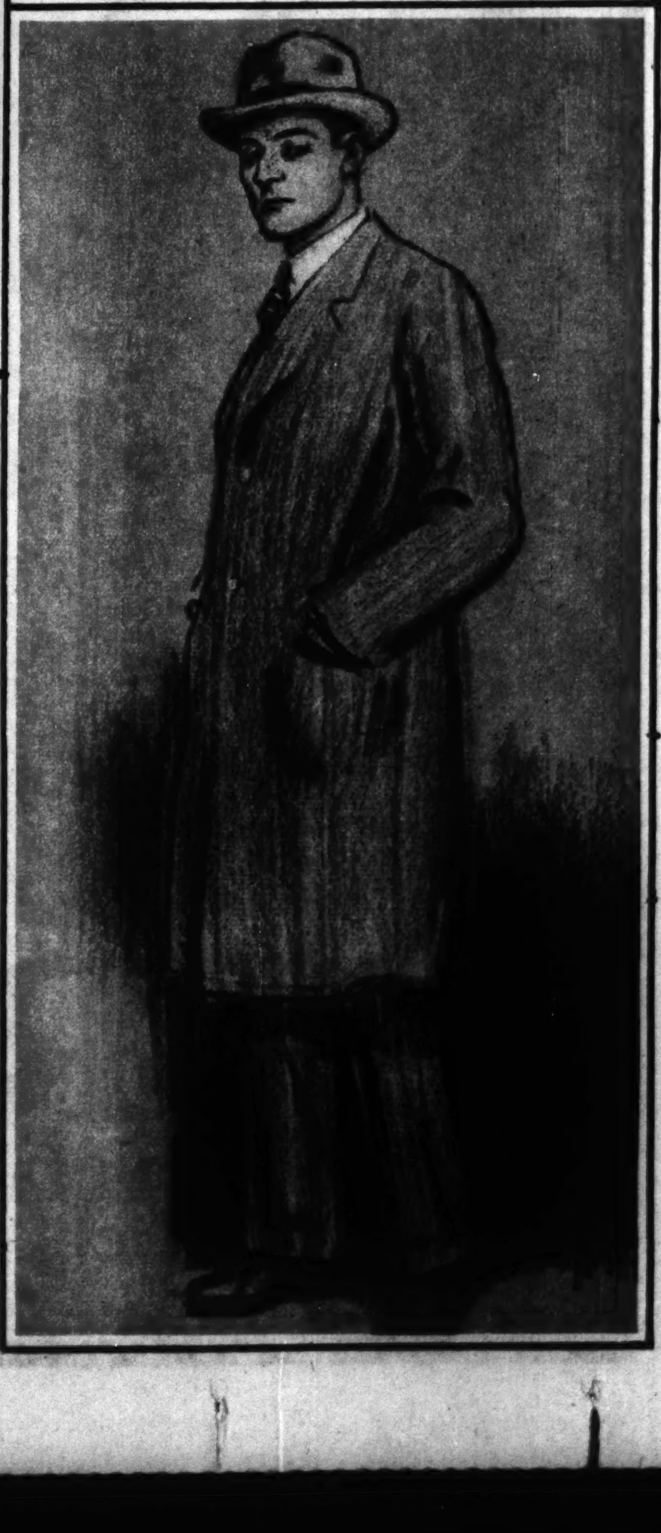
A lady depositor departing with some recently cut coupons.



Timorous old lady who wants to get at her safe deposit box being looked at with a so-called questioning gaze by the man behind the bars.



Trusted office boy on a mission for the firm. He wants twenty dollars in dimes, nickels and quarters.



The hurt young man who had a check returned marked "no funds." He can't understand what has happened to his balance.

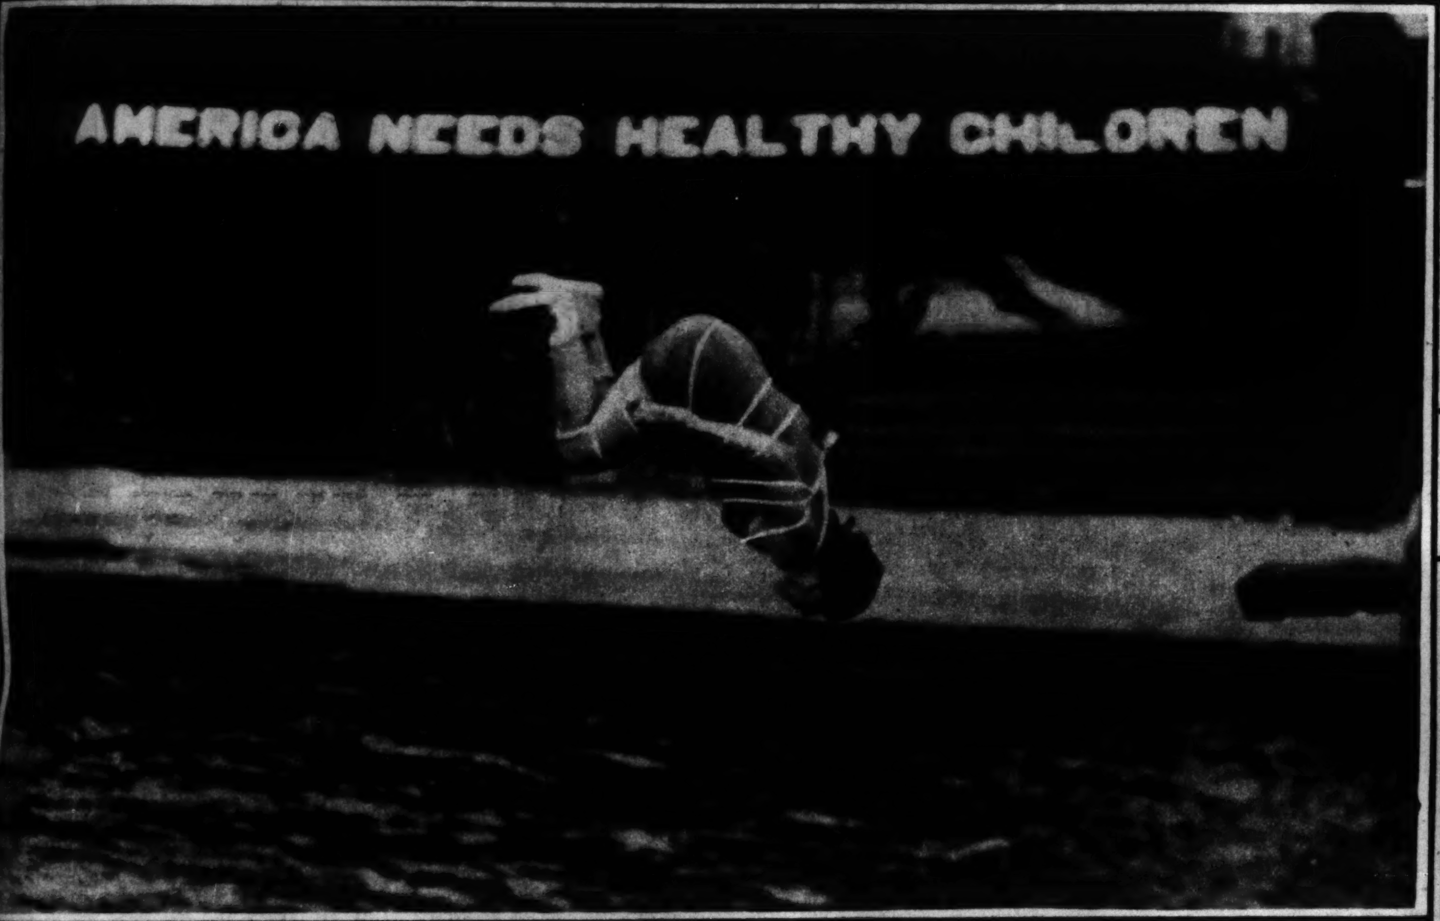
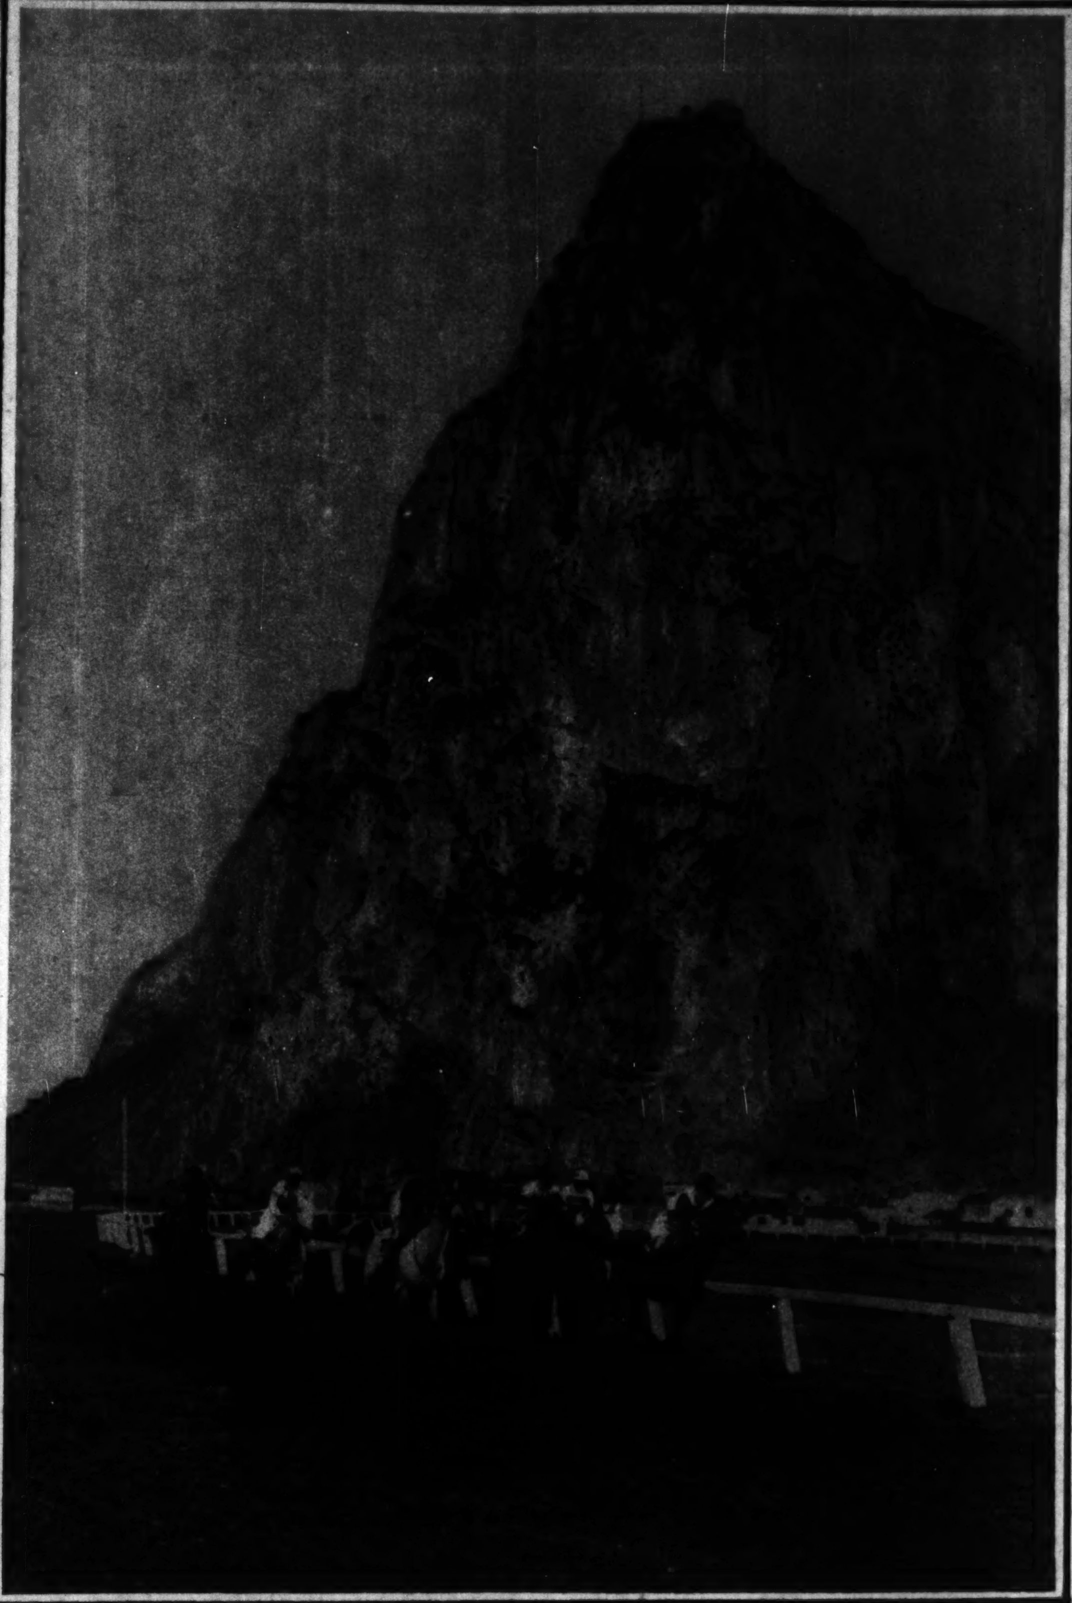
THE VERSATILE DEMPSEY, now ring champion, now actor for the celluloids, now ranchman, turned wrestler at the farewell show given for gobs of the combined fleets at Los Angeles on the eve of their departure for Hawaiian maneuvers. Bull Montana was his playmate. And, though the careful photo reporter avoided telling who won, the generous Bull was playing human mattress for Jack here, at least. (Photograph from Pacific and Atlantic)



HOW TO KEEP FROM GROWING OLD—In addition to the need for healthy children pointed out on the sign in the background it looked as if a good, healthy woman diving champion might be needed to replace Mary Joe Lowe after this bound dive. However, she came out all right, doing a perfect Houdini for congressmen visiting at Balboa, Canal Zone. (Photograph from Wide World)

MAKING THE WORLD SAFE FOR BIG GAME HUNTERS—One of the trophies of a hunt organized for titled sportsmen by Col. W. F. O'Connor, British envoy in Nepal, India. In addition to carrying out the spoils, Bolivar provides a nice, safe point of vantage for shooting atop his mountainous back. And he helps again by driving out the tiger after he has been surrounded by a ring of elephants. (Photograph from Kadel & Herbert)



THE ROCK THAT GUARDS THE MEDITERRANEAN frowns down on the Gibraltar Jockey club course at North Front, where this spirited race was pictured. This course, which is on British territory, and the Spanish course at Campamento consistently draw crowds of imperial tars and miscellaneous visitors. (Photograph from Kadel & Herbert)

JACKIE COOGAN'S NEW BROTHER, who begins life famed and envied for being kin to the child star, is presented with the lad that made the family name a household word. Christened Robert; five months old; weight eleven pounds; disposition cheerful; ambition (a forecast) to fill Jackie's shoes when the latter becomes a grownup star or director or something. The St. Andrews SPORT SUIT

SOLD BY GOOD CLOTHIERS IN EVERY TOWN

NOTICE the soft, easy, comfortable, informal drape and fit of the St. Andrews Sport Suit.

That is because St. Andrews fabrics are all fine, beautiful, soft materials, woven especially for combination sport and town wear. The suit consists of 4 pieces—coat, vest, knicker, and long trouser.

St. Andrews sport fabrics are all-wool, long-wearing cheviots, homespuns, tweeds, and flannels—in many different patterns including plain colors, mixtures, plaids, checks, and stripes.

They come in many beautiful shades of grey, brown, tan, blue, blue-grey, lavender-grey, mode, fawn, and heather mixtures.

In every city and town in the United States there is a good clothing store that carries St. Andrews Sport Suits.

Look for that store.

But don't buy without looking for the label. If the St. Andrews label is not in the coat it is not a genuine St. Andrews Sport Suit.

At the left you see the quaint clear glass Buddha bottle that enshrines Subtilité, the newest and most sophisticated Houbigant perfume; $12.50. Next to it, Le Temps des Lilas, green and limpid, pure as a garden; $5. Mon Boudoir, brown as amber in the lovely crystal bottle, beloved of the true coquette; $6. Then Le Parfum Ideal, with the dull gold cameo face that is known all over the world; $8.75. Behind them stands Quelques Fleurs, a nosegay of dreams that appeals to almost everyone, $7.50.

FIVE MAGIC SPELLS

. . . And which is yours?

HOUBIGANT, the great creator of perfumes, has chosen these five odors from among the hundreds at his command. These express perfectly the woman of America—the luxury, the cleverness, the sophistication, the gayety, the allure of the smartest women in the world.

HOUBIGANT begs that you, madame, will try them for yourself. One of these odors is your own—the final touch to make your charm complete. No one can tell you which it is. But you will know. Because, instantly, it will appeal to you beyond the others. . . .

MON BOUDOIR is a perfume known the world around for its appeal to the luxurious type, the woman who loves a chaise longe, rose-colored pillows, jewelry and soft lights. She couldn't live and love without it. She wouldn't try!

LE TEMPS DES LILAS is a breath of spring, an armful of fresh lilacs, for the charming girl who keeps herself fancy free. . . . Blonde? Brunette? These things mean nothing. It is her soul, that perfume. And it speaks to the souls of those who know her.

SUBTILITÉ—a subtle bit of magic! a perfume synonymous with her personality—cheerful, bright, so modern, so complex, so sophisticated that many a woman can't appreciate it. It isn't direct enough for the woman who lives in the obvious. It whispers, warm and cold by turns; it says things by halves . . . but, is eloquent in what it leaves unspoken.

QUELQUES FLEURS! Gay, light, sweet—young, vivacious, eager! Its wearer takes nothing seriously. She laughs and the world smiles back at her. There are millions of her in the world's garden . . . there can never be enough.

Finally, there is LE PARFUM IDEAL. Its subtle charm is known to those women who are clever enough to sense the responsive delight it awakens in their admirers. It is as deeply sentimental and perfect as the full bloom of womanhood. It is in truth ideal. But—the dots add just enough weight to make dresses hang smartly!

All these perfumes are waiting for you in your favorite shop. Which one is your own?

NORMANDY VOILE overcomes the one drawback to a sheer-textured fabric—the fact that it is likely to wrinkle up and cling to one's undergarments! Normandy Voile has proved itself the ideal fabric for Summer frocks because its little raised dots add just enough weight to make the fine-textured voile hang slim and straight! It is Normandy Voile if "Normandy Fabric" appears on the selvage, or the "Normandy" label is in the dress.

YOU brush your teeth faithfully. You brush them carefully. Yet when you visit your dentist you are often surprised at the number of cavities his instruments reveal.

You feel baffled. Others seemingly no more careful than yourself enjoy the blessing of sound teeth. What is the trouble?

The trouble is that your teeth require a certain kind of protection which you are failing to give them—the protection they need is adequate dental care and the daily use of a germ-killing dentifrice.

In a paper read before the Stuyvesant Medical Society, a famous dental surgeon gave this advice to those who would avoid abscesses in their teeth:

Protect the enamel and you protect the life of the nerve; a tooth with a live nerve is a healthy tooth.

THE protection they need is the germicidal protection of Kolynos Dental Cream. Kolynos not only keeps your teeth white and glistening, but its main properties are highly antiseptic—extremely important properties if you are to have sound teeth, teeth free from dangerous, offensive, and painful cavities.

Kills germs—washes them away

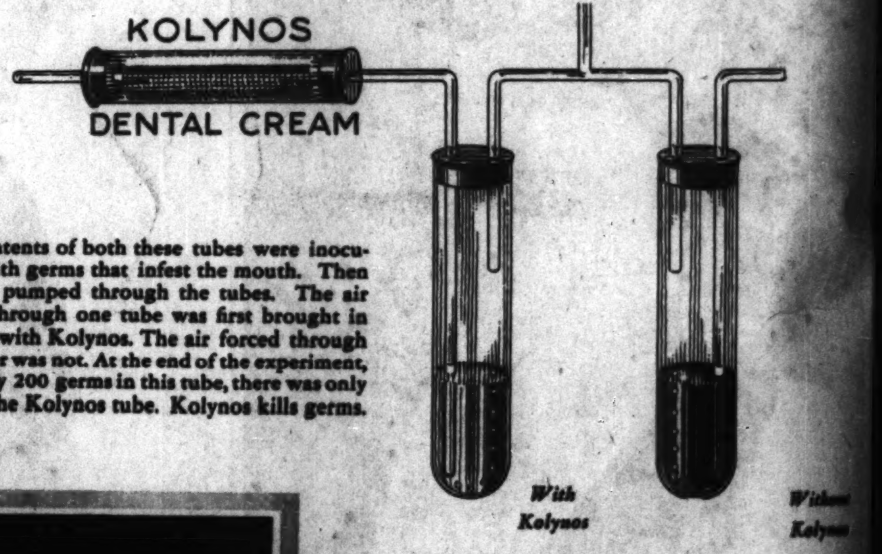
Did you ever watch snowflakes collect upon a window-pane? That is the way germs collect upon your teeth. The first few find it hard to cling, but soon they build up rapidly. First Bacilli Acidophili lodge on the enamel. They are tiny, short threads of germs. In your saliva is a sticky substance called mucin. Little flakes of this adhere to the teeth. Thus a close, sticky, web-like film spreads across the enamel, a film of malignant germs that cause decay.

These germs multiply with amazing rapidity. Each produces tiny quantities of harmful acid. The film holds this acid against the teeth while it gradually eats into the enamel.

Kolynos checks this. To begin with, it kill germs. It breaks up the film. It washes away the film, with its multitude of germs. It leaves comparatively few germs in your mouth; hours pass before there are again enough to be dangerous to your teeth. And even then, so thoroughly polished are your teeth that it is very much harder for the germs and the mucin to cling to the glossy enamel surface.

Less danger from tartar

The accumulation of tartar on the teeth is greatly retarded by the use of Kolynos. How important this is! Consider the ugly aspect that tartar gives your teeth and the pyorrhea which it so often causes. Your teeth stay beautiful. They glisten. Their full natural



The contents of both these tubes were inoculated with germs that infest the mouth. Then air was pumped through the tubes. The air forced through one tube was first brought in contact with Kolynos. The air forced through the other was not. At the end of the experiment, for every 200 germs in this tube, there was only one in the Kolynos tube. Kolynos kills germs.

Beyond the Detour

by Edwin Balmer

A SINGULAR incident, which immediately stirred great interest, occurred in connection with the robbery of Craddock & Co.'s silk warehouse in Chicago.

In most respects the affair ran in the routine to which everyone was accustomed. Five young men drove to the warehouse after nightfall; they were armed and had handkerchiefs tied over their faces below the eyes. They easily overpowered the watchman and at their leisure loaded a truck with bales of silk and were driving off when a patrolman saw them and, after challenging them, fired. They shot him and made off. There was nothing singular in any of this.

The incident which distinguished this raid was the fact that one of the five men dropped his watch. Its chain snubbed on a nail against which the boy brushed while he was carrying off a bale of silk. He did not notice it, but the watchman did, and as soon as he was untied he pointed it out to the police.

The watch was an ordinary gold plated timepiece, without identifying marks of its own, but in the back was pasted the picture of a girl. She was young and lovely and she gazed out of the back of the watch with calm, level eyes which held an observer silent for the moment after he looked at her and then hurried his pulse.

"Why, she's a sweetheart!" exclaimed Clancy of the detective bureau, when he was handed the watch.

Carefully he removed the photograph from the watchcase, but the picture bore no mark betraying its origin.

"Find her and you'll locate him," said Clancy, sententiously, and he gave the newspaper boys copies of the picture.

"Who is this sweetheart?" the newspapers challenged their readers. She was so lovely, and her eyes appealed to people so—she whose picture had been found in the watch of a criminal—that nearly everybody who read news or even looked at pictures remembered her.

Tom Helmstead was one of these. "How in the world did you get mixed up with a murderer?" he asked, as he held the picture before him. By that time the patrolman who had tried to stop the five and who had been shot, had died. "You are——" Tom did not like Clancy's appellation of sweetheart, which the newspapers had adopted, but he had difficulty in finding another word which was adequate to describer her—"you're a wonder," he said.

The Face of a Girl Looking Out from the Back of a Murderer's Watch—A Wild Ride Through the Night—A Grapple with Death—These Lay Beyond the Detour

He was in Chicago when he happened upon the newspaper with her picture, and upon the next day he was three hundred miles away and driving north in Michigan.

He had the feeling, which often possessed him when he was journeying alone, that he had no roots anywhere; and it was not at all a satisfactory feeling. Today, for instance, he had the sensation of having come from nowhere in particular and of going to no more definite a destination. He was just twenty-two, perfectly healthy and vigorous, and normal in every respect except for his unsatisfactory state of mind. He was driving a long, gray roadster, of about the hue of the flannels he wore. The car bore a license tag of New Jersey, with an additional orange and black strip of steel displaying "Princeton"; but as the day was in August, Tom had not seen the college town for nearly two months and, since he had graduated last June, he was not to return this fall. He had been, most recently, in that vague and baffling location which he called, when one inquired as to his whereabouts, "home."

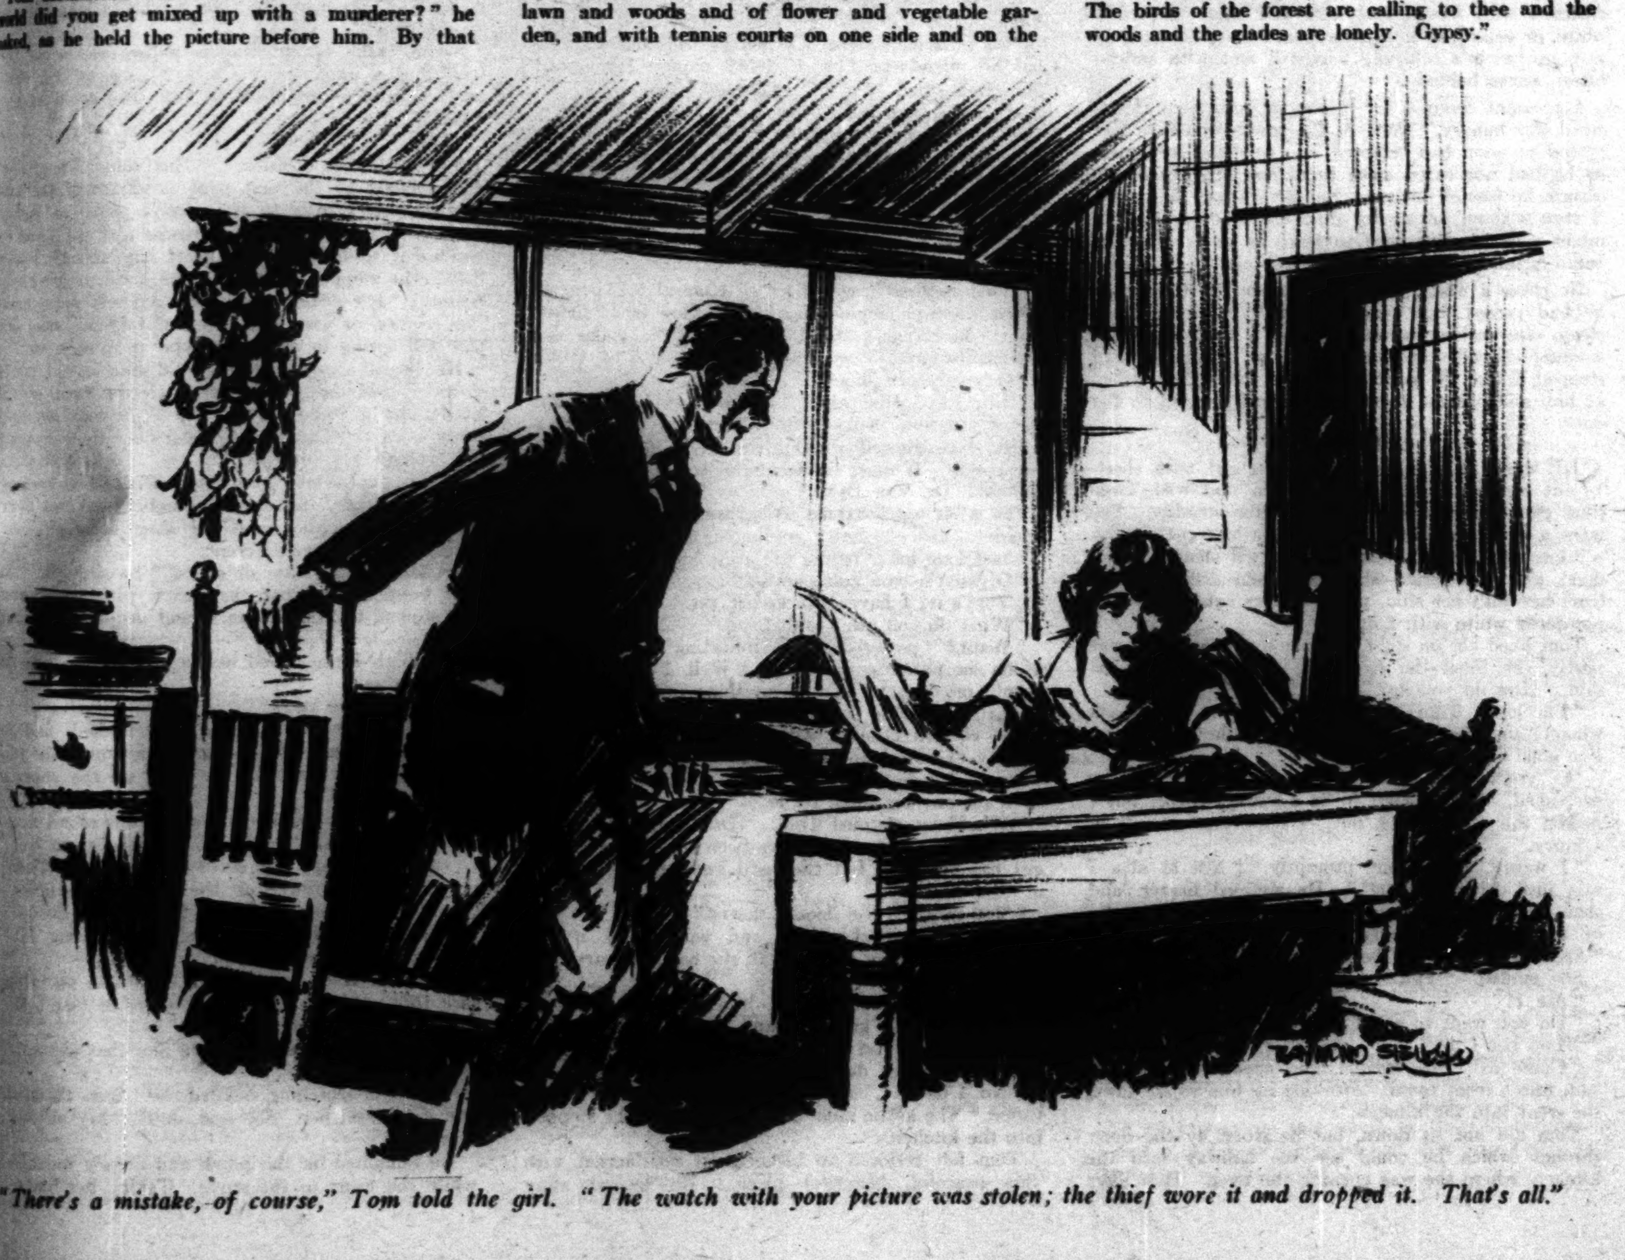
The word comprised two material establishments located about thirty miles apart; a white stone country mansion at Lake Forest, Ill., with five acres of lawn and woods and of flower and vegetable garden, and with tennis courts on one side and on the other the white beach and the blue water of Lake Michigan; and an apartment of five large master's rooms, with four rooms for servants on Astor street, in Chicago. At present Tom's parents inhabited neither of these establishments; his mother was in Paris, his father had been in Maine when Tom last heard from him. The apartment in Astor street was closed for the summer, but the house at Lake Forest was open. That is, servants were there; the blinds were drawn up every morning and lowered every night; the rooms were kept cleaned and aired; the lawn was cut, the hedges trimmed, the gardens tended.

Tom could count upon being welcomed by the servants and being made comfortable, if he stayed there; but during his last stop in Chicago he had hardly looked in upon the place. It had made him feel more out of sorts and lonely; so he had slept at one of his father's clubs, but without lessening his feeling of being stranded, now that college had cast him forth with a surprising and depressing finality.

HIS friends not only were scattered suddenly in twenty cities, but the few of them who lived in Chicago were becoming exceedingly busy with their own affairs, getting married or going into the bond business. Tom had an offer from a bond house which he supposed he might accept, but not now. Later he would marry, he supposed; most men did, and when he thought about whom he might marry, naturally he thought of Sally Grinnell.

He liked Sally, and certainly he had as good a time with her as with any girl. She was just his age, and she was pretty and slender and lively. She was always getting up pageants or Mah Jong parties, or riding or swimming or dancing. She lived—that is, her parents maintained a city residence, closed in summer and often at other seasons—about a block away from the Helmstead apartment. Just now Sally was at Harbor Point, a summer colony in northern Michigan on a beautiful bay, just below the Straits of Mackinac.

Tom had a wire from her. "Hie thee hither, Hubert. The birds of the forest are calling to thee and the woods and the glades are lonely. Gypsy."



"There's a mistake, of course," Tom told the girl. "The watch with your picture was stolen; the thief wore it and dropped it. That's all."

Sally liked to sign herself with capricious names and to dub him anything which came into her mind. It was this wire which had started him moving. He had left the club and driven north to Milwaukee, where he had put his car aboard a steamer and crossed the lake by night to Ludington, from which port he had headed north again on the road which led to Harbor Point. He drove rapidly from habit, not from impatience to reach the Point. Indeed, as the day lengthened he wondered whether he would go to the Point at all.

He knew exactly what would be going on—a lot of hilarity and running about and considerable flirting. What underlay all the doings was matchmaking; a girl and a fellow suddenly found themselves marrying. The man then would go into the bond business and the girl would pick out an apartment on the drive, somewhere, and, as soon as possible, a country place. Her father, or perhaps his, would give them one; but no one would live at either place, much. They would be on the go to London, Paris, Rome, St. Moritz. This idea might have excited Tom Helmstead, but ever since he was a child he had been on the go to such places with his mother and later with classmates in summer vacation. For Sally, they were all on a regular beat; there could be no thrill at taking her away to travel.

IT was midafternoon when he was thus debating his intentions; he was on a stretch of the good, well graveled West Michigan pike about fifty miles below Harbor Point. It had been fair all day, but now one of those sudden, violent thunderstorms which characterize the weather of the Michigan peninsulas was blowing up from the west. Low, dark clouds scudded with green lightning cracking between them.

A sign, "Detour," warned Tom of a blockade in the pike ahead and directed him to a sand and dirt farm road which wound to the west; and, after he turned into it, a squall blew blinding sheets of water over his shield. About a mile west of the pike a second marker pointed a turn to the right; but Tom missed it and kept ahead on the farm road for five miles before he became sure that he had passed a guide somewhere.

The sun came out and glistened on a green, washed, and beautiful land; the clouds lumped into great, white billows which floated overhead, casting the purple shadows which slipped so silently over the wet fields. As most of the earth became sunny, so most of the sky had become blue, and the breeze which followed the rain squalls bore agreeable scents of pine woods, of hay meadows, and of grain.

Tom found himself in a little valley with cultivated fields sloping up on either hand; small, green plants, set in separate clumps, spotted some of the fields in regular rows. They were beans, but he did not know it. Other acres were brown with ripening rye, which he supposed was wheat. The tops of the hills were crowned with forest, and here and there showed a white, or yellow, or brown clapboard house, about half way up, with a whirling windmill and with red or brown barns behind.

A pleasant coolness lay in the air, and Tom Helmstead was hungry. None of the towns which he had passed at noon had tempted him to delay for lunch, so he had not eaten since breakfast. He drove on, certain he was off his road, but not caring; he passed a man without asking for direction in order that he might save his ignorance to serve as introduction at some farmhouse where he might obtain food.

He chose a white painted house, smaller than some he had passed, but very neat; and he drove up a steep, rain-washed entrance road to a level yard with a clump of cedar and birches, where he stopped and stepped down. A black and white sheep dog barked at him and became silent when a girl stepped to the door.

SHE was a most pleasant appearing girl, with chestnut hair and clear, smooth skin and with large blue eyes which observed her visitor steadily. She wore a blue, checked gingham dress half covered by a white apron which went up over her slender shoulders; and her hands—she held them a little away from her with her slim, pretty fingers extended—were powdered white with flour.

Tom liked her on sight, not merely because she was pretty; he liked the liveliness in her voice as she said, "How do you do?"

"I'm lost," Tom replied. "I've come up to ask where I am. I turned off the pike for the detour, and I've gone beyond it, haven't I?"

"O, you've gone past more than five miles!" she exclaimed. "There used to be a marker there; but I reckon the rain took it out. I hope you weren't in a hurry."

"I wasn't," said Tom, promptly. "Not at all. I was just driving around." He stepped nearer, and there reached him through the door the most grateful of aromas to a hungry man, that of hot bread. "Aren't you baking?" he asked, with bold suggestion.

She smiled. "You're hungry?"

"Am I!"

"Do you want to come in?"

"You bet I do."

"Come in!" she invited, and drew back and led him into a front room. After asking him to sit down, she went into the kitchen.

Tom did not sit down, but he stood by the door, through which he could see the hallway into the kitchen, where she was opening the oven. How alert and capable she was, and how graceful, too, and calm!

He glanced about the front room for what it might tell about her and her people. It contained more books than he would have expected to find here, and better books, too: Fiske's "Discovery of America," a set of Motley, Bryce's "American Commonwealth," an encyclopedia, Wells' "Outline of History," a set of Dickens, another of Thackeray, and one of Kipling and one of Mark Twain.

The room had a plain, gray rug and an oak table with kerosene reading lamp with green shade. A plain, blue vase held white and yellow daisies. Altogether it was a simple, comfortable room with a most agreeable air of contentment and security.

Framed photographs showed a good looking woman of middle age, a man with broad forehead and thoughtful eyes, a young woman of twenty-five, who was an older sister of the girl here—Tom thought—and then there was a picture of the girl herself.

This picture puzzled him, for he felt certain he had seen it somewhere; he seemed particularly to remember liking these calm, level eyes. He turned from the picture to her, and he called into the kitchen, "Mind if I come in there?"

"Why, no."

Her back was turned, and she bent as she put a flat, wide pan into the oven.

"Biscuits," she told him, as she straightened and faced him. "That's always the end of baking. Do you want to wait for them, or would you rather have hot bread now?"

SHE was flushed from the heat of the kitchen, and her temples were moist with perspiration, which caught tiny, damp curls of her dark hair; her lips were like soft, warm petals of rose, and she looked at him with her beautiful, calm eyes. He said to himself, "I know something about her. What?" Aloud he said, "I've never been in on a baking before."

"Do you like it?"

For answer he turned to the loaves of her baking—brown, delicious looking and smelling loaves which almost covered the table.

He asked her, "Can I cut one of these?"

She handed him a knife and asked, "You like milk with it? Or tea?"

"Milk," he replied.

"Did you say that because you suppose it's less trouble?"

"No, really."

"Honestly?"

"Well, yes, I did."

She lifted a stove lid and set the kettle upon the wood fire. "It's no trouble at all." And before he could question her next intention she had raised a trap door in the corner of the kitchen and was running down the wooden steps into a cellar, whence she appeared with a brown jar of butter and a new comb of white honey. She carried them out upon a side porch, which was screened and where stood a white topped table and chairs. When he followed with his loaf he introduced himself, "My name's Helmstead. Tom Helmstead. I'm from Chicago."

"I'm Elizabeth Kane."

Seeing that he was waiting for her to be seated, she unbuttoned her apron at the shoulder and laid it off; and she sat down in one of the white chairs. He drew up opposite her and began on the bread and butter and honey.

"How far have you to go before night?" she asked him.

"That is great," said Tom. "Honestly, I've never tasted anything so good in my life. How far?" he answered her then. "O, I don't have to make any special distance."

"O, you're camping."

"No; just loafing along." And he explained. "I'm on my vacation, you see; from Princeton."

Her eyes glowed with interest. "The university, you mean? It must be wonderful to go to classes to men like Dr. Van Dyke."

"It is; it was," agreed Tom, hastily, and cut more bread. "I'm out now; graduated in June. This is my last long loiter before the grim and steady grind."

"O, what're you going to do?"

"That's it; I haven't picked it yet."

"What do you want to do?"

"Want?" repeated Tom, imitating the eagerness which she put into the word. "Well, I can't say I'm keenly on edge to leap at anything quite so eagerly as that. What do you want to do?"

She colored crimson with confusion. "O, it's not so easy—I know—to choose what you'd do, if you're a man. It's much simpler to be a girl, who knows she's got one big thing to do."

"What?" exclaimed Tom. "Do I hear aright? If I do, this is the first time I've been led to suspect the girl has anything but the hard and knotty problem in these days."

"You mean, if she doesn't marry."

"Especially if she does, and particularly if she doesn't; either way she plays it, she has the practically insoluble problem."

Elizabeth Kane gazed at him and said, quietly, "Not if she has a good husband."

"You mean you have one?" asked Tom with a feeling of sudden depression which surprised him.

"No, I haven't," she replied, and immediately recollected, "The kettle must be boiling." And she stepped into the kitchen.

Tom felt restored to his original satisfaction with this peaceful, beautiful place. He looked away to the west, where, over the summit of lower [illegible] sparkled a golden gleam which was the afternoon [illegible] on the lake; the horizon was a circle of blue water, and nearer there undulated yellow grain fields [illegible] the shadows of hills, and little forests of black [illegible] with spots of silver, here and there, where the [illegible] light caught the tops of poplars, and with streaks [illegible] white where the boughs of birches were [illegible] Tom thought he would like to preserve this [illegible] just as it was, as a secret discovery of his own, [illegible] the detour where others turned; he would drive [illegible] again to be welcomed, just as he had been, by [illegible] beth Kane, and given a brown, fresh baked [illegible] cut and butter, and honey to spread upon it, and [illegible] would bring him tea just as she now was doing.

He arose as she approached the table with a [illegible] upon which were a pretty blue teapot and two [illegible] they both sat down and she poured his tea, and [illegible] she handed his cup across the table to him, he [illegible] her lovely, level eyes; and the heart within [illegible] jumped, for he remembered where he had seen [illegible] Not herself, but her picture. It had been in the [illegible] yesterday; it was the picture from the watch of [illegible] of the men who had robbed the silk warehouse [illegible] shot the patrolman. This girl here was the [illegible] for whom the city searched.

Instantly he told himself he was crazy to [illegible] such a thing; his fear was preposterous. Yet he [illegible] not dismiss it, and his complete content of the [illegible] before was gone. There was a catch in his [illegible] of this lovely girl in this perfect place; of course, [illegible] should have known there was a catch to it, [illegible] where. Such a girl as she appeared to be, and a [illegible] so firmly rooted in peace and content, could [illegible] actually exist in this world today without a catch [illegible] it. He tried to talk, as he had before, about Prince- ton and other places he had been, but he could [illegible] put much of his mind into the conversation.

He noticed some letters and a newspaper [illegible] upon a table within the door, and he asked, "That's [illegible] Chicago paper?"

"Yes; do you want to see it?" she asked. "[illegible] yesterday's, of course. It just got here a few [illegible] before you did, we're so near the end of the [illegible] route."

"Have you seen it?" he asked.

"I just opened it and looked over the headlines. I was going to sit down to it later."

"Let me see it for a minute," he asked, and [illegible] she handed it to him he stepped into the house [illegible] out of sight of her before he opened it. Yes, [illegible] she was, gazing from the second page, beside [illegible] carry-over column about the robbery and the [illegible] ing. The picture was identical with the [illegible] of her in the front room; there was no doubt [illegible] ever about it. The girl was she; and she [illegible] know it.

He returned to the porch, carrying the paper, [illegible] he asked, "Do many of your neighbors take Chicago newspapers?"

"Some take Grand Rapids papers and some [illegible] troit, but a good many Chicago," she replied, [illegible] ously puzzled as she observed him. She asked [illegible] "Why?"

HE made his decision. "This column here"—[illegible] pointed to the first page headlines of the [illegible] bery—"carries over to the second page. A [illegible] goes with it. I think you'd better read it." And [illegible] handed it to her with his heart hammering. [illegible] diately he stepped again into the house, arguing [illegible] himself, "It's either a mistake and will mean [illegible] ing to her or else it'll mean a lot and [illegible] else will spring in on her, maybe, in a worse way."

He heard a sound which told him it was [illegible] mistake, and he went farther to the front of [illegible] house, but he could not stay there; he could not [illegible] away from the porch where she was. He came [illegible] her crying.

In his experience, girls who cried did so because they were angry or because somebody had hurt their feelings. In neither case did their crying stir Tom much; but this was different.

"There's a mistake, of course," he declared. "[illegible] that happened is that the watch with your [illegible] was stolen; the thief wore it and dropped it. That's all."

Elizabeth Kane raised her head. "There's no mistake," she said.

"How do you know?"

"The watchman saw him," she replied, and Tom remembered there had been a description of the [illegible] men who were masked. He took up the paper [illegible] read:

> The man who left his watch was about five feet ten, and I could see reddish brown hair under his cap. He seemed more scared than the rest. Newer at the business, I guess. There was something the matter with his left hand; it was all there, but wasn't strong. He didn't seem to hold well with it.

Elizabeth Kane was looking up. "He put a [illegible] fork through his left hand out there in that field. [illegible] was three years ago," she said.

Tom asked, "You—you gave him that picture?"

"Yes."

A smell of scorching assailed them from the kitchen, and it aroused her. She said, dully, "My [illegible] burning."

He remained on the porch and merely watched [illegible] while she went to the stove. Taking her [illegible] cuits from the oven, she dropped the pan and he sprang to help her. She begged him, "Please don't bother. What do they matter?" And she sank to the floor amid the burned spheres of dough.

Tom asked, "He was a—relative of yours?"

"No."

"I see." He collected the blackened biscuits and arranged them upon the table. When he had completed this task he did not know what to do.

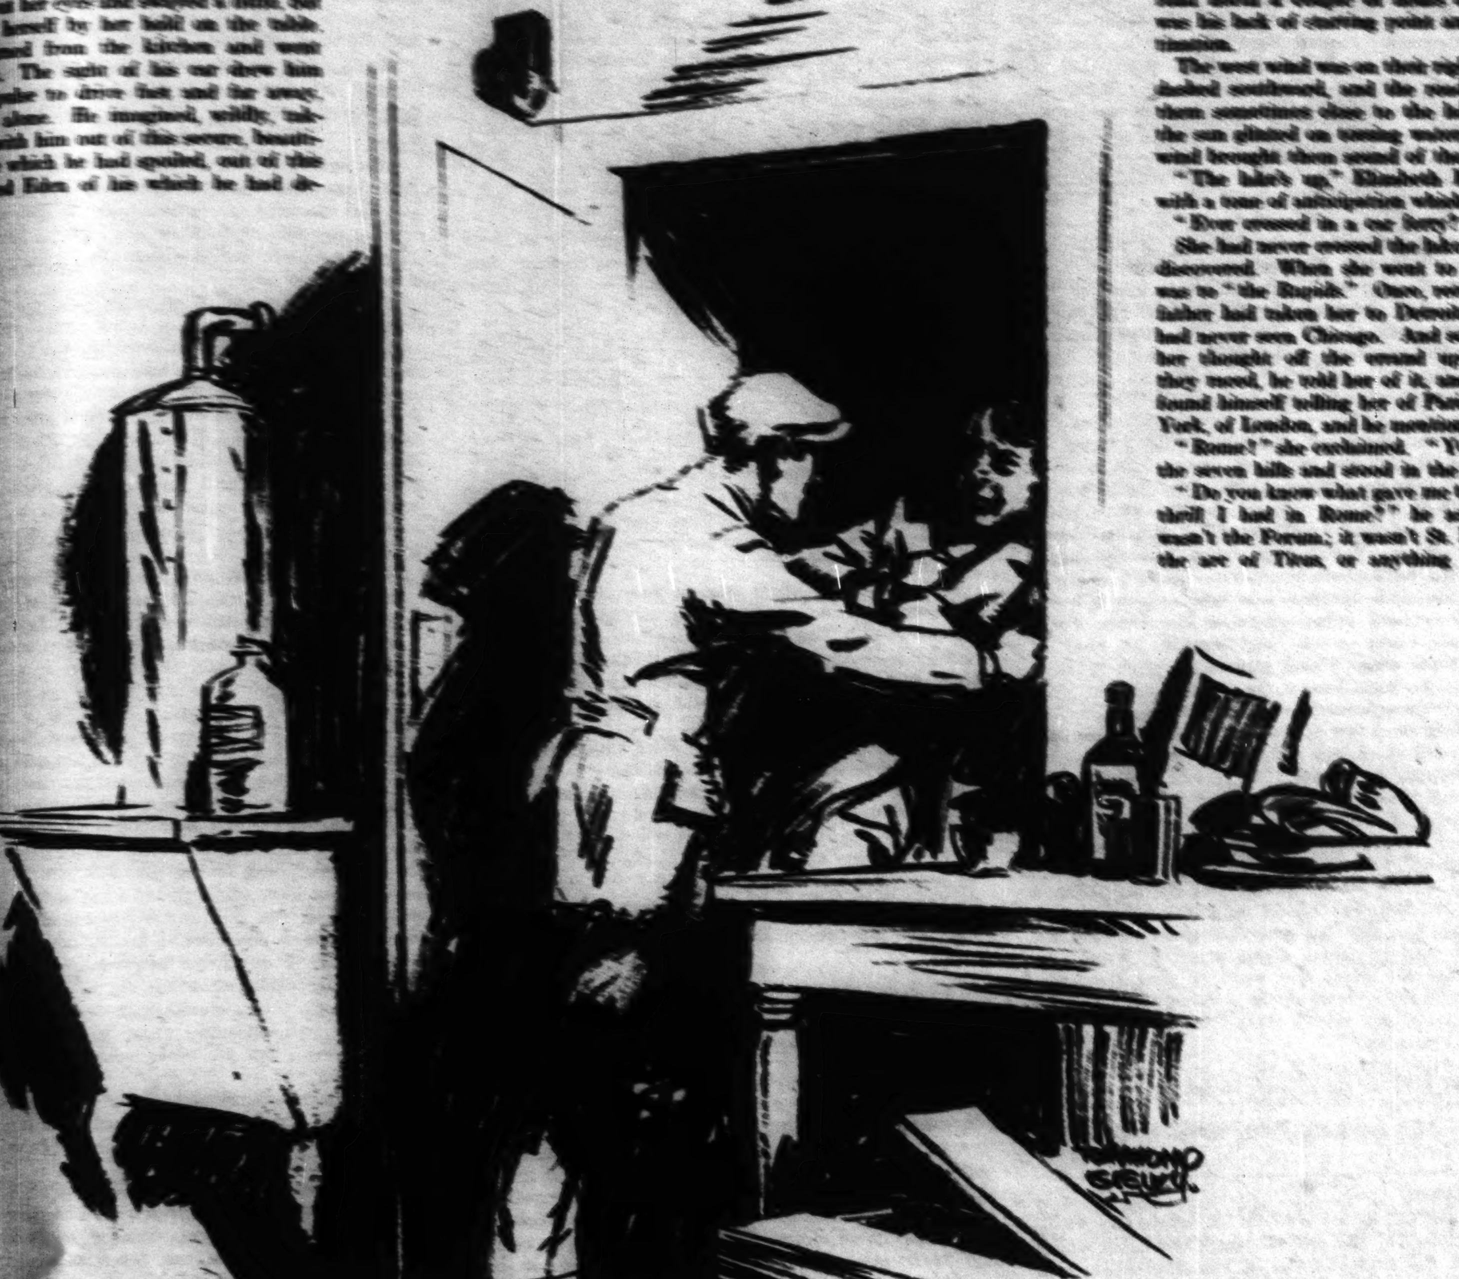
"I'd no idea of anything like this when I came in on you," he said. "I'm sorry as I can be. You gave me a great time, and then I spoiled it."

She paid no attention to this. "They—killed," she said. "He robbed and—killed."

"No one knows who did the shooting," Tom observed.

"They were together," she replied, and she caught at the edge of the kitchen table and pulled herself to her feet. "I know him; everybody around here who knows me knows him. But they don't know where he is in Chicago; I do." She choked and gazed at Tom Helmstead and said, "I ought to telegraph to the Chicago police. I know that. I ought to wire his name and description and where he is living—or where he's been living—so they can arrest him and do what they do to people who—kill."

She shut her eyes and swayed a little, but steadied herself by her hold on the table. Tom turned from the kitchen and went outdoors. The sight of his car drew him with impulse to drive fast and far away, and not alone. He imagined, wildly, taking her with him out of this secure, beautiful place which he had spoiled, out of this discovered Eden of his which he had destroyed.



He was trying to get a revolver, Tom realised; and he grappled the man closer, pinning his arms.

IN the house a telephone bell rang with sharp, insistent signal. He heard Elizabeth Kane come to the front of the house, and the ringing ceased. He heard her say, "Yes, yes, I've seen it." Then were many inaudible answers and finally "No. No. No!"

She left the telephone and a door was shut. He stood in the sun between two cedars, and the ugly demands of duty grasped him. Of the robbery of the bales of silk, Tom Helmstead scarcely thought; but the shooting of the patrolman was an undismissible matter. The picture of the man, which had been printed on the same page with the picture of Elizabeth Kane, etched itself before him now in clear outline in a group with his wife and two children. Yes, Tom Helmstead had a duty today!

He was not used to distress nor to a situation which left him little or no choice of his personal conduct. It stunned him suddenly to realize that not only could he not take Elizabeth Kane away from the consequences which had come upon her; he could not himself escape.

After a few minutes she came out of the house. She was not in gingham now; she wore a blue suit and a blue straw toque. She carried a small brown traveling bag.

"I'm going to Chicago," she told him. "A neighbor's called up already. She's seen the picture; she knows Len Foster had it; she knows he hurt his hand. He's got red hair, too. She's always had it in for him; she's telegraphing the Chicago police."

"What did she call you for?" Tom asked.

"She knows Len's in Chicago, but she doesn't know where."

"You didn't tell her, did you?"

"No. I must go to Chicago first! There's a train in about forty minutes. Will you run me over to the railroad?"

"Where?" asked Tom.

"Back the way you came and about five miles the other side of the pike. Our machine isn't here," she explained. "Father and mother have it. I've left a note for them. They'll be back for supper. Can you take me, please?"

"Of course I can take you," Tom said and reached his hand for her bag. She gave it to him and turned and fastened the house door, shutting the dog inside. She stepped into the car and, with her beside him, Tom drove down to the road and east to the detour.

"When does your train get to Chicago?" he asked.

"I don't know. I change at Grand Rapids. It's only a local train which stops along here. I get to the Rapids about midnight."

"That means Chicago in the morning."

"How early?"

"Eight or nine o'clock. Would you like to be there before?"

She drew a sudden breath. "I'd like to be there now!"

"I CAN'T manage that," he replied, "but I can beat that train to utter helplessness."

"How?"

"We'll run to Ludington and catch a car ferry across to Manitowoc, and then run down the other side of the lake. We'll make Chicago by six o'clock in the morning, anyway, if that's any advantage."

"It might mean—everything."

While he spoke his foot had been pressing lower upon the floor throttle; now the car dashed faster and faster. "But you," she said, "you——"

"I told you I wasn't bound anywhere. Well, I am now; I'm returning to Chicago."

"But it's for me!"

"It isn't, and what's the matter with it if it is?"

He sped on savagely and reached and swung south upon the hard paved surface of the pike.

"The railroad's east!" she cried to him.

He laughed, and with swelling satisfaction sent his car to greater speed. Gone was his discontent, with which he had traveled this road north a couple of hours ago; gone was his lack of starting point and of destination.

The west wind was on their right as they dashed southward, and the road swerved them sometimes close to the lake, where the sun glinted on tossing waters and the wind brought them sound of the surf.

"The lake's up," Elizabeth Kane said with a tone of anticipation which he liked.

"Ever crossed in a car ferry?"

She had never crossed the lake at all, he discovered. When she went to a city, it was to "the Rapids." Once, recently, her father had taken her to Detroit; but she had never seen Chicago. And so, to keep her thought off the errand upon which they raced, he told her of it, and soon he found himself telling her of Paris, of New York, of London, and he mentioned Rome.

"Rome!" she exclaimed. "You've seen the seven hills and stood in the Forum!"

"Do you know what gave me the biggest thrill I had in Rome?" he asked. "It wasn't the Forum; it wasn't St. Peter's, or the arc of Titus, or anything like that. I'd sort of expected them. But I wasn't expecting, when I was in a cab and when I looked over the side just after I got in the city, all at once to see S. P. Q. R. on a shield."

She cried, "Senatus Populusque Romanus! The senate and the people of Rome! The letters on the standards of the legions which went to the ends of their world!"

"It wasn't on the standard of a legion when I saw it," said Tom. "It was on a shield on a street sweeper's hat. But that hat gave me a thrill I'll never forget." Yet he had never mentioned that thrill to a soul before.

THEY reached the port of Ludington shortly after sunset; and, as it was their first stop and their first meeting with people, Tom was nervous lest she be recognized. He was anxious, too, with dread of news which might reach them. There might be a report in the recently printed papers, which were on sale at Ludington, that some of the silk bandits in Chicago had been captured and that Len Foster had been shot or taken.

Tom Helmstead realized that he ought to hope for news of some sort, but he did not. If it came, it would end at once his expedition with Elizabeth Kane, and he did not want that expedition ended. He bought copies of all the papers on sale, and together they searched for more news, but found none. He went to the ferry and arranged to have his motor car transported across the lake, and he bought two passenger tickets and escorted Elizabeth Kane aboard.

Twilight had come. The western heavens were crimson and carmine and pink; but dusk dropped over the land and over the protected waters of the little harbor; off the lake a gale was blowing, and the wind bore the break and beat of the waves against the outer jetties. As the pink of the sky faded to gray and darkened, beacons began winking to mark the sides of the channel out to the open lake. Beyond them were moving lights, white and red, which bore to the south, swinging and swaying. The masthead and port lanterns, they were, of a freighter passing toward Chicago.

Tom Helmstead stood beside Elizabeth Kane forward of the wide, open stern of the big steamer. On the dock, rails ran to the edge; and upon the lower deck—the car deck of the ferry—were similar sets of rails running to the stern and now joined, end to end, to the gleaming steels of the dock.

A freight train backed down. The weight of the cars, as they came aboard, slightly altered the meeting joint of the rails on the dock and the deck; and, as the car deck was steel, the wheels resounded, bumping.

Box cars, flat cars, tank cars, enormous steel gondolas, self-dumping and heaped with Pennsylvania anthracite; cars from Virginia, from Halifax, from Maine bumped aboard; empty cars bound back to Duluth, to Seattle, to California. One track on the car deck was filled, and another train backed aboard beside it, its steel brake shoes screaming as the air hissed and stopped. The locomotive detached itself and drew off, with its headlight glaring into the car filled cavern of the lower deck. A whistle shrieked; switch lights turned; the bass of the vessel's steam whistle rumbled, and men began closing the open stern of the ferry, and others moved, with jack and blocks, amid the freight cars, making them fast.

The caverns of the car deck drew away from the beam of the locomotive headlight, which seemed to stretch, as it followed the ferry toward the channel. The winking beacons slipped past. Up and down, to right, to left, the decks began to lift. Open water now and the wind; all blackness ahead. Up and down, swinging, swaying, the decks careened, and spray blew aboard. The light of the locomotive, which had glared into the car deck caverns, now was a shining speck amid tiny red and yellow glints on the shore. From the caverns came groans and screams as steel of locked wheels scraped and ground on steel of rails, clamped to the steel floor of the car deck.

In the darkness below a man laughed.

Tom Helmstead felt Elizabeth Kane clasp his arm as they heard the laugh in the blow of the gale.

"It's nothing to them!" she cried. "Every day they do it. They take trains across in any wind and weather!"

"When I was a kid that's what I used to dream about doing," Tom Helmstead said. "At first I wanted to run the trains or boats, of course. Then I gave up that idea, yet I kept on wanting to get into the big game. The big game, I mean, of beating nature. I used to dream about tunneling mountains and building big dams out west. I always thought of myself living somewhere in a cabin on the edge of a camp. That's why I started in the engineering course at Princeton."

"What made you give it up?"

"I didn't give up the course. I can be an engineer if I want to."

"You mean," cried Elizabeth Kane, "that's what you want to do!"

THE lurching of the ship gave him cause to clasp her arm, and he led her forward, where they could feel the plunge of the prow through the black waves and where the wild violence of the wind beat upon them. No light of pier or ship showed in the tossing chasm of their horizon; they stood at the very stem of the vessel and seemed alone on the lake in the night.

Not only was discontent now gone from him; the satisfaction which had replaced it and with which he had started this expedition with her was gone also. In its place was a stir of need to do.

This stir associated itself so intimately with the girl beside him that almost with a shock he recollected her errand and his. She drew away, and, accompanying her, he found the lee of a life boat, and they halted.

"The Chicago police must have his name and description now," she said, suddenly. "His," of course, was Len Foster's. It was her first reference to him since she had started from her home. Tom made no reply, and she appealed to him. "Ought I have wired them where he was?"

"How can I answer that? I don't know what you intend to do."

"I don't know, either. I think I do; and then—I don't."

"No wonder," said Tom. "No wonder."

"He stole; but I can't think he—killed; or that he meant to. Yet, yet—if they take him and he was with the man who murdered——"

"Don't cry," Tom begged.

"O, I'll not cry—again," she promised.

"Do, if you want to. But you ought to go in and lie down. You ought to try to rest! We'll be across by one or two o'clock; then we'll run down the other side."

She said, "You're mighty good to me, and without any reason to be."

"I've every reason in the world!" he protested. "I never before saw a girl like you. Do you think, after bringing that to you, I could let you go down alone? I don't know what you mean to do, and I don't care. But, whatever it is, I'm in it with you. Will you believe that? I'm with you, all through. Promise me now you'll trust me."

He persuaded her to promise him, and a little later he induced her to go to the women's cabin and rest. He promised her also to rest and he tried to keep his word; but soon he was up and out again in the dark of the plunging prow. Dreams disturbed him—one was a dream which he had not known for years. It formed before him the image of a camp in a wilderness where men, under his direction, built a great dam near the base of a mountain. On the mountain side above the camp was a cabin, where his cabin always had been situated in his dream; and now, as never before in his dream, it was shared by another.

She was a slender, pretty, and eager and exceedingly pleasant person, who delighted in the duties of life, who performed them happily, and who knew and delighted in the work he was doing. She baked for him marvelous bread and set yellow butter before him and clear honey. . . . Then there was an entirely new dream of travel to London and Paris and to Rome, with a girl who never was bored with anything and who thrilled, as he had when he was a boy, to S. P. Q. R., although it stood, when she saw it, only on a street sweeper's hat.

TOM HELMSTEAD brought himself from such fancies to the prow of the car ferry carrying him and Elizabeth Kane, not to Rome but to Chicago, where she was going to Len Foster.

They reached Manitowoc before two in the morning, and when a clock tolled twice for the hour they were in the motor car rushing south from the sleeping town. They heard clock towers in Milwaukee strike the hour of four.

Dawn began to dim the yellow beams of the car headlights which lighted the smooth cement road to Racine. Dawn disclosed to Tom Helmstead the white, pure profile of her who sat so quietly beside him. Day was come with dismay for her at the tremendous thing she had to do.

Milk trucks and farm wagons were stirring; motor carts brought bundles of morning papers. Tom halted and procured a Chicago paper, and the first page told Elizabeth Kane and him together that Len Foster's name and full description indeed was known; her name was known. But neither Len Foster nor any of his companions had been found.

"No one else knew where he lived," repeated Elizabeth Kane as Tom and she drove on.

"Where was it?" he asked, and she told him.

"Elston avenue. Do you know it?"

"Yes. It's a long street. What number?"

She told him and he said, "That's easy to locate. Do you know what you're to do?"

"This much," she said. "I'm going there."

"What for?"

"To see him."

"Then?"

"O, I don't know yet. But I must do that first. He may be there yet, you see. Only the morning papers got his full description from—home. It's not six o'clock. Maybe I can still find him there."

The number proved to be upon a two flat building near the middle of a block built up with similiar structures, and with taller flats of three stories grouped six, and twelve, and twenty-four or thirty together. A garage, with living quarters above it, was almost directly opposite; a drug store was on one corner, with a dry cleaner's place next and a butcher's shop adjoining. The doors were closed; the street was empty except for an occasional early morning cart and one or two persons afoot who appeared at crossings and vanished up back ways. The rising sun cast long, tranquil shadows and a slight sleepy haze hung in the yellow light. There was nothing at all which was threatening in the aspect of this drab, dull looking street.

Tom drove a few doors beyond after he had the number he sought. For a few seconds after car stopped the girl beside him sat quiet, and hand went to hers and closed over it.

"I'm all right now," she whispered. "If he's know just what to do." She turned her hand Tom's and answered the pressure of his fingers. know how I want to thank you, don't you?"

"Yes, but you're not rid of me yet."

"I've got to see him alone."

"With me," said Tom.

"No, you can't come with me. That might—I know what that might do. But there's no danger if I go in alone."

And she freed her hand suddenly and stepped the car.

Tom followed and caught her in front of the Certainly it looked innocuous enough. Except for number and the different shade of brick used for wall, it was indistinguishable from its neighbors either side, from which it was separated only by narrow cement walk.

ELIZABETH KANE looked pale in the shadow which she stood; she trembled a little, but trolled it, and her blue eyes were very bright. "I going in," she said and still whispered. "You'll something terrible, perhaps, if you come with But I'll be all right."

She darted from him toward the door, and when started after her she looked back with an appeal stopped him, but he stood where he had her sight.

The entrance door, which she opened, had a glass pane which was uncurtained, and through saw her examine the names over the two mail in the vestibule. Neither box seemed to offer name she sought, and she hesitated a moment and rang the first bell.

After a minute or so an inner door was opened a middle aged woman in a faded cotton wrapper with a cheap boudoir cap over her head; sharply scrutinized the girl who had summoned her at early hour. In reply to her caller's question, first shook her head. Then she asked questions own, meanwhile gazing steadily at Elizabeth She jerked her head, nodding upwards, and she into the vestibule and rang the bell beside her and before any one could have answered and the door she opened a door beside her own which closed a stairway.

Elizabeth Kane climbed the stairs and the door

The whole of Tom's instinct was to follow ately. It was not only recollection of her appeal it was also the peculiar action of the woman delayed him. Instantly after the door to the closed she became alert and tense; she reopened stair door very cautiously and only a crack she put her ear to the crack and here listened. drew back in a posture of satisfaction and she closed the door; she opened her own door disappeared, without having noticed Tom at all.

He glanced up at the windows of the second He saw no one and he heard nothing. He the vestibule, and, trying the door to the stairs, found it opened when pulled vigorously. The were clear and the door at the top was shut. Kane had been admitted to the flat above.

Tom put his ear close to her door and made few words; they were the number of this flat Elston avenue. She repeated it, and then said, that's right!"

Plainly, she was summoning some one. He did like the tone he heard. He returned to the stairs, as quietly as possible, he ascended to the top, he listened and made out tones of a man's The words were muttered, but the tone was distinguishable.

Elizabeth Kane replied, and the man said you don't!"

She seemed to make some move in answer; seemed to fall, or be flung, to the floor; and tried the knob of the door. It did not turn, and beat on the panel.

The sound of struggling ceased, and he "Let me in!"

"DON'T try to come in!" called Elizabeth wildly; but he flung his weight against the It was firm, and he could not break it.

The Golden Beast by E. Phillips Oppenheim

HOW THE STORY STARTED:

ISRAEL FERNHAM, first Lord Honerton, entertains at his country house preliminary to a shooting party. His youngest son, Cecil, is called from dinner by a message from Heggs, head gamekeeper. Young Cecil had seduced Heggs' daughter. The old man throws Cecil to the stone floor, killing him. Through Lord Honerton's vast influence, Heggs is hanged. Heggs' daughter,

MARGARET, curses the Fernhams. Israel dies and is succeeded by

JOSEPH FERNHAM, second Lord Honerton. Thirty years later Joseph entertains in the same dining room preceding a shooting meet. Joseph's youngest son,

ERNEST, is summoned by the head gamekeeper and vanishes. Lord Honerton's beautiful daughter,

JUDITH, hears Ernest's voice on the telephone, then the wire goes dead. Prince Edgar visits the Fernham plant with Lady Judith and her fiance,

LORD FREDDIE AMBERLEYS. There

SIR LAWRENCE PAULE, the brilliant but mysterious young chief chemist, refuses to let them see his private rooms. Sir Lawrence tells Judith a union between her and Amberleys would be ridiculous. Lord Honerton's brother,

SAMUEL FERNHAM, visits the plant. Paule, under protest, gives old Samuel a drug to make him young again for just two hours. Visiting Paule at the works, Judith peeps into his forbidden rooms while he is elsewhere. She shrieks and faints. Inside are gruesome skeletons Paule uses in his research. Paule perfects a new nerve tonic which means a fortune for himself and another fortune for the Fernhams. Inspector Rodes asks Judith for a picture of Israel in youth. He is not satisfied that the child of Heggs' daughter really died. Lord Amberleys says the photo resembles Paule. Demand for the new nerve tonic so outruns possible production that the chemist advises rationing of orders. He gives drugs to SAMUEL FERNHAM JR., whose nerves are broken by strange conduct in his father and Lady Honerton. They have warned Samuel that he may be the next victim of the Fernham curse. A mysterious youth questions Paule concerning his antecedents, and Rodes tries to enter his service. Both are brusquely dismissed. Judith tells Paule she fears madness. She fancies she has seen Ernest on waking suddenly. Lady Honerton, who is rebuilding Heggs' destroyed cottage "to lift Israel's curse," tells Sir Lawrence at a shoot that she has stepped over the edge of the world and has seen and talked with Ernest.

INSTALLMENT VIII.

Good News and Bad.

DINNER on the concluding night of the shooting party at Honerton Chase was an unusually festive meal. Rachel had abandoned the effort to sit at the head of her table and remained in her room, and Judith, who took her place, was in one of her most brilliant and daring moods. She wore a gown of geranium colored chiffon, her hair shone like black ivory under a Russian headdress of wonderful pearls. Her complexion was so clear as to be almost unnatural. Her lips, her eyes, were never quiet for an instant. Prince Edgar sat on one side and Frederick Amberleys on the other, and she flirted with both indiscriminately and shamelessly. She found time, however, to play also the watchful hostess, to stimulate conversation in whatever direction it flagged. The only person to whom she did not once speak and from whom, indeed, she seemed to keep her attention as far removed as possible, was Paule.

"Dear Judith is at her best this evening," the marchioness murmured to Joseph. "What a hostess she will make. I am sure Freddy will be very proud of her."

Her host smiled graciously. The faint note of surprise, which so many people used in their amazed appreciation of Judith, was at times almost an irritation.

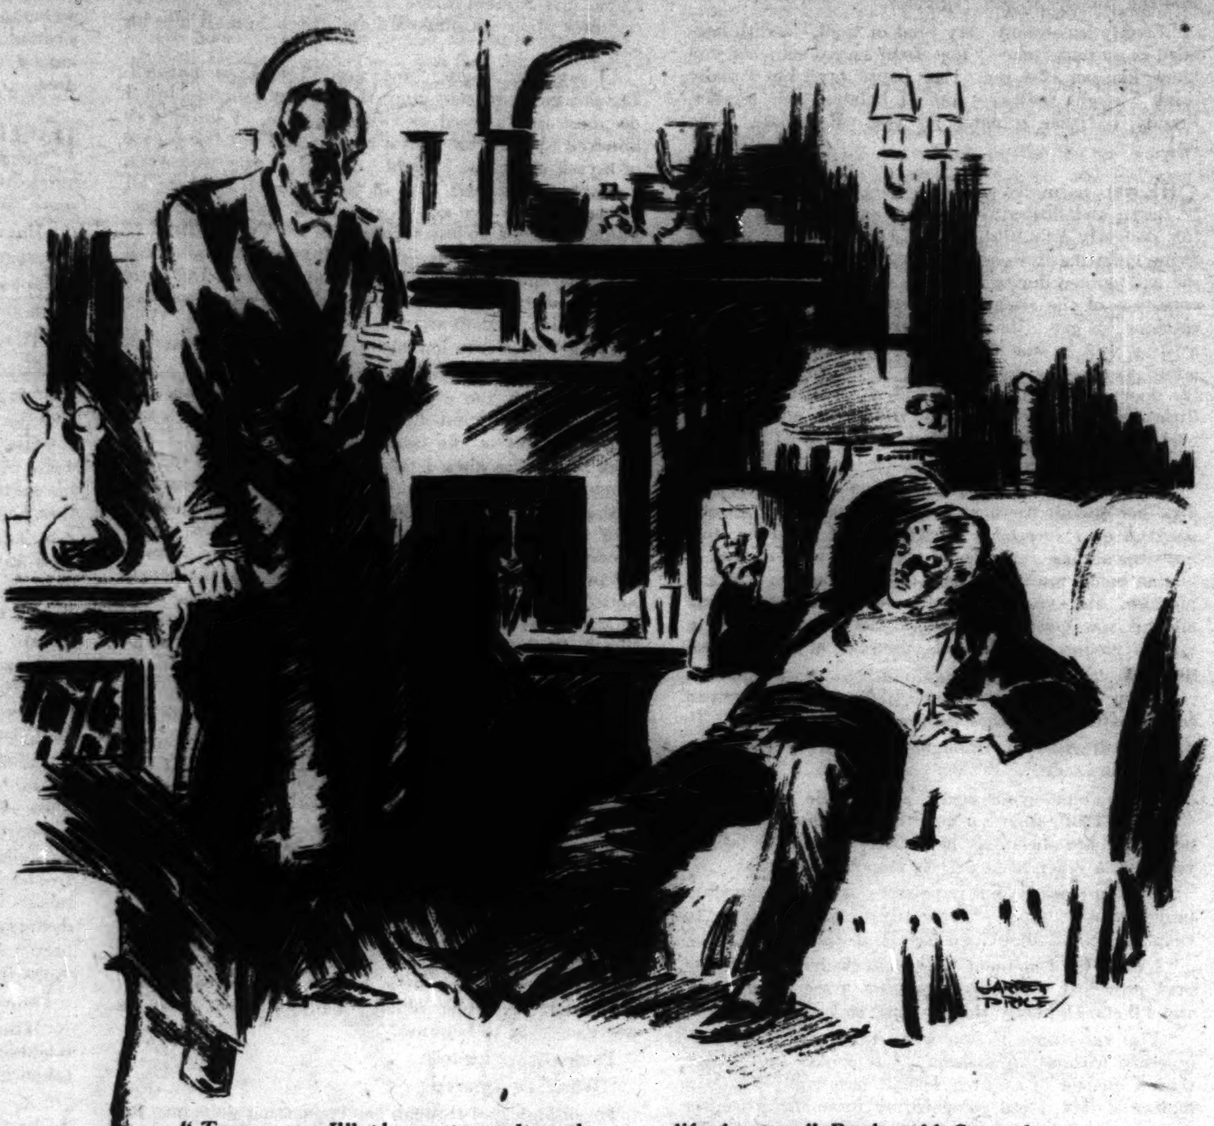
"Judith has certainly inherited the brains of the family," he admitted. "In appearance her mother was very like her at her age."

"I can quite believe it," the marchioness assented—"a sweet face even now. I am so sorry Lady Honerton didn't feel well enough to come down this evening."

"My wife is not strong," Joseph confided. "She has had, of course, to bear such a shock as few people in the world have had to face, and it has affected her nerves."

"The uncertainty of it all is so terrible," the marchioness observed, sympathetically. "That is the part I could not bear."

Martin, with a word of apology, presented a sheet of paper to his master on a silver salver. Joseph adjusted his pince-nez and glanced through it.



"Tomorrow I'll plan out an altogether new life for you," Paule told Samuel.

"This is the bag for the three days," he announced, raising his voice slightly. "I will read it out. Three thousand, two-hundred and ninety-one pheasants, two hundred and thirty-three brace of partridges, forty-three woodcock, two hundred and ten hares, three hundred and seventy-two rabbits, twenty-seven various."

There was a little murmur of congratulation. Joseph beamed upon every one.

"I am very glad," he concluded, "that the sport has been so good. Much obliged to you all for helping to give us a record three days. Middleton assured me that the shooting had never been better—and Middleton is not an easy man to please."

"The marquis has enjoyed it immensely," his wife confided. "He was saying, while he was changing for dinner, that there are no stands in the county to compare with yours."

"LIKE old Johnson, the trainer, who once shot here," Samuel Junior whispered under his breath to Joyce Cloughton, his neighbor, "used to say, he preferred high birds and low women."

Joyce looked at him severely.

"Samuel Fernham," she said, "if you were not a millionaire and unmarried, I should be angry with you. As it is, I suppose I must smile. It's terrible what we impecunious young women have to put up with nowadays in our frantic search for a husband."

Samuel Junior stroked his stubby little bit of mustache. Joyce had been for years the object of his fervent admiration, and he would have proposed to her long ago if he had had the faintest hope that she would have accepted him.

"You and Judith do nothing but chaff a fellow," he complained. "You know very well that you are responsible for my lonely state."

"I'm not so sure it is altogether lonely," the young lady rejoined, drily. "London's rather a congested area nowadays, you know."

"Well, I think you girls might keep away from Ciro's, at any rate," was Samuel's plaintive protest.

"Most amusing place I know," Joyce replied. "It's such fun seeing you poor dears trying to make up your minds whether you ought to be noticed or not."

"When I'm married there'll be nothing of that sort," he declared.

"No inducement at all," she retorted, shaking her head. "What on earth would your poor wife do when she wanted an evening off, if you hadn't a little affair of your own to look after sometimes?"

The young man was nonplussed, as he generally was when either Judith or Joyce talked nonsense to him.

"I'm only anxious to please," he announced. "You girls seem to get everything upside down nowadays. If it's necessary for me to promise to be unfaithful, I'll make a bluff at it. I'm always for taking life as it comes along."

"Samuel's perfectly sweet this evening," Joyce confided to Judith. "I hope I don't get left alone with him in the winter garden or anything like that after dinner. I know I shall fall."

"My dear," Judith assured her, "I should love to have you in the family—even at a cousinly distance. Besides, I think Sammy ought to settle down. He's too sickeningly rich for a bachelor. He needs some one to spend his money on."

"It seems inevitable," Joyce sighed. "Nobody in the world needs some one to spend money on them like I do. Besides, I owe really quite a great deal. How should you feel, Mr. Fernham—or shall I call you 'Sammy'—about debts contracted before marriage?"

"I'd pay 'em," Samuel Junior declared with enthusiasm—"pay 'em willingly."

"He really is wonderful," Joyce acknowledged. "Come and talk to me after dinner, Sammy. I might take you on at billiards. I owe so much money at bridge that I am afraid these people would look coldly at me if I sat down to play again tonight."

Prince Edgar glanced across at Joyce admiringly. With her piquant face and mass of chestnut hair, she was undoubtedly attractive.

"Does Lady Joyce always talk nonsense so aptly?" he inquired.

"She's rather good at it," Judith admitted. "As a matter of fact, I wish she'd marry Sammy. It would be the making of him. Sammy wants training rather, but he's not a bad sort. Do you believe in the marriage de convenance, prince?"

"I have more sympathy with the type of marriage to which you are committed, Lady Judith," he replied.

"Did you hear that, Freddy?" Judith exclaimed.

"I call it a beautifully veiled compliment for both of us. I suppose we are in love with each other, aren't we?"

"I imagine that some feeling of that sort exists," was the somewhat stiff rejoinder.

"Freddy isn't really very fond of chaff," Judith confided in an undertone—"not about sacred subjects, you know, like our affection. I am happy here, but I really think I ought to leave you. I believe your mother, Freddy, is trying to catch my eye. Here goes! I'm up!"

SHE rose, naturally enough at precisely the right moment, and floated down the room, perfectly graceful, perfectly beautiful, with a curious air of intense living radiating from her. Paule, the one person whom she had ignored during the meal, watched her curiously, conscious of the slight effort with which she avoided catching his eye. He was not greatly disturbed at her attitude, but he was amazed at the warmth of his own admiration as he followed her slow progress toward the door; appreciating to the fullest extent the insolent little swing of her lithe body, the slight introspective curl of her lips which gave her an air almost of aloofness.

All day long he had repelled her confidences, had kept her outside the armor of a reserve which no one yet had ever succeeded in penetrating. Yet he, too, notwithstanding the gift of strength, was a man, a human being, much as others, only stronger of will and purpose. His eyes were fixed upon the door some time after it was closed. Samuel Junior's voice broke in upon a medley of reflections, unusual, in a sense, disquieting.

"I say, Paule, could I come along and talk to you tonight after the others have gone to bed?"

Paule dragged his thoughts back from their unwonted escapade.

"What about—your health again?" he asked drily.

"Don't chaff, there's a good fellow," the young man begged. "I'm absolutely in earnest. I want to talk to you from a different angle. It may be important."

"To you possibly, but not to me," was the somewhat unsympathetic reply—"especially if your idea is to keep me up till about two o'clock in the morning."

"I won't be a moment later than twelve," the young man promised. "I know the girls won't sit up late, and I'll come directly they've gone to bed."

"You can come if you want to, then," Paule acquiesced without enthusiasm, "but if you stay longer than a quarter of an hour I shall turn you out. As a matter of fact, I am going to my room directly after dinner. I have some important work to do and, as I don't play bridge, Lady Judith has consented to excuse me."

Samuel indulged in a little grimace.

"Fancy work after a day in the open air like we've had!" he exclaimed. "Why, I should be asleep in ten minutes!"

"That is because you have little self-restraint and less inclination for work of any sort," Paule observed coolly. "If you'd follow out the program of life which I could arrange for you, you wouldn't need any drugs."

Samuel filled his glass with port, and passed the decanter to his neighbor.

"I'll take your program on in the next world," he promised jocosely.

There was an enigmatic light for a moment in Paule's eyes, a mirthless smile upon his lips.

"One never knows," he murmured. "You may feel disposed to try it in this."

There were still sounds of revelry downstairs when Samuel presented himself in the small sitting room which was part of the suite allotted to Paule. It was a transformed and glorified Samuel. An amazing event had, for the moment, at any rate, lifted him from the level of his commonplace existence.

"Shan't bother you long tonight, Paule," he announced joyously. "I'm going down again. Great news! What do you think's happened?"

Paule shook his head without speech. The young man rattled on.

"Joyce has come up to the scratch. I never dreamed she would. Never thought I should have the ghost of a look-in. She's all chaff, of course, but there are half a dozen fellows she could marry tomorrow. What about it, Paule? I say, what about it?"

"From the little I have seen of the young lady, I should say that you are much to be congratulated," was the prompt reply.

"Congratulated? Well, I should say so!" the young man exclaimed, with a touch of his ordinary pomposity. "Of course, that sort of thing doesn't matter so much nowadays, but, after all, she is the daughter of a duke. I expect I'll have to spread myself with the government a bit. Can't stand 'Mr. and Lady Joyce Fernham.' I couldn't believe my ears or my eyes, Paule, when she suddenly turned serious. We were playing billiards—quite her own idea—and she'd been chaffing along just as usual, when she suddenly stopped."

"Please spare me these details," Paule begged. "You're engaged to be married to a charming girl, I have congratulated you, it is within a stroke of midnight, and I haven't finished my work."

"Can't get rid of me like that, old chap," Samuel observed. "What an unsociable beggar you are, sitting up here all the evening!"

"I excused myself to Lady Judith, as well as to your uncle," Paule explained. "I don't play bridge and I have some important work on hand."

Honerton was a house conducted on hospitable principles, and Samuel mixed a whisky and soda from the decanter upon the sideboard and threw himself into an easy chair.

"I say," he began, "you needn't look so alarmed. I'm not going to stay more than a few minutes, but I do want just a word or two of advice. I know I've knocked about a bit—got a bit soft and not taken care of myself as well as I might. That's all very well when a chap's got nobody else to think about, but it's all changed now. I've got to get rid of this nervousness, Paule, even if I go into training for it. I'm prepared to do anything reasonable—drink half as much, smoke half as much, and, of course, it's all finished with the little girlies and that sort of thing. You're the cleverest chap I know—better than any physician I ever went to. Help me to get back into line again, Paule. I'll never forget it. I promise you that.

"You think I'm a bit of a rotter, I know, because you're a serious minded sort of a chap, and I ain't, but I've got a bit of the family obstinacy in me. I can stick to a thing when I mean to. What I want for the moment is something a little stiffer than 'Neurota.' I've got to go and stay with Joyce's people, and the idea terrifies me. The old chap never moves out of Scotland, wears kilts, and fancies himself as a politician and a religionist—writes long letters to the papers nobody ever reads and never moves without a chap blowing into those bagpipes in front of him. He won't like it, Paule, and he won't like me, but I've got to go through with it."

PAULE had sunk a little lower into his chair and was watching his visitor with some accession of interest.

"No," he admitted slowly, "he probably won't like you. You will probably even be a shock to him."

Samuel Junior crossed his legs and coughed.

"If I'm good enough for Joyce," he announced, "that's all that counts with me. After all, there aren't many sons-in-law in this country who could settle half a million upon the woman they're going to marry—not that I've made up my mind to settle as much as that," he went on, a little hastily, "but I could if I thought it advisable. What I want to know, Paule, is are you going to help me?"

Paule rose to his feet.

"Wait," he directed.

He disappeared through the connecting door into his bedroom, and returned in a few minutes shaking a small bottle in his hand. He poured the contents into a tumbler and handed it to the young man.

"I'm all right now," the latter remarked, eyeing it a little dubiously, "full of beans and all that sort of thing, pulse as steady as a rock. Can't I keep this until tomorrow?"

Paule shook his head.

"You must drink that now," he enjoined; "only one more whisky and soda tonight, and you'd be better if you didn't smoke. Tomorrow I'll plan out an altogether new life for you. If you follow my instructions I may be able to do you some good, but I tell you frankly that I do not preserve the faintest interest in any one who does not do absolutely as he is told."

The young man drank off his draught, and stood up.

"I don't care what you tell me," he declared—"cold baths, breathing exercises—I'll take 'em all. I feel as though I had something to live for now, if you understand me. One gets kind of selfish with no one special in the world to hang on to."

Paule moved toward the door and Samuel followed him reluctantly.

"I shall just have a prowl round downstairs," he confided, "although I expect the girls have gone to bed by now. What time are you off in the morning, Paule?"

"At 9 o'clock or as soon after as I can. Close the door, there's a good fellow. Good-night!"

Samuel made his way downstairs, discovered, as he had feared, that Judith and Joyce had retired, and turned away from the winter garden, where one or two of the male guests were still sitting up, with a little glow of conscious rectitude. He went to his room, where his servant—not expecting him for another hour or two, and having only just left a cheerful bridge party in the housekeeper's room—was engaged in a hurried execution of his belated duties. Samuel took off his coat and slipped on a smoking jacket.

"I'll look after myself, Jenkins, tonight," he announced. "Is Martin still up?"

"He was up a few moments ago, sir," the man replied.

"Give him my compliments, and ask him to let you have a few bottles of wine downstairs," Samuel enjoined. "I'll make it all right with his lordship tomorrow morning. You can drink my health and the health of Lady Joyce Cloughton."

"I'm sure I wish you every happiness, sir," the man declared, reflecting with satisfaction that a settled establishment was a great deal better than bachelor quarters. "I'll hurry down before Mr. Martin retires. Sure there's nothing more I can do for you, sir? The whisky and soda and some ice are on the side table."

"Nothing else, thanks, except make yourself scarce," Samuel replied. "I shall probably turn in almost at once. I am quite sleepy."

The man withdrew and Samuel helped himself to a whisky and soda and yawned. He strolled to the window and looked out across the moonlit park. Then he yawned again. He was really very drowsy, very sleepy, indeed. Almost automatically he commenced to undress.

PAULE was finishing his breakfast on the following morning when Amberleys entered the dining room hurriedly. There was a look of trouble on his handsome, good humored face.

"Have you heard what's happened, Sir Lawrence?" he exclaimed.

Paule shook his head.

"I haven't seen a soul this morning."

"They can't find young Samuel!"

"Can't find him?" Paule repeated. "I thought the trouble generally was to get him out of bed before [illegible] o'clock."

"His bed hasn't been slept in," Amberleys went on. "His evening clothes are lying all over the place and his servant thinks from some things that are missing that he must have changed into a lounge suit. At any rate, he's not in his room and not a soul seems to have seen anything of him."

Paule rose to his feet, walked to the sideboard, and helped himself to another cup of tea.

"He came to my room last night and talked about starting to lead a new life," he observed. "I expect he's gone out for an early morning walk and breathing exercises in the park. Better have some breakfast. He'll turn up."

"Well, I don't know much about the young man's habits," Amberleys admitted, "but from what I do know of him I cannot conceive a more unlikely person to start out for a tramp before breakfast on a [illegible] morning. However, I suppose it's no use meeting trouble half way. I shouldn't think anything of it except for the extraordinary episode of young Ernest's disappearance from this same house. Judith takes it pretty seriously. She rushed off somewhere at once, down to the garage, I think."

Paule stirred his tea thoughtfully.

"The garage?" he repeated. "Surely she could have telephoned to find out whether the young man had taken his car or not?"

"As a matter of fact, I happen to know he has not," Amberleys remarked. "I telephoned down myself directly I was sure that he wasn't in his rooms, and his car is there and his chauffeur, with orders to be ready at 11 o'clock. That was about Fernham's idea of a suitable time to commence the day."

"Lady Judith is very intelligent," Paule murmured. "She probably has a theory of her own."

"She's over-intelligent," Amberleys agreed. "All nerves and brain and that sort of thing. I'm trying to persuade her to marry me this winter and, if I can, I shall take her to Egypt right away from the whole show. Ernest was rather a cub, but she was genuinely fond of him, and if this young man has really bolted, it, too, it is getting a bit thick, isn't it? Do you mind passing me the butter?"

Joseph made a somewhat abrupt appearance in the dining room. He forgot to be pompous, and was, without a doubt, seriously disturbed.

"Samuel's gone!" he exclaimed. "Not a sign of him anywhere! Left the house and no one can tell whether it was last night or this morning. There's one thing we do know this time, though. He left of his own accord and he left deliberately—even changed his clothes before he went."

"I've just been telling Lord Amberleys here that he came to see me last night," Paule observed, "and that I gave him a talking to about his health and his manner of living. He has probably gone for an early morning walk."

"If he's done anything of that sort without leaving a message," Joseph declared viciously, "I'll wring the breath out of his body."

"I trust that Lady Honerton is not alarmed," Paule ventured.

"Her attitude is amazing," Joseph acknowledged, standing before the sideboard, his natural greediness struggling with a sense of incongruity as he studied his favorite dish of kidneys and bacon. "She takes the matter seriously, but she showed not the slightest sign of surprise. Well, I suppose one must carry on," he added vaguely, lifting a spoon and fork. "The lad may be all right."

"Is there anything further I can do, sir?" Amberleys inquired, rising to his feet and pushing his chair back. "I'm not shooting anywhere today. Would you like me to motor over to Norwich and see the chief constable?"

"We telephoned there an hour ago," Joseph replied. "Telephoned up to Scotland Yard, too. I don't think there is anything you can do, Amberleys. All the outdoor servants are spreading themselves over the place on bicycles. You might look after Judith for a bit, perhaps. These shocks are bad enough for us men, but they're the devil for highly strung women."

Amberleys left the room and Paule prepared to follow his example.

"There's nothing I can do, I'm afraid," he said. "You'll make my excuses to Lady Honerton and Lady Judith, if I don't see her. I'm much obliged to you for an excellent shoot. Sorry this should have come to disturb you at the end of it."

Joseph set down his teacup noisily.

"That's all right, Paule," he rejoined. "Glad you could come, I'm sure. If there's no news, I shall be up in town tomorrow, if it's only to go and tell them what I think of them at Scotland Yard. It's disgraceful, positively disgraceful!" he exclaimed, striking the table with his fist, suddenly overcome with a sense of personal injury. "Nearly twelve months ago my own son disappears from this house, walks out straight from this table in his evening clothes, and from that day to this nothing has been heard of him. And now his cousin, gone almost the same way. We've the worst police system in the world. I'd guarantee there isn't a country anywhere under the sun where two such disappearances could take place."

"Have you wired Samuel's father?" Paule inquired.

"Not yet," his host admitted. "He's in such a feeble state that I'm really afraid of the shock for him. I shall either send some one from here with a letter or go and see him myself tonight. A pleasant journey to you, Paule!"

PAULE, making his preparations for departure, found much confusion in the household. The marquis, who had just descended, insisted upon telephoning personally to the chief constable at Norwich, who was a protégé of his. The marchioness, with a pencil in her hand, was making calculations, from an ordinance map which hung in the back hall, as to the distance to the nearest river. Several of the other guests were standing about talking in little groups, offering aimless suggestions. One young man had gone off in a two seated car with a pronounced intention of "bringing the young cub home, dead or alive." Joyce, thoroughly serious for once in her life, accosted Paule as he stood upon the broad steps of the entrance porch.

"Have you any theories, Sir Lawrence?" she asked.

"None whatever," he assured her. "My idea was that he had gone for an early morning walk."

"What about his bed not having been slept in?" she reminded him.

"I didn't know that till afterward," Paule admitted. "Perhaps he slept half the night in an easy chair, then decided it was too late to turn in, had a bath, and went off for a walk. I've done such a thing myself before now."

She considered the idea for a moment.

"It isn't like Samuel," she pronounced.

"The young man was naturally unlike himself last night," was the thoughtful reply. "He came round to tell me his good news. I may be permitted, I hope, to wish you every happiness, Lady Joyce."

"Thank you very much," she murmured. "It's a queer start, isn't it?"

"It certainly is," Paule agreed. "However, I don't think you need be so greatly concerned. I cannot bring myself to look upon this disappearance seriously."

"Well, it's comforting to hear you say so, anyway," the girl observed. "Perhaps it's the best thing that could have happened so far as Samuel and I are concerned. I've been over a year making up my mind to marry him, and last night I couldn't sleep a wink for worrying about my promise, and now that he has been snatched away I feel that life has suddenly become a blank. Nonsense apart, Sir Lawrence, he's really not a bad sort, and I should hate to think anything had happened to him."

"Nothing serious has, I am convinced," Paule assured her. "I hope when we meet in town," he went on, watching the approach of his car, "we shall all be able to smile at this morning's disquietude."

Futoy, immaculate in his black livery, brought his long gray car round to the front entrance with a coachmanlike sweep. Paule glanced back into the hall for a moment as he drew on his gloves.

"I am making rather an unceremonious departure," he confided. "I have not been able even to see Lady Judith to say good-by."

"Judith went off to the garage half an hour ago and I haven't seen her since," Joyce told him. "I'll give her the usual messages, if you like."

"Thank you very much. Will you also say I would have stayed willingly if I could have been of the slightest use?"

"Which way are you going up?" she asked him as he stepped into the driving seat.

"Newmarket and Royston, I think," he answered.

He raised his cap and swung off down the avenue. Judith, from the garage, saw him flash by. She turned to the man in keeper's clothes who was standing by her side, holding a motor bicycle.

"There goes the first of our departing guests," she pointed out.

"Who is it?"

"Sir Lawrence Paule."

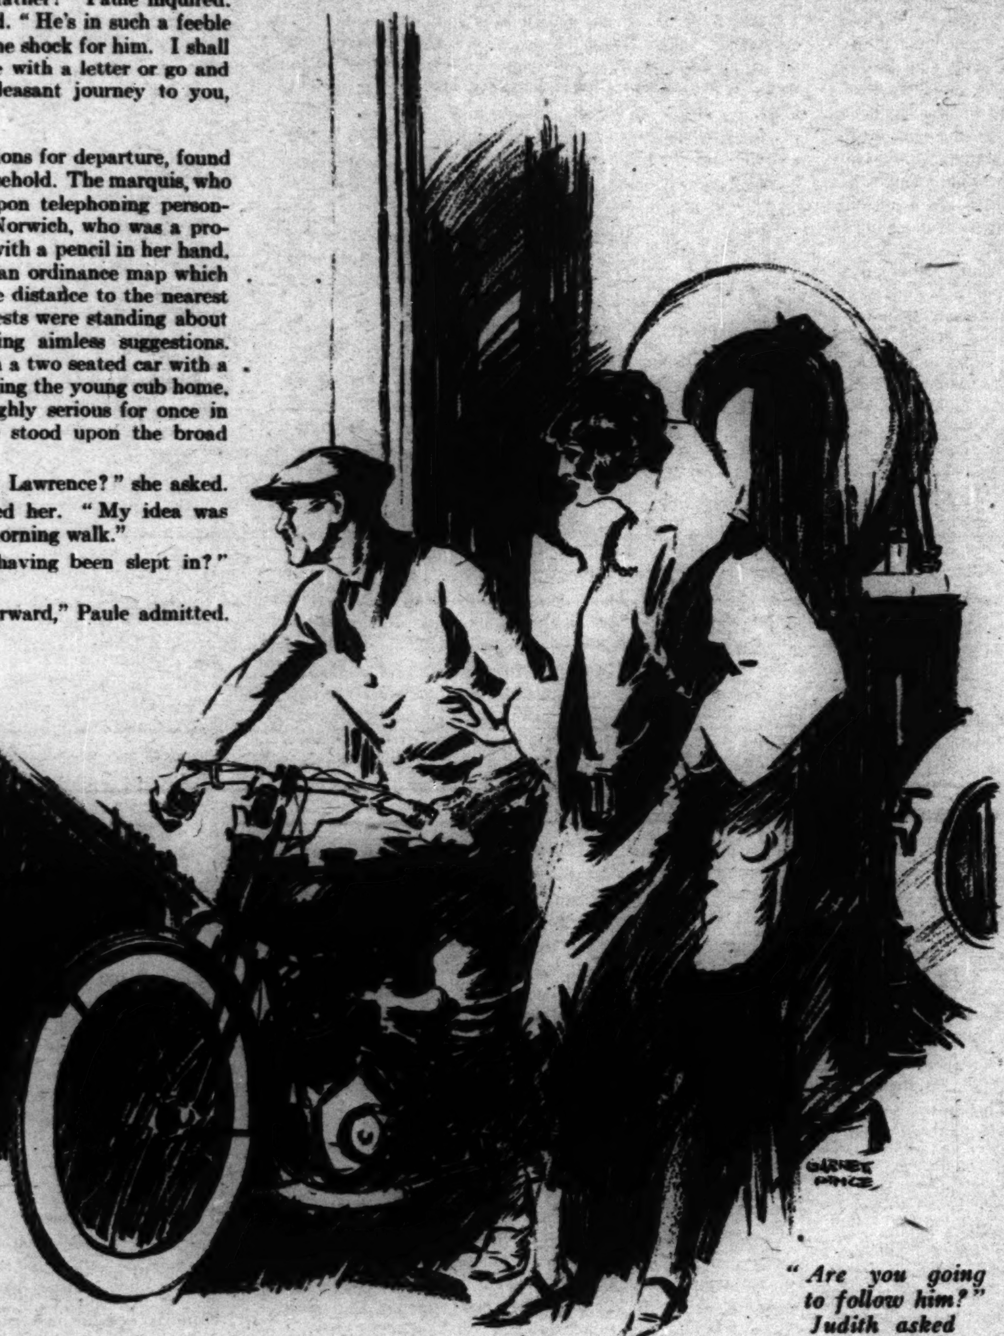
Rodes touched the switch of his bicycle and pushed it clear of the door.

"Aren't you going to follow him?" Judith asked eagerly.

"Yes," was the terse reply.

"But why?" she demanded. "What can you possibly learn from his movements?"

Rodes started his engine.



"Are you going to follow him?" Judith asked eagerly.

"Lady Judith," he said, "I can only remind you of a time when you spoke to me at the top of St. James' street. You advised me, I think, to discard facts and trust to instinct and imagination. We have alluded to the subject since, only a little more fully. I haven't the least idea why, but I have quite made up my mind to follow Sir Lawrence."

"You will never catch him. He confessed to having averaged fifty between Newmarket and here when he came down."

"I can do as much as that," Rodes declared, "and then accelerate a little if I want to. I haven't kept this bicycle here for some months for nothing, Lady Judith. Nor have I played at being an underkeeper for nothing," he added, ruefully. "Every bone in my body aches this morning."

She smiled.

"Never mind, Mr. Rodes," she said, "you looked very nice, and I am sure all this time out of doors must have been very good for you."

"You're positive," he asked, earnestly, "that no one else in this household or any one amongst the guests knew anything about me?"

"Not a soul."

"Not Sir Lawrence, for instance? I have kept carefully out of his sight."

"I am convinced," she assured him, "that Sir Lawrence has not an idea that you were in the neighborhood."

He mounted into the saddle and started off. Already miles ahead of him, Paule was gradually opening his levers.

THE main entrance gates to Honerton Chase, through which Paule passed on leaving the park, opened upon a country by-road which, in about a couple of miles, led into the main road, on the left to Norwich, on the right to Fakenham town. Paule, who had driven slowly through the park to avoid the deer, which were continually crossing the way, increased his speed in the lane, dividing his attention between the road in front and the mirror on his right. Once he spoke to Futoy.

"There is a motor bicycle crossing the park, Futoy," he said. "Look around and tell me which way it turns on leaving the lodge gates."

Futoy watched for a moment or two.

"It follows us, master," he announced.

Paule slackened speed a little, until a small black object appeared in the center of his mirror.

"Were there many motor bicycles in the garage, Futoy?" he asked.

"Only one, master," the man replied. "His lordship dislikes them very much and has forbidden them in the park. This one belonged to one of the beaters, a stranger to the neighborhood. Lady Judith was talking to him this morning."

They were nearing the spot where the lane merged into the high road, and Paule had apparently been preparing to turn toward Norwich, his announced route. At Futoy's words, however, he slowed down still more, looked steadfastly ahead of him for a second or two, as though deep in thought, and then swung round to the right.

"Is it a powerful motor bicycle, Futoy?" he inquired.

"It is the best I ever saw, master," the man replied.

Paule glanced back at the speck in the glass. It was certainly drawing nearer. He touched his accelerator slightly. The road was good but winding. At Fakenham he had almost to pull up in the narrow street down to the railway, and from Raynham to Swaffham again speed was almost impossible. The small black speck was always there. Paule looked at it, frowning. He reduced his pace a little. The motor bicycle came no nearer. From Swaffham to Brandon he drove carefully, passing through Brandon so that even the policeman on duty gave scarcely a second glance at the car. Then he leaned forward with a faint smile. It was a still November morning with a promise of weak sunshine behind the clouds. The air was soft but a trifle damp, the roads dry for the time of the year. In the great open spaces across which they sped hundreds of rabbits were sitting at their holes; there were patches of gorse still in bloom and even thin streaks of heather.

As they neared the village of Barton Mills, where the road merges into the main thoroughfare, Paule, leaning forward, increased the speed of the car until the black speck in the mirror became almost invisible. He turned the corner and suddenly began a slow application of his brakes, bending over to Futoy and giving him brief directions. As they crossed the bridge to the road by the inn Paule brought the car to a standstill, busied himself for a few seconds with the seat which he had vacated, and slipped into the yard of the hotel. Futoy, with the driving wheel in his hand, dashed off in second speed and was out of sight in a moment, whilst Paule entered the bar parlor and stood at the window. In less than two minutes the impatient hooting of a horn was heard, and immediately afterward Rhodes on his motor bicycle swung round into the road and headed for Newmarket, following the car, which was now little more than a speck in the distance. Paule watched both until they were out of sight.

THE twelve miles an hour warning through Newmarket brought the car and the motor bicycle within a reasonable distance of one another, but outside the town, along by the racecourse and galloping ground, the car once more drew away. Rodes, who had owned a motor bicycle for less than a year and hated it, groaned as he leaned over his handles. Nothing was happening as he had expected, and yet he was loath to abandon the chase. The next twenty miles of perfect road he knew would be all against him, notwithstanding which he set his teeth and rode steadily on. The wind had brought the color into his pallid cheeks, but his eyes, even beneath his heavy spectacles, were watering. Every bone in his body seemed aching, every nerve on edge. He kept his mind fixed upon his task, however, and ignored his discomfort. People shouted abuse at him on the main road; abuse to which he scarcely listened. He drew a sigh of relief when his quarry turned off toward Royston—at least these narrower roads gave him some advantage. Nevertheless, for another half hour the car kept its distance, and nothing that he could do seemed able to lessen it. The railway gates stood open and the car seemed to take the crossing in its stride, Rodes, with clenched teeth, following.

The chase, so far as he was concerned, was beginning to be a grim one. The perspiration was streaming down his face; the hands which gripped his handles felt numb. Amongst the leaves of the trees there seemed to be not a breath of wind, yet his cheeks burned as though with the surge of a tempest. There was a mist in front of his spectacles. Every now and then with care he had to remove them with one hand and make an effort at wiping them. At Royston the car passed through the bottle neck contraction by the inn at such a pace that the policeman, whose back had been turned for a moment, shouted angrily after it. Rodes, too, came in for his abuse, but he gained a little on the hill toward the downs. For a few more miles the speed seemed to be ever increasing. They passed some racehorses on the common as though they were standing still; Baldock in a few minutes became only a memory—and then came, at last, relief. Half way to Stevenage Rodes, rocking in his seat, became conscious that the car in front was growing larger. He took off his spectacles for a moment and gave a little gasp. It had drawn to the side of the road and was stopping. He shut off his own engine and made a clumsy descent. Gripping one of the handles, he stood leaning over the saddle in the middle of the road, gazing into Futoy's impassive face.

"The gentleman needs something?" Futoy asked courteously as he lit a cigaret.

"Where is your master?" Rodes demanded.

"Not with me today," Futoy replied cheerfully. "I drive the car alone."

"Your master started with you from Honerton Chase," Rodes declared, wheeling the bicycle up to the side of the car.

"It is quite true," was the grave assent. "My master he forgot something. He went back."

Rodes looked at the hat lying in the bottom of the car and the deep seats and knew at once how he had been tricked. The fact, however, that such a deception had been indulged in was like a tonic to him.

"When did your master leave the car?" he persisted.

FUTOY blew out a little cloud of smoke.

"I am good English servant," he announced. "I do not answer questions about my master. He leave the car when he choose."

Rodes wiped the perspiration from his face, and removed his cap. Great though the disappointment at the immediate result of his chase, it was ecstasy to be standing still, and to realize that at last he was on the track of unexplained things.

"Look here," he said, "you speak English quite well?"

"I speak English perfect," Futoy replied with dignity. "I understand, too."

"Then listen," Rodes continued. "I am a policeman. I am from Scotland Yard. I have followed you in pursuit of my duties. If you would avoid trouble, tell me where your master left the car."

Futoy shook his head.

"That talk not very good," he objected. "My master is my master. I know nothing about the police. I do not know whether you tell me the truth. It does not matter. I do as my master orders and I do well. My master returned because he had [illegible] something."

"What are you doing here by the side of the [illegible]" the inspector asked. "And why have you been [illegible]ing so fast?"

"This car he is very powerful," Futoy [illegible]. "And if you want to know, I stopped by the [illegible] the road just because I enjoy a cigaret. My [illegible] told me 'no hurry.' I reach London now by [illegible] one. That very good time."

"Are you fond of money?" Rodes asked [illegible]

"Good money I love," Futoy replied. "Bad [illegible] I spit upon."

"What do you call bad money?" Rodes [illegible]

"Money which comes from those who ask [illegible]tions about my master," was the calm rejoinder.

"I don't mean a little money; I mean a great [illegible] of money," Rodes continued desperately.

"I am not English," Futoy said. "There are [illegible] other things in life besides money. My master [illegible] my life in Bangkok. You offer me the money [illegible] that house we have been staying in, and my [illegible] shake his head, and I say no."

Rodes wiped his face again, and lit a cigaret [illegible] own account.

"You not very good with motor bicycle," [illegible] remarked sympathetically. "You leave it [illegible] I drive you to London. My master not mind [illegible]"

"Thank you," Rodes answered. "I am not [illegible] to London just yet."

Futoy nodded, settled himself down in his seat, [illegible] touched his starting pedal.

"Very well," he acquiesced. "I wish you [illegible] morning, mister. You ride carefully going back. [illegible] ride much too fast."

Rodes leaned on his bicycle and watched [illegible] once more disappear. He was fatigued, yet [illegible] exultant. Somewhere in the distance loomed [illegible] shadow of new things.

BEYOND THE DETOUR - - - - - - - - - - - -

By Edwin Balmer

open he encountered some one. It was a man, and Tom grasped him. The man pushed back and swore, and Tom felt him struggling to free an arm. He was trying to get at a revolver, Tom realized; and he grappled the man closer, pinning his arms. They tripped and went down, and the door to the kitchen shut and they were in the dark.

They kicked a wall to the right and rolled against another wall to the left as they fought. They were in the narrow end of a hallway where was so little light that Tom could not see, except as a patch of gray, the face which was almost against him. He could feel against his breast and between him and the man he wrestled a hard object on his right, which was the other man's left; and he could feel that the right arm, which fought his grasp for freedom, tried to reach for this; and he knew enough to realize that the hard lump was a shoulder holster in which must be a revolver.

The man kept trying for this with his right arm, which was so strong that it wrenched free from Tom's grasp time and again; but each time Tom caught the arm before it got to the holster. The fellow's left arm seemed weaker, and from this Tom was sure that he was Len Foster.

In the flash of the light when the door had been open and before they went down in each other's arms Tom had seen merely that this was another man, tall as himself, and heavier. He had seen that this man, too, had been in flight, as had the fellow who had run into the alley. Two had been here; and were they all? As he fought for his life Tom listened, and the lack of sound, other than his own breathing and Foster's and the hit of their heels against the walls and the floor, at first encouraged him. No one else was here; two men had been all! But Elizabeth Kane ought to be here; there should be some sound from her.

SHE must be here, and it must be, then, that they had silenced her! And this man with the strong right hand, Len Foster, must have done it or shared in the silencing of her. That strong right hand tore away again; and again, with doubled strength, Tom caught it. They rolled over gasping; they hugged each other; they beat each other against the floor and wall. They paused, panting, tightly clutched together. Not for a second did they really rest; both were on guard, trying for a surprise, guarding against surprise from the other.

In the pauses was silence; no one else moved in the flat.

Suddenly, at the end of a pause, that strong right hand wrenched once more out of Tom's grasp; he clutched for it, to keep it away from that holster; but now he failed to grasp it; for the hand did not try for the holster; it seized Tom's throat. He tried to toss it aside; he tore at the hand, but it held tighter and choked him. He could not breathe, and his lungs seemed breaking; he pushed and beat with his free hand; he beat Len Foster's breast, and his hand went in under Len Foster's coat and caught the holster and the revolver in it. He pulled the revolver out, and Len Foster's left hand fought with him while that strong right hand held his throat. But his finger found the trigger, and he pulled and pulled.

The explosions thudded in his throbbing ears, beating like a more tremendous pulse. . . . He rested in blackness with pounding in his ears. The steady bump, bump became the impact of freight cars bumping aboard a ferry; the agony of his lungs was from effort of leaping up a mountainside to his cabin, where a girl with lovely, level eyes awaited him beside a table spread with fresh baked bread and yellow butter and honey, and upon the table was the standard of the old Roman legions, S. P. Q. R.

He realized that he was resting upon a bed in a small, gaudily papered room. A bluecoat was beside him and asking, "Gettin' the air good now?"

Tom nodded and remembered his fight with Len Foster and remembered Elizabeth Kane. "That girl," he said to the bluecoat, "that girl I brought here——"

"She's O.K." said the policeman. "She's been in here; she's comin' back in a minute."

"That man Foster," said Tom, "Foster——"

"We found Foster," said the officer. "He's dead. Here's her now." And the bluecoat moved from the room.

Elizabeth Kane appeared, and the sight of her thrilled him. She was safe! But how slowly she came; how red her eyes were; how her lips trembled. She had been crying. Of course; because her love, Len Foster, for whom she had come to Chicago with Tom Helmstead, was dead; and Tom remembered the pulls of the trigger. He must have killed Foster.

Why had he? Why had he not let Len Foster run out into the alley after the fellow who had escaped? Elizabeth Kane had not been hurt; here she was, safe. She had only been crying. He asked, "Where were you?"

SHE came to him as he half sat up, and she touched his forehead with her gentle hand. "I was here 'til I was sure you were all right; then I went away for a minute."

"I mean, where were you before?"

"They'd tied me," she told him. "They'd shut me in a closet."

"That's all they did to you?"

"That's all."

Tom let himself down on his elbow in despair. He thought, "And for that I had to kill Len Foster instead of letting him go." He thought, "I've done the one thing to spoil everything." By this everything he meant his dream which had been developing in him ever since he first found this girl. He realized now that, from their meeting, he had meant to possess her; he had never intended to give her up to Len Foster, or any one else; he had come with her to take her from Foster, when she had done what she had to do. Tom thought if he had let Foster live he could have won her; but after he had killed her lover what now could he do?

He felt himself without starting point again, and without goal; he felt himself without roots [illegible] as he had been before.

"Foster's dead, they say."

Her hand drew away. "Yes; he's dead."

"I killed him, I suppose. But I had to." [illegible] that, when he struggled upon the floor, he [illegible] to shoot; but why had he stopped Foster at [illegible]

"You?" she said. "What do you mean?"

"Didn't I kill him?"

"The man you fought with? No. The [illegible] him. You held him till they came. But [illegible] kill him."

"What? He wasn't Foster?"

"Len," she said, "Len was shot on the [illegible] robbery. He'd been living here with two [illegible] they brought him back here. He told the [illegible] lived here that no one knew where he lived. [illegible] hurt, you see, and he knew they'd leave him [illegible] found that even I knew. Len died this [illegible] fore we came. The others let me in, and [illegible] One got away and you fought the other till [illegible] came. The woman downstairs had been [illegible] this flat, and when I came she recognized [illegible] called the police."

Tom was strong again. "Then I didn't [illegible] Len!"

"He was not mine. He loved me since [illegible] boy. When I was a girl I thought I loved [illegible] always wanted me to marry him. He wanted [illegible] me to Chicago with him; but I couldn't [illegible] him. Yet I couldn't help feeling responsible [illegible] don't you see?"

"Then you never did really love him?"

"I've never really loved any one—yet."

Tom held out his arms; he felt strong [illegible] his life before; he felt rooted; he felt the [illegible] a true, founded starting place; he felt the [illegible] of a goal. "That's all right, then," he [illegible] claimed her. "That's all right."

The afternoon newspapers, of course, [illegible] of the pathetic death of the red haired [illegible] had carried the watch, and who had lied to [illegible] panions for fear they would desert him; [illegible] much of the coming of the girl of the [illegible] with her, Tom Helmstead. It made news to [illegible] graphed from coast to coast, and even to [illegible] few paragraphs, under the sea. Accordingly, [illegible] Tom's doings reached not only his father [illegible] the next morning, but was spread before his [illegible] when she opened the Paris edition of the [illegible] daily. Immediately she cabled to her son: "[illegible] at once, are you safe?"

To which she received reply: "Safe and [illegible] mendously happy." Which was not clear at [illegible] though there was a word in the message which [illegible] had known more—would have perfectly [illegible] This word was the name of the northern [illegible] telegraph office at which the cablegram [illegible] nated, and which was the nearest office to [illegible] beyond the detour.

HERE'S THE PLACE BUT I DON'T SEE ANYTHING- ONLY SAND AND A FUNNY-LOOKING SPOTTED STONE ABOUT AS BIG AS A FLAT-IRON-AND A STONE COULDN'T JUMP INTO THE CREEK ALL BY ITSELF- GUESS I JUST THOUGHT I HEARD SOMETHING-YOW!
LEAPIN' LIZARDS! THAT STONE'S GOT LEGS AND A MOUTH AND EVERYTHING- LEGGO! HEY!! OW!!!
